VOICE OF '32 IN RADIO DEBATE

LANDON FORCES ROOSEVELT INTO DEFENSIVE PLEA

President Hides His Leftist Plans.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

With Gov. Alf M. Landon aggressively pressing the Republican indictment of the New Deal for actual and potential detriment to the country and with President Roosevelt forced upon the defensive, the presidential race now goes into the home stretch. Two weeks from Tuesday the balloting that will shape the course of the nation in the immediate future, if not for generations, will take place.

More and more the supreme issue crystallizes into the question whether we shall continue on our leftward road with Mr. Roosevelt toward a collectivist economy with a permanent army of government of supported unemployed, with prodigal spending and increasing inflation or shall turn to the right with Gov. Landon to regain our traditional individualism, balance the budget and banish unemployment with jobs under free, private enterprise for profit.

Between 'Haves' and 'Have Nots.

More and more the line of cleavage between the millions supporting Gov. Landon and the millions backing the President is shadowed forth as one between the "haves" and the "have nots." Business men, farmers and other owners of property, whether it be a home, a savings bank deposit, a bond or a life insurance policy, who foresee the crushing burden of New Deal taxes, those whose property would be swept away by the inflation inseparable from continued government spending beyond income, are overwhelmingly arrayed behind Gov. Landon.

Those who have no such stake in the American nation as a going and prosperous concern, those who have lost faith in the capitalistic system and those who are content to live permanently on the dole, are enlisted overwhelmingly under the leadership of President Roosevelt.

The huge and unprecedented registration of voters in almost every state outside the solid south, where a national election is only a formality, indicates the depths to which the country is being stirred by the momentous decision confronting it.

Conclusion Hazardous.

The phenomenon is reminiscent of the tremendous registration of 1928 when the religious issue brought to the polls millions who never had voted before. To draw conclusions from the enormous registration this time would be hazardous. The increase is as pronounced in the big cities, where Mr. Roosevelt finds preponderant strength as in the rural regions where Gov. Landon is the stronger.

Equally foolhardy would be a prediction at this time of the outcome of the balloting. Although there are numerous and impressive indications that Gov. Landon will be the winner, it is wholly possible that the events of the last fortnight of the canvass and a more accurate gauging of the currents of public opinion will place an entirely different face upon the matter.

Both party managements are beginning to put forth the usual sweeping claims of victory. James A. Farley predicts a landslide for Roosevelt, conceding only three states to Landon — Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont. That would be an even greater victory than 1932 when Mr. Roosevelt carried all but six states. John Hamilton is more moderate and less definite. If he expects a landslide for Landon he is not saying so. He merely opines that Gov. Landon will carry all the states east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and enough states west of the Mississippi to give the Republican candidate a comfortable majority.

Digest Poll Favors Landon.

The air is thick with the straws of straw votes. The Literary Digest, which has forecast three presidential elections with uncanny certainty, has polled nearly 2,000,000 voters up to date, of whom somewhat more than a million are for Gov. Landon, somewhat more than three quarters of a million for Roosevelt, a result which translated into electoral votes indicates 370 Republican and 161 Democratic. The only other national poll, Dr. Gallup's, indicates a Roosevelt victory.

VANDENBERG, ON AIR, HITS BACK AT ROOSEVELT

Finds His Promises Broken.

BY PERCY WOOD.

One of the strangest debates in political history was staged last night between Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] and the 1932 campaign voice of Franklin D. Roosevelt. The President's voice from the past was laden with honeyed promises, while the Vandenburg baritone boomed out his criticisms of Roosevelt's 1936 performance.

This drama of a voice from the past being debated by an accusing voice of the present was presented in a radio broadcast from a room in the Medinah club. The President's voice was broadcast by means of an orthophonic record and to each 1932 pledge Senator Vandenberg made his answers with a relentless exposition of the New Deal's failures to keep the promise.

Broadcast Partially Blocked.

This unique program was concluded despite a partial blocking of the broadcast, due to action by officials of the Columbia Broadcasting system, with the result that stations throughout the east and the central west were cut off and their listeners denied the program.

This, explained Columbia officials, was because of a violation of a rule that no recordings or electrical transcriptions are permitted over their network. The Mutual Broadcasting system, however, carried the full half-hour program over station W-G-N.

There was a strange "off again, on again" maneuver in the Columbia network. Just before the broadcast started it was announced it was off for violation of rules. Then suddenly it was switched on for many of the stations. Later, on some of these stations, came the cold voice of the announcer: "This program must be discontinued. Miss Somebody will play a piano selection." Swing music interrupted "the voice of 1932."

Columbia Offers Explanation.

Two hours after the interrupted broadcast, CBS issued a statement saying:

"H. Leslie Atlass, vice president in charge of the Columbia Broadcasting Company Chicago office, learned 10 minutes before Senator Vandenburg was due to go on the air from Chicago, that Columbia's policy against broadcasting phonograph records or electrical transcriptions over the network was to be violated.

"Unable to dissuade those in charge of the broadcasting from their purpose, Mr. Atlass decided not to carry the broadcast and ordered an announcement made to that effect.

Radio Official Reconsiders.

"In the two minutes before Senator Vandenberg was to go on the air, Mr. Atlass reconsidered and decided to allow the broadcast to proceed rather than to deprive listeners of the speech.

"For that reason the announcement from Chicago that the speech would not be carried was immediately succeeded by the broadcast itself.

"Meantime, before Mr. Atlass could flash word to the master control room in New York that he had changed his orders, New York had cut off the network WABC and a number of other stations under its immediate switching control.

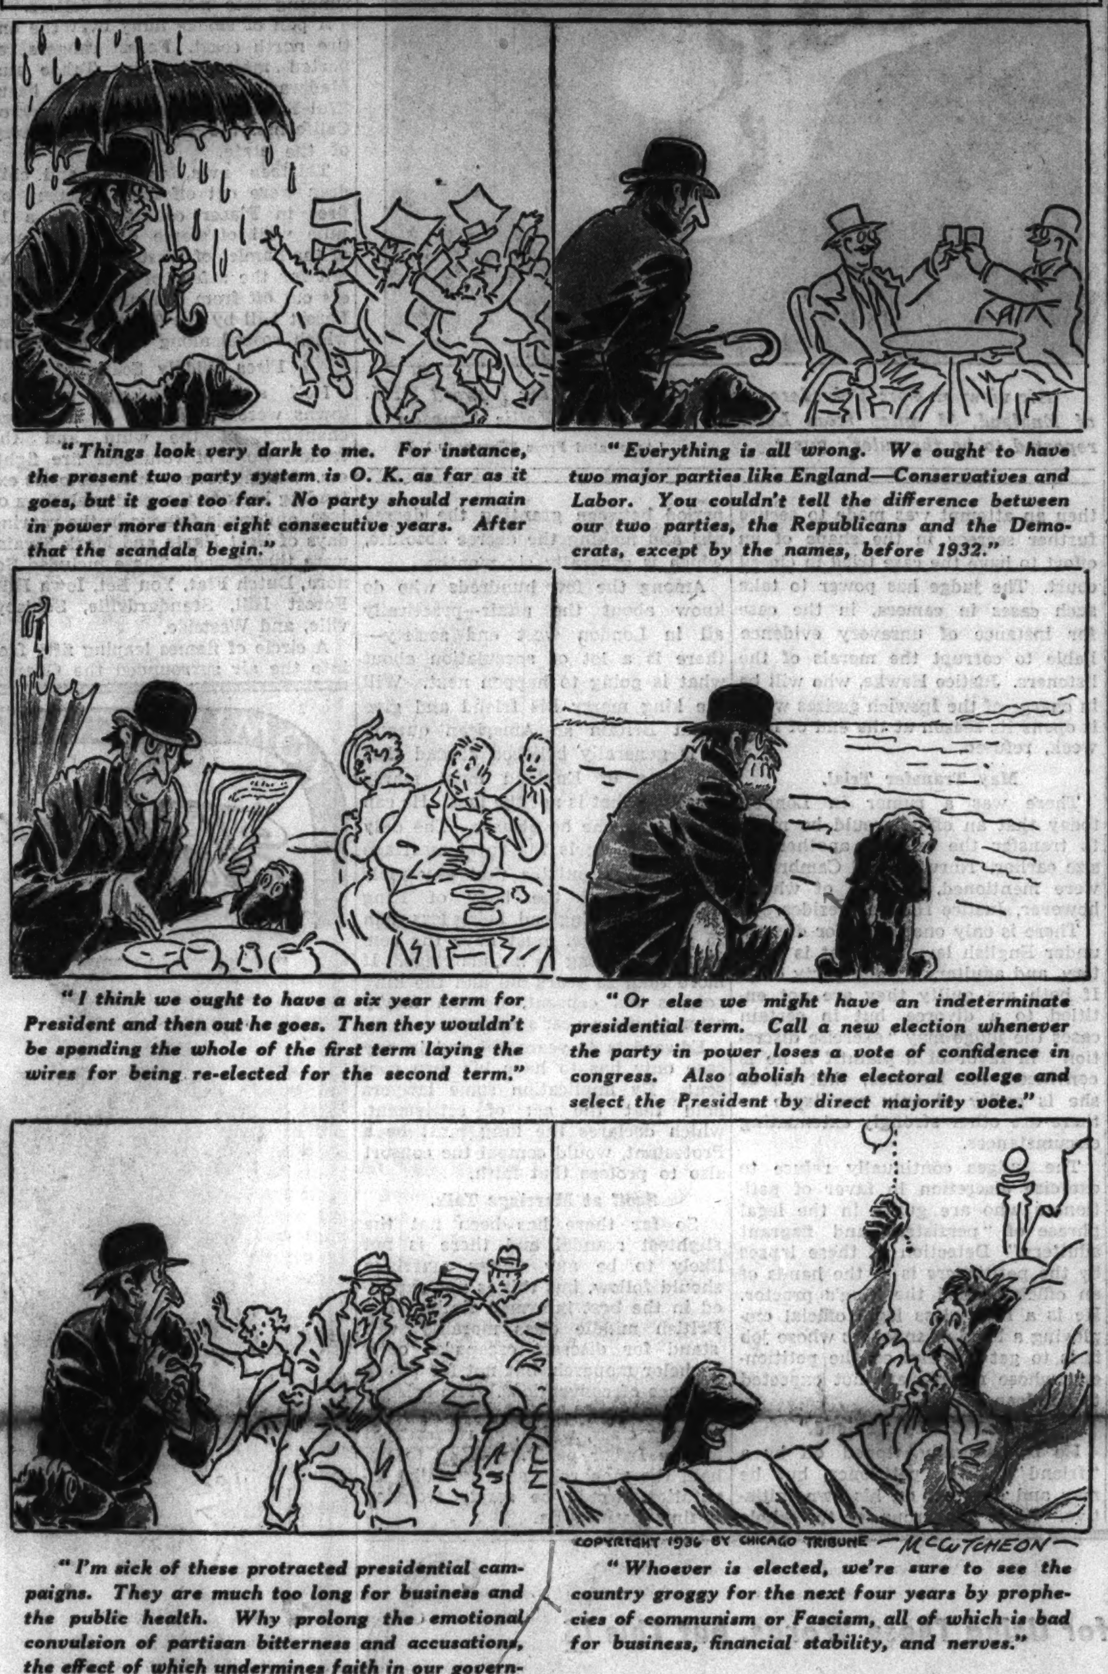
MR. LUGUBRIOUS BLUE ON THE STATE OF THE NATION



"Things look very dark to me. For instance, the present two party system is O. K. as far as it goes, but it goes too far. No party should remain in power more than eight consecutive years. After that the scandals begin."

"Everything is all wrong. We ought to have two major parties like England—Conservatives and Labor. You couldn't tell the difference between our two parties, the Republicans and the Democrats, except by the names, before 1932."

"I think we ought to have a six year term for President and then out he goes. Then they wouldn't be spending the whole of the first term laying the wires for being re-elected for the second term."

"Or else we might have an indeterminate presidential term. Call a new election whenever the party in power loses a vote of confidence in congress. Also abolish the electoral college and select the President by direct majority vote."

"I'm sick of these protracted presidential campaigns. They are much too long for business and the public health. Why prolong the emotional convulsion of partisan bitterness and accusations, the effect of which undermines faith in our government?"

"Whoever is elected, we're sure to see the country groggy for the next four years by prophecies of communism or Fascism, all of which is bad for business, financial stability, and nerves."

Rebels Pound at Madrid; Air Battle Rages

The aerial counterattack followed upon an attempt by Fascists planes to destroy vital government railroad communications from Madrid to Valencia, on the Mediterranean coast. Sections of track were reported to have been blasted apart.

Severance of this railway would leave the Madrid-Valencia highway as the only avenue of escape for hard pressed government leaders. Food supplies from the Mediterranean virtually would be cut off from Madrid.

Heavy government reinforcements were thrown into this sector in an effort to block the insurgent thrust. Truckloads of troops were rushed from Aranjuez and Villasequilla to defend the railway after the insurgents had succeeded in advancing to Mocejon, about 8 miles from Castilejo, under a screen of heavy artillery fire.

Shell Armored Train.

NAVALCARNERO, Spain, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Fascist insurgents pounded government lines tonight along much of the battlefront west and southwest of Madrid.

The Fascists were strung out in a shallow arc extending from Robledo de Chavela, about 30 miles west of Madrid, toward Illescas, about 22 miles south of the capital.

Retreat in One Sector.

At Illescas, on the Toledo-Madrid highway, the government militiamen took strong defensive positions after withdrawing up that road when the crossroad from Valmojado to Yuncos was endangered.

[A Portuguese newspaper report said the rebels had captured Illescas.]

From the edge of this town of Navalcarnero, about 20 miles southwest of Madrid, the bursting of shells was clearly visible in the southwest as government soldiers recovered part of yesterday's losses, pushing to within 1½ miles of Valmojado.

Madrid Admits Retreat.

MADRID, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Pounded by three major insurgent offensives, government militiamen fought desperately tonight to halt the ring of

REVIVE GOSSIP KING INTENDS TO MARRY 'WALLY'

London Hears She Is Edward's Guest.

Story of Friendship

A vivid story of the close friendship between King Edward VIII., Great Britain's bachelor monarch, and Mrs. Ernest (Wally) Simpson, who has sued her husband for divorce, appears in today's Graphic section. It tells why the finger of gossip is pointed at Edward, new to the throne and yet uncrowned, who enjoys the companionship of the most talked of woman in the world today.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Friends of Mrs. Wallis [Wally] Simpson talked more than ever tonight about the possibility of a royal romance when they heard reports the American woman again was a guest of King Edward VIII. at his country estate 35 miles west of London near Windsor castle.

The name of the king's resting place is Fort Belvedere, where the monarch has been accustomed to seek relaxation from his duties.

Conjecture over whether King Edward might exert his personal will over the sentiment of his subjects and marry outside the pale of royalty was revived when Mr. Justice Hawke was reported to have held private conferences on the setting of a date for hearing Mrs. Simpson's divorce suit filed against her husband, Ernest, a shipping broker.

May Hear Case Oct. 27.

The suit was filed in Ipswich court, where the assizes are scheduled to begin next Saturday. The judge sometimes set dates for cases on the docket ahead of time, but there was no public session of the Ipswich court today. This, however, was said not to be unusual, the court attachés privately expressed belief the case might come up Tuesday, Oct. 27.

There was every indication the hearing would be speedy and perfunctory. The only possible grounds for divorce in England is adultery. This allegation could be testified to in a few moments, it was pointed out, and the hearing summarily closed.

Royal Rebuff for Advisers.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—[U. P.]—King Edward VIII. hotly rebuffed spiritual and political leaders when they appealed recently for greater discretion in the monarch's relations with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, according to new gossip in court circles today.

The leaders — including the archbishop of Canterbury and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin—were told by King Edward to mind their own business, it was said. The reported interview took place at Buckingham palace.

Court gossip is that the archbishop of Canterbury and Baldwin were astounded when Edward, lips twitching nervously in an attempt to conceal his anger, delivered the royal snubbing.

Becomes a Storm Center.

The purported incident at the palace was the climax to a series of discreet but increasingly pressing similar representations. Mrs. Simpson became the storm center of these objections in high places, the rumblings of which became increasingly louder.

Sources close to court circles revealed that King Edward's recent correspondence has included letters from working men commenting on Mrs. Simpson's frequent invitations to royal residences.

The letters have added to the increasing embarrassment of court officials over the growing evidence of the king's determination to abandon numerous Victorian court traditions in favor of the more modern American conception of democratic social intercourse.

Court officials were perturbed because the letters gave a clear indication that the frequent appearance of Mrs. Simpson's name in the court circular is arousing the interest of the man in the street, whereas it was confined hitherto to higher social circles.

King's Entourage Alarmed.

This fulfills the fears of the king's entourage, which pleaded vainly with him to cancel instructions that Mrs. Simpson's visits to Buckingham palace be made publicly known.

It is understood that officials arranging for Edward's coronation next

BROTHERS WHO WED SISTERS REVEAL HOW TO ATTAIN HARMONY

Hollis, Okla., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Do you want to get along with your "in-laws?"

Then:

Love them.

Rejoice in their joys.

Share their sorrows.

Avoid jealousy by purchasing identical things.

That's the advice of the two brothers who married two sisters and dwell happily in twin houses, use a single bank account and operate a joint bakery business—after nearly 25 years together.

The four took an equal part in handing out the advice. Here's the way they looked at it:

NEAL WARD—"Love each other? Why, we have always been buddies since childhood, my brother and I."

MRS. CARL WARD—"We get along peaceably because, just as do the members of only one family, we love each other, rejoice in each others' joys, and a sorrow to one is as great as if a sorrow were our own."

CARL WARD—"There was never any room for jealousies because we always had the same things."

MRS. NEAL WARD—"We have so many things in common we don't tire of each other's company."

Stork Derby for $750,000 Nears Finish

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 17.—(AP)—They readied the bassinet tonight for Mrs. Grace Bagnato's twenty-fourth bambino; and a dizzy stork wheeled wearily into the final fortnight of Toronto's baby Derby.

Mrs. Bagnato's twenty-fourth offspring—"The doctor tells me it should be all over by Monday"—will probably be the stork's final contribution to the childbearing marathon. The bench and the barristers can pick it up from there.

Mrs. Kenny Claims Lead.

Mrs. Mathew Kenny, however, insisted tonight that the stork would make one more stop at her house before the executors of Charles Vance Millar's "uncommon and capricious" will close the books at midnight Oct. 31 and go into a huddle. Her last child was born eight and one-half months ago and lived only a few hours.

Mrs. Kenny believes all other Toronto mothers are just wasting their time, so far as winning the prize of $750,000 [estimated] is concerned. She insists that she has borne an even dozen babies that qualify under clause 10 of the Millar will, which says:

"All the rest of my property I give to the mother who at the expiration of ten years from my death has given birth in Toronto to the greatest number of children as shown by the registration under the vital statistics act."

May Be a Tie.

If Mrs. Kenny is unable to back up her claims by records at the bureau of vital statistics, then the race may become a photo-finish, with three—and probably four—mothers tied with ten qualifiers each.

The baby Mrs. Bagnato is expecting "almost any minute" will be her tenth in the ten year period. Should she bear twins, she would become the leader, excepting Mrs. Kenny. All of Mrs. Bagnato's 23 children, however, have been single births.

The reason so much interest is centering upon the three "mothers of ten" is that many people believe Mrs. Kenny may have trouble in proving her claims. The 33 year old mother, however, insists there will be "plenty of proof" at the proper time.

Contract Boys Are Active.

The ubiquitous "sign right here" fellows are becoming more and more active as the showdown nears. Today Mrs. Bagnato received an offer to go on the stage at a salary of $25 a day.

Mrs. Bagnato hung up the telephone receiver with a sigh.

"Twenty-five dollars is a lot of money," she said. "We could use it. But somehow—me appearing on the stage before people—it just doesn't seem the right thing. I'm no actor. Still, $25 is a lot of money——" spring are in a quandary over the king's decision and determination to obtain the best available place for Mrs. Simpson to see the ceremony.

And 23 is a lot of babies.

Court circles recalled similar incidents previously, notably on the occasion of the reading in St. James's courtyard of the proclamation of Edward as king. Despite their protests that the room was urgently needed, startled officials were ordered to vacate a room overlooking the court yard.

King Clashes with Advisers.

It was only one or numerous clashes of opinion between the royal advisers who advocate old fashioned "discretion" and the king, with his modern views.

Until the visits of Mrs. Simpson to Buckingham palace and the more recent Mediterranean vacation with her as the king's guest had been deliberately published by order of the king himself despite the opposition of his advisers, the latter adopted a tutorial and tactful attitude of tolerance. They professed a paternal, understanding of the king's heart affairs and strove hard to conceal the shock to their Victorian ideals.

They felt the futility of trying to alter the easy going ways of a man who has won the heart of millions as well as the necessity of holding their jobs.

LONDON PAPER SAYS KING MAY WED BY SPRING

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 18.—[Sunday.]—The Sunday Referee is publishing today an article on the first page under the heading, "The King May Marry by Spring." It thus breaks a censorship which the press has imposed on itself since it was learned that Mrs. Ernest Simpson, friend of King Edward VIII., is about to divorce her husband. The article reads as follows:

"For the last fortnight applications have been pouring in from hotels, dressmakers, caterers, bunting merchants, souvenir factories, and many other trades to insure against postponement of the coronation. Insurance policies of this type have been taken out by businesses to which postponement would inevitably cause a loss ever since the coronation date was announced last May.

"Thousands of policies were placed at the rate of 4 guineas per cent [or $21 for $500 worth of insurance]—the chances of postponement were slender. But within the last day or so rumors from abroad have grown that the king is to marry before next May. If that were so, postponement would be inevitable. And on those rumors so much business has been placed that the rate has risen to £26 5 shillings [or $131.25 for $500 worth of insurance.]"

"LAST ROUNDUP" AUTHOR IS SUED FOR HALF MILLION

New York, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Claim to a half share in the $500,000 or more he said William J. [Billy] Hill, author of "The Last Roundup," had made from five songs was made today in federal court by Morrill Geiger of San Marcos, Cal.

Suing for an accounting of Hill's profits, Geiger said the song writer last April sold him a half interest in "When I Hear You Say I Love You" and "As Long as I Have You," and the privilege of selecting three others of his songs from which he also was to get half the profits.

The Californian said he had picked "The Last Roundup," "The Old Covered Bridge," and "The Old Spinning Mill."

Butchers and Teamsters Strike on Pacific Coast

The issue is union recognition.

"Worthy of Your Confidence"

ENGLAND KEEPS DIVORCE OF KING'S FRIEND A SECRET

News of Mrs. Simpson's Suit Suppressed.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Not more than a few hundred of the 500,000,000 subjects of King Edward VIII. of England know anything about the suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Wallis [Wally] Simpson, who has been the king's closest woman friend for the last three years, against her husband, Ernest Simpson. Furthermore, not more than a few thousand ever heard Mrs. Simpson's name or know of her existence.

The secrecy which surrounds the divorce suit is confined to England and the empire, for it has been publicized widely in the United States and on the European continent. The methods by which English scandal is avoided are an excellent example of how, without official censorship, voluntary censorship is imposed by the newspapers on themselves in any matter which may be regarded as of national importance, as for instance any scandal which might involve the name of the sovereign.

The facts have been in the possession of every London newspaper for days, but not one word appeared in print. The Newspaper Proprietors' Association, Ltd., agreed that not one word will appear in the British press, not even the record of the fact of the divorce, which is a permitted publication under the divorce reports' act.

Act as Lawyers for Both.

There may be some significance in the fact that Mrs. Simpson's firm of solicitors, Theodore Goddard & Co., also is the legal adviser to the Newspaper Proprietors' association.

Until recently all divorce actions had to be tried in the high court of London. However, a few years ago, owing to congestion in the court and inconvenience for the litigants, the local assize courts were allowed to take this business. It was, however, in practice confined to pauper cases and cases in which real hardship was involved in bringing divorce cases to the high court in London.

Owing to the frequency of that class of business some local assize courts became known among divorce lawyers as paupers' courts. The chief among these was Ipswich, which, owing to its proximity to London, got the bulk of the divorce business of London's poor.

Become Tenants of a Cottage.

In the ordinary way application would be made to the high court of London for transfer to Ipswich, but in this case, pursuing evidently a long thought out plan, the Simpsons became tenants of a cottage in the Ipswich assize area which gave them easier access to this secluded court. The case then was entered on the judge's list simply as W. Simpson against E. Simpson and another.

There was a leak in London, however. The news reached the press, and got to the papers abroad. Even then an attempt was made to secure further secrecy in the shape of an effort to have the case tried in closed court. The judge has power to take such cases in camera, in the case for instance of unsavory evidence liable to corrupt the morals of the listeners. Justice Hawke, who will be in charge of the Ipswich assizes when it opens its season at the end of next week, refused.

May Transfer Trial.

There was a rumor in London today that an effort would be made to transfer the trial to another assize earlier. Norwich and Cambridge were mentioned, in both of which, however, Justice Hawke presides.

There is only one cause for divorce under English law, and that is adultery, and adultery by one party only. If both are guilty they are not entitled to a divorce, but in certain cases the judge may "exercise discretion" in favor of a plaintif if he is convinced, for instance, that he or she is guilty of only one lapse or there are other strongly extenuating circumstances.

The judges continually refuse to exercise discretion in favor of petitioners who are guilty in the legal phrase of "persistent and flagrant adultery." Detection of these lapses by the petitioners is in the hands of an official called the king's proctor. He is a high class legal official employing a band of snoopers whose job it is to get the dirt on the petitioners, whose records are not expected to be clean.

Tipped Off by "Friend."

He is generally tipped off by a "friend" of the petitioner, but he may and does act on his own initiative. He is dangerous for the whole period between granting the decree nisi and making the decree absolute, which is generally six months.

Among the few hundreds who do know about the affair—practically all in London west end society—there is a lot of speculation about what is going to happen next. Will the king marry his friend and give Great Britain an American queen? It is generally believed abroad that the king of England must marry royalty. That is not the fact. He can marry any one he pleases. The only law governing is the royal marriage act which stipulates that any male descendant of the body of King George II. of England, being less than 25 years of age, must have the consent of the king to his marriage. If more than 25 years old and the king refuses his consent, he can marry after giving a year's notice.

Edward is 42 years old and in any case only has to have his own consent. By implication some lawyers hold that the act of settlement, which declares the king must be a Protestant, would compel the consort also to profess that faith.

Scoff at Marriage Talk.

So far there has been not the slightest scandal and there is not likely to be any unless marriage should follow, but this is not expected in the best informed circles. The British middle class morality will stand for discreet escapades of a bachelor monarch, but not for public defiance of conventions. The aristocracy, too, would be furious. Even the working class, which, as represented by the Labor party, wishing to uphold the monarchy as a Socialist institution, would be sorely troubled to find justification.

THOUSANDS FIGHT CALIFORNIA FIRE; 3 DEAD IN FLAMES

Property Damage Mounts Into Millions of Dollars.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Thousands of men were fighting a score of fires that roared through timber and brush in widely scattered sections of northern California today after taking a toll of three lives, and property damage running into millions of dollars.

A pall of smoke hung over the entire north coast. Forest rangers reported major fires in Tahoe and Madera national forests and beautiful Yosemite valley, picture park of California, the worst in the history of the state.

Thirteen men, women, and children were cut off from rescuers by fires in Placer county where a 15 mile wall of flame destroyed most of the hamlet of Westville. Fear was felt for the safety of 200 CCC workers cut off from communication with Forest Hill by the Tahoe forest blaze which roared along a 14 mile front.

Fires Widely Scattered.

Half a dozen widely scattered towns were saved only by a sudden changing of the wind and the valiant work of volunteer fire fighters. Mining towns, their histories extending back to the gold rush days of 1849, and made famous in the roaring days of Bret Harte and Mark Twain, were threatened. These included Sonora, Dutch Flat, You Bet, Iowa Hill, Forest Hill, Standardville, Soulsbyville, and Westside.

A circle of flames leaping fifty feet into the air surrounded the Charles Elliott ranch, thirty-five miles northeast of Auburn, Cal., and threatened the lives of George and Ross Berlin and Mrs. M. E. Church and her 9 year old daughter. There was no way to get to them and no way for them to get out, fire fighters reported.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 17.—(AP)—The international convention of Disciples of Christ determined today to send no more of its ministers to serve as chaplains in the United States army. The resolution also requested the Federal Council of Churches "to sever its connection with the war system by dissolving its chaplaincy commission" and "to provide a non-military ministry of religion to men in the armed services at the church's own expense and under their own authority without involving the Church of Christ in any alliance whatsoever with the state or the military system."

CLUBS SCULPTOR IN STREET; COURT TURNS HIM LOOSE

Professional Club Vexed at Handling of Case.

Architects, artists, and other professional men held an indignation meeting yesterday in the rooms of the Tavern club, protesting against the Municipal court methods of administering justice that followed an unprovoked assault upon Edgar Miller, noted sculptor and mural painter. Mr. Miller has a studio at 1728 North Wells street. He is 36 years old and is of slight build.

Miller's assailant is Al Lewis, 28 years old, a waiter, living at 111 West Division street, who has served a sentence of six months for carrying a concealed weapon and has been arrested as a bootlegger.

The case against Miller was heard on Friday before Judge Eugene L. McGarry in the South State Street court. Despite Lewis' previous record, he was put on probation for six months.

Treated as a Culprit.

"I was treated in court as if I were a criminal," Mr. Miller told his associates in the Tavern club. "I was forced to go into a washroom with Lewis and three other defendants by the judge who said, 'you people step in there and see if you can't settle your trouble.' The bailif called the defendant 'Al.'

"After we went into the washroom the bailif said the best thing I could do would be to agree to accept $10 from Lewis, who would then be put under probation."

The assault was admittedly unprovoked. According to Miller's account of the court proceedings, Lewis confessed he was drunk at the time and didn't remember what had happened.

"I worked with Andrew N. Rebori, an architect, in his offices in the Tribune Tower until 2 o'clock last Wednesday morning," Miller said. "We left together—Mr. Rebori for his home and I for my studio.

Pauses to Read Newspaper.

"After we parted, I paused in front of a night club at 885 Rush street, where there was considerable light, to glance at the headlines of a newspaper. I was carrying a heavy blackthorn walking stick under my arm.

"Four men coming in the opposite direction stopped and one of them, Lewis, pulled the stick from under my arm. I asked him to give it back. With a curse he swung it and struck me on the forehead, cutting a gash which necessitated several stitches later at the Henrotin hospital.

Arrests Unrecorded at Station.

"That afternoon my attorney couldn't find out what had happened. There was no record of the arrest. An accident report had been made, however, and the police finally told me to appear in court Friday. My lawyer was told Friday morning there was no such case on the call.

"I had to ask a continuance because my lawyer wasn't present. The judge told me the city prosecutor would represent me. He asked me what I was doing at that time in that neighborhood, and said my story sounded fishy.

"When the prosecutor said the defendant Lewis had a record, the judge said everybody had a record during prohibition, and probably I had one too. I do not drink."

The three companions of Lewis were freed of disorderly conduct charges by the court.

"We think that case should be reopened," Mr. Rebori said last night.

Coughlin and Feather Man Clash

COUGHLIN'S TALK INTERRUPTED BY FEATHER TOSSER

Put Peace Advocate in Jail for Safety.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 17.—(AP)—An address by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin was interrupted today by a scuffle between the priest and Woody Hockaday, who, dressed in a brilliant vermilion Indian suit, showered the speaker with handfuls of feathers.

Hockaday, who calls himself a peace propagandist, recently scattered forty pounds of feathers in the office of Secretary of War Woodring at Washington, and was sent to a hospital for mental observation. Later he interrupted an American Legion banquet in Baltimore with his feather throwing.

Priest Grabs Heckler.

Coughlin was speaking at a rally of Michigan members of the National Union for Social Justice, when Hockaday appeared suddenly on the platform, shouting and flinging feathers with both hands from a bulging sack.

The priest lunged upon him and grappled briefly with the intruder and then as others on the platform closed in Coughlin drew back, smiling and waving at the crowd. The spectators were surging forward shouting threats at Hockaday.

While police rushed Hockaday to a squad car, Coughlin's associates brushed feathers from his shoulders and helped him adjust a microphone worn hanging from his shoulders. It had been torn off in the scuffle.

For G. O. P. Governor.

Coughlin was introduced by Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of Michigan, Republican candidate for reëlection, who had called for the priest with his car at Coughlin's residence in Royal Oak.

"Gov. Fitzgerald," he said, after his introduction, "it is too bad that the National Union cannot endorse you formally, but I hope you will get along without such an endorsement. Personally, I am voting for you."

Merchant Robbed of $500 as He Puts Car in Garage

Joseph Kahn, 43 years old, president of the Cream City Butter Stores, Inc., 5638 West Cermak road, Cicero, was robbed of $500 last night by two bandits in the alley in the rear of his home. He had just put his car into the garage. The same men earlier stole $40 and a car from Ernest Kramer, 3342 Douglas boulevard. Kramer's automobile was used in the Kahn holdup.

FOUR FOUND SLAIN IN CABIN; STOLEN AUTO TRAPS SUSPECT

Elko, Nev., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Four men, three of them prominent Nevada cattle ranchers, were found shot to death in a cabin one mile southwest of here late today. The bodies were found after the arrest at Carlin of a man giving the name of H. S. Kinchabocker.

Police said the department of justice agents at Salt Lake City told them Kinchabocker was suspected of forcing an Ogden, Utah, youth to drive him to Nevada yesterday in a stolen automobile.

The three slain stockmen were Otto Heitman and Walter Godecke of Carson Valley and Manuel Arrascada of Elko. The fourth man was tentatively identified as Joe Steca, who is believed to have occupied the cabin. District Attorney Douglas Castle said Kinchabocker refused to talk. He was closely guarded at the jail here.

He was invited to lunch and was presented autographed photographs of both the ex-kaiser and Princess Hermine, his wife.

EASTERN TIME CUTS AUTO TOLL, SAYS GUTKNECHT

Safety Judge Gives Death Decline as Proof.

Judge John Gutknecht of the Trafic court, a leader in the campaign to stop the trafic massacre in the Chicago streets, declared yesterday that the city's adoption of Eastern standard time last March 1 was an important step toward halting automobile accidents and increasing trafic safety.

This trafic measure will be before the people on Nov. 3 in a referendum to determine whether Chicago will continue its present life saving time system.

Prediction Proves True.

Judge Gutknecht told the city council before it adopted Eastern time that such action would save scores of lives annually because it would provide daylight for the afternoon rush hour. His position is completely borne out by statistics which show that in two months of daylight time there were ten fewer trafic fatalities, and 16 fewer injuries than in the same period under Central time in 1935.

"I predicted before the city council committee holding hearings on Eastern time that the measure would save scores of lives every year," Judge Gutknecht recalled. "We had Eastern time in March and April, and in those two months alone ten lives were saved as compared with Central time the previous year.

Eastern Time Gets Credit.

"That Eastern time was the life saving influence is obvious. Up to March 1, 1936, trafic accidents and deaths were running ahead of 1935. In March and April they dropped suddenly and decidedly. Then, on May 1, the beginning of the usual summer daylight time period, the accident trend for this year went above 1935. This indicates that Eastern time, and little else, cut the death toll in the two month period. The effect should be even better when the fall figures are available.

"To any one studying the trafic problem, this result is to be expected. The accident toll goes up when twilight and darkness fall. If dusk and the peak of the trafic rush hour occur at the same time, the worst possible driving condition is created. Thus, any change which will offer additional light for the rush hour is bound to help tremendously in reducing the number of trafic accidents, injuries and fatalities.

Evening Rush Hour Worst.

"Light for driving is always important, but it is naturally most beneficial when trafic is heaviest. In the morning, most people drive to work in light, and the movement of trafic is graduated throughout the morning. But at night most people leave for home at the same time, and they are joined by shoppers returning from the loop. This creates immense trafic congestion, not comparable with anything in the morning. When this rush hour is lighted with daylight, it has and will save lives.

"The relationship of auto deaths to light and darkness must always be borne in mind when considering the trafic problem. This point may not be conclusive in any argument as to permanent daylight time as compared with summer daylight time, but it is a factor to weigh carefully in making a decision."

DIVE FATAL TO DANVILLE YOUTH.

Jacksonville, Ill., Oct. 17.—(AP)—An injury received Tuesday when he dived into a swimming pool caused the death today of Charles Gordon Stewart, 17, of Danville, Ill., a student at the Illinois School for the Blind. The accident occurred in the school's pool.

BLAZE OVERCOME; BUT FIREMEN DO IT THE HARD WAY

Fire caused $10,000 damage in a Salvation Army storehouse at the rear of an unused Army industrial home at 2258 Clybourn avenue last night. Firemen, summoned by a 2-11 alarm, overcame unusual difficulties to get at the flames. Clybourn avenue in that neighborhood is being widened. The street is unpaved and the only even passage on it is on the street car tracks.

Several fire trucks by skillful handling managed to move into a fighting position. One heavy light tower crawled on the surface tracks bed but tipped at an angle of 25 degrees. Its lights were nevertheless used. Other trucks, finding it impossible to get into Clybourn avenue, detoured into Webster avenue, Dominick street, and other thoroughfares. From these distant places they connected hose lines to street hydrants and brought water to the fire.

GIRL, 27, ASLEEP 5 YEARS, CALLED A PSYCHOPATH

SAO PAULO, Brazil, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Asleep for five years, Miss Noemia Boldrin, 27, was diagnosed by physicians tonight as suffering from "mystic psychopathy."

The girl's father, Pedro Boldrin, an Italian, said his daughter had been extremely religious from her childhood and that in 1931 she returned from church sobbing hysterically that the "world was not for her."

She wept for many days, the father said, and lapsed into what appeared to be a deep sleep of exhaustion. She has not awakened since, receiving only soup, coffee and tea as nourishment.

Once in a long while she half opens her eyes in answer to her heartbroken mother's call. Her eyes flutter with only a dreamy sort of recognition. She smiles wanly and falls asleep again. No word has passed her lips since five years ago.

DIES WHEN TRUCK PINS HIM AGAINST A FREIGHT DEPOT

Driver Crushed to Death at Loading Platform.

David Helberg, 31 years old, 2735 South Michigan avenue, a truck driver, was crushed to death yesterday when he was pinned against the platform of the Universal Car Loading and Distributing company, Polk and La Salle streets, by another truck which was backing into the platform. George H. Scheffer, 31 years old, 4149 Ellis avenue, driver of the truck, told police he did not see Helberg.

Hits Street Car; Dies.

Robert E. Beck, 22 years old, 2214 Roscoe street, was killed early yesterday when he drove his automobile into a surface lines work car in Elston avenue at Pulaski road. William Meyers, 40 years old, 7918 South Hermitage avenue, motorman, said Beck apparently lost control of his car after it had struck a loose paving brick.

Four persons were injured last night when a truck struck the automobile in which they were riding and overturned it against a light pole at 82d street and Indiana avenue. They are James Nelson, 31 years old, and his wife, Theresa, 30, of 1102 Montana street, and Albert Sherwood, 29, and his wife, Edith, 27, of 7258 Rhodes avenue. All were taken to the Auburn Park hospital. The driver of the truck was John Klemjan, 27 years old, 7058 Cornell avenue.

Edward Stone, 51 years old, 950 West Madison street, died yesterday in the County hospital of injuries incurred last Wednesday when he was struck by the automobile of a hit and run driver at Aberdeen and Monroe streets.

Identify Woman Victim.

The woman pedestrian who was killed Friday night when she stepped into the path of an automobile at Garfield boulevard and Peoria street as she was waving to her daughter who had boarded a bus was identified yesterday as Mrs. Emma Brown, 73 years old, 5218 South Peoria street, widow of a Chicago policeman.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 777 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 595 were killed in Chicago. In the same period 15,174 were injured in trafic accidents within the city.

LANDON DRAFTS FINAL DRIVE AS KNOX JOINS HIM

Kansan to Leave Tonight for Los Angeles.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Topeka, Kas., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Gov. Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox conferred here today over their plans for the last two weeks of the presidential campaign, particularly Gov. Landon's invasion of California next Tuesday. The presidential nominee will leave Topeka at 7:30 tomorrow night for Los Angeles and a campaign tour of west and east which will last until Nov. 1.

The vice presidential nominee approved his running mate's decision to go to California, declared that the Republican national ticket would carry that state, and challenged the President to say whether his son, James Roosevelt, was correct in asserting that he intended to seek a constitutional amendment to make possible reëstablishment of the NRA.

Sees Trend for G. O. P.

Col. Knox also declared that the trend for Gov. Landon was increasing daily and that the Republican national ticket would carry Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan and be elected.

Col. Knox, who motored to Topeka from Kansas City, was accompanied by Mrs. Knox. They had luncheon with Governor and Mrs. Landon at the executive mansion and then drove to Excelsior Springs, Mo., where they will remain over Sunday, before Col. Knox continues his campaign on Monday with a speech at Lincoln, Neb.

After luncheon, at which the two candidates discussed the general political situation as well as the situation in California, Col. Knox was interviewed by newspaper men.

"When I was in California the latter part of September," Col. Knox said, "the Republicans had divided the state into two parts, northern and southern, with a campaign manager for each. The two sections are entirely dissimilar.

600,000 New Residents.

"Since the 1932 presidential election, 600,000 people have moved into California. Most of these are in their declining years and hoped to live off the country. Many of them are without means and those who had money lost much of it by the depression.

"This crowd of hitch hikers that has moved into southern California is largely available for any scheme to provide an easy living for them. They present a difficult problem because no program will satisfy them, except one calling for a complete subsidy.

"Northern California is anti-New Deal and pro-Landon. The battle will have to be fought in Los Angeles and the country around it. Santa Barbara, Riverside and other towns like them are strongly Republican.

Sees Aid from Townsend.

Col. Knox was asked if he thought the support of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, author of the Townsend plan, would help Gov. Landon.

"Dr. Townsend's support is a tremendous help, not only in California but in other states," he replied. "Open support by Dr. Townsend will help greatly in the state of Washington.

"I am very much in favor of the Landon trip. He will pass through important states, Arizona and New Mexico. I think we will carry both. Arizona has been Republican every presidential year except 1932. In New Mexico the Bronson Cutting machine has gone to pieces and his first lieutenant is supporting Landon."

Asked how he looked upon the situation in the whole country, Col. Knox said he thought it was improving daily.

"Our timing has been perfect," he said, "and we are coming strong, in no state more strongly than in New York. Ohio during the last ten days has moved definitly into the Republican column.

Expects Illinois Victory.

"I think Pennsylvania is safely Republican. For every vote we lose there in the mining regions we will pick up a vote in the agricultural regions. Southern Illinois will roll up a Republican majority of not less than 200,000, and my reports indicate that we will have a slight edge in Chicago. In Chicago the heavy registration is in Republican wards. Illinois will be overwhelmingly Republican. I thing West Virginia will go Republican."

Asked what group of states must be carried for a Republican victory, Col. Knox said: "I have always thought that the election depended upon New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan. We are safe in all of them and getting better all the time. The best evidence of this is the hurried trip made into that territory by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"I think that the major blunder of President Roosevelt and the New Dealers was their action in Minnesota. No one can count the number of Democrats who were offended by the scuttling of the Democratic party in Minnesota in the interest of candidates running on a Socialistic platform. As an aftermath, I heard of Democratic soreness in half a dozen states and I have heard no Democrat defend it."

Refers to President's Son.

Col. Knox was asked if he had read that James Roosevelt, son of the President, declared in a speech that his father would seek a constitutional amendment to make possible the reëstablishment of the NRA.

"Yes, I did," Col. Knox replied. "I also read that Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania said that the President told him that he would seek legislation to fix wages and hours of employment.

"If James Roosevelt says that the President wants to amend the constitution to bring back the NRA, why doesn't his father say so?" Col Knox added.

Another caller at the Landon home was Hans Wagner, former shortstop and now coach of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who presented the governor a baseball inscribed: "With best wishes and victory Nov. 3, from J. Honus Wagner, Pirate."

The baseball was promptly appropriated by Jack, the governor's young son.

Mr. Wagner recalled that Gov. Landon, when as a boy of twelve or thirteen, and was passing his summers in western Pennsylvania, was a catcher on a boys' baseball team. Landon, he said, frequently visited Exposition park, the old Pirate ball ground, and used to play pitch and catch with him.

"He was a good catcher too," Mr. Wagner added. "He had a good arm and could throw them in."

As Landon, Knox, and Wagner posed for photographers on the verandah of the executive mansion, the governor turned to former Shortstop Wagner and said:

"You haven't a Pittsburgh stogie with you, have you?"

"Sure," replied Mr. Wagner with a grin, pulling out a stogie about six inches long.

The governor lighted it and puffed away with seeming satisfaction.

"I was raised on Pittsburgh stogies," he said.

Then came a few more puffs, and the governor said:

"What do these stogies cost now?"

"Three for ten," said Mr. Wagner.

"They used to be two for five."

Travels in 32 States.

This is the third time that the heads of the Republican ticket have talked here during the campaign. Col. Knox has traveled in 32 states for more than 15,000 miles during the campaign and had many observations of interest and value to make to the governor. California as always presents a complex political picture and is regarded as a danger state politically. It will be recalled that Hughes in 1920 made a tactical error there that lost him the state and the presidency.

Presiden Roosevelt's failure to go to California, however, it may be regarded, is primarily responsible for the decision of the governor to go there. In all ways his campaign is a contrast to that of the President as much as his advisers can make it.

Albuquerque On List.

Albuquerque, N. M., will be the first speaking stop on the western trip. The governor will speak in Los Angeles on Tuesday evening, spend the night there and leave next morning for the east. Phoenix, Ariz., is the first stop on this leg of the journey, with Oklahoma City selected as the place for the second major speech.

The eastern part of the itinerary has not been worked out yet, but it is certain that many extra stops will be decided upon for the governor in New Jersey and other eastern states. It will be one of the hardest, fastest campaign trips on record.

Mrs. Landon, it has been definitly decided, is not to accompany her husband on this last trip. Her presence on the Sunflower special has been urged by many advisers who know that the American women want to see what this possible next first lady of the land looks like. But "strategy" again enters.

Prefers to Stay Out.

Mrs. Roosevelt enters in politics, therefore Mrs. Landon stays out. This is her own inclination and that of her husband, but she might have been persuaded to go if it had been considered advisable. She talks with her husband every night by telephone, wherever he is.

The governor enters the final phase of his campaign, toward which his whole candidacy has been building, in a mood that can only be described as confident of success. He realizes that he is surrounded by conditions that might warp his political judgment, but he does not rest on the reassurances of friends and political leaders that he will carry this and that state easily.

He knows he is in a desperate fight, but thinks that the cumulative effect of the anti-Roosevelt and now pro-Landon sentiment is rolling up to the proportions of a crusade. What his closest adviser, Lacy Haynes, calls "the drift," has now set in for the Republican candidate, in their opinion.

Sees Growing Reaction.

The governor thinks that the expanding registrations everywhere noted are in his favor and that millions of former stay-at-home voters will come out this year. The reason for this, in his opinion, is the wave of reaction against the New Deal efforts to change the American form of government. The governor may be depended upon to keep that issue to the front in the remaining days.

EXPERT FORECASTS RECORD NOVEMBER VOTE OF 41 MILLION

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Despite an expected all time peak of at least 41,000,000 in the popular vote for President on Nov. 3, Simon Michelet is convinced this country has "the silliest election machinery you could think of."

Michelet is president of the National Get Out the Vote club. Ever since 1924 the middle-aged, red-haired, crisp speaking lawyer has made a hobby of trying to get all eligible voters to visit the polls.

He estimated that between 41 or 42 million voters would play a part in picking the next President this fall, as compared to 39,816,522 ballots that were counted four years ago.

Another Washingtonian who makes a hobby of tabulating votes, William Tyler Page, minority clerk of the house, said the total vote this year might reach 43,000,000 or more.

But Page and Michelet agreed that even 43,000,000 would be a poor showing for the more than 70,000,000 persons listed by the census bureau as of voting age.

Michelet said ballots ought to be made short and snappy.

"There is no reason for New York state, as an example, to have a raft of names on the ballot," he said. "Why lots of people get confused and fail even to vote for President, because too many presidential electors are listed.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 17.—(AP)—A giant plane, of the China Clipper type but with a more powerful engine, is being built by the Glenn L. Martin company for the Russian government.

Company officials today announced the contract for the ship with the Amtorg Trading corporation, Russian purchasing agents in the United States.

Slated for delivery in 1937, the ship will cost approximately $1,000,000. It will carry the same number of passengers now carried by the Clipper ships built by Martin for Pan-American Airways trans-Pacific routes. However, quarters for the 44 passengers and six crew members will be more luxurious, officials said.

Four motors, generating 4,000 horse power—as compared with 3,200 horse power in the China Clippers—will have a speed of 160 miles an hour. The cruising range, without refueling, will be 4,000 miles.

He Finds Many Promises Are Broken.

over the air the reason he had suddenly decided to make a single exception to Columbia's regular policy.

"Naturally, those stations which had been switched off did not carry his explanation.

"For that reason, the foregoing statement was broadcast to the network later in the evening."

The broadcast was cut off twenty-two stations of the sixty-six which were scheduled to carry it. The stations cut off were in Albany, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Hartford, New York City, Providence, Rochester, Syracuse, Toledo, Worcester, Jacksonville, Miami, Orlando, Tampa, Erie, Pa.; Bangor, Akron, Bridgeport, Manchester, N. H.; and Binghampton, N. Y.

Vandenberg Is Caustic.

When he had concluded, Senator Vandenberg made the following comment:

"I know nothing about radio rules. I only know that competent and conclusive experts said we complied with the rules. But rules or no rules, we have come to a pretty pass in the United States when radio censors or any other overlords can tell us we dare not faithfully confront candidates for high office with their own words, their own voice, their own broken promises. We evidently have a new issue in the jeopardy of legitimate freedom."

The broadcast, as carried in full on W-G-N, follows:

TEXT OF BROADCAST

SENATOR VANDENBERG—I respectfully address myself to Mr. Franklin Delano Roosevelt in his personal capacity in this campaign, as a candidate for reëlection to the presidency of the United States. May I ask you, Mr. Roosevelt, to refresh my recollection as to precisely what you said regarding the constitution of the United States when you were inaugurated as President?

ROOSEVELT VOICE: "I, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office as President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of the United States, so help me God."

SENATOR VANDENBERG—That was a supremely solemn obligation, Mr. Roosevelt. Within it is contained our basic warant for the faithful maintenance of the American form of government. The Supreme court warned, in its rejection of one of your unconstitutional acts, that I quote, "every journey to a forbidden land begins with the first step." It is significant that your administration has oftener collided with the constitution and the courts than any other administration in history.

Roosevelt's Own Voice.

MR. PRATT—Ladies and gentlemen, this is Mr. Pratt speaking again. Mr. Roosevelt, the candidate, is here in voice but not in person. Through the miracle of science his voice has been preserved. Therefore, whenever you hear him talk again during this broadcast it will be his own actual voice, taken from the air in 1932 and 1933 at the time his statements were made and brought to you tonight in this most unusual radio program. I now turn the microphone back to you, Senator Vandenberg.

SENATOR VANDENBERG — In reviewing your acceptance speech of four long years ago, Mr. Roosevelt, I am struck by your expressed devotion to the late President Wilson. This is what you said:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: "Many of his captains, thank God, are still with us, to give up wise counsel. Let us feel that in everything we do there still lives with us, if not the body, the great indomitable, unquenchable, progressive soul of our commander in chief, Woodrow Wilson."

ASKS CAPTAINS' NAMES

SENATOR VANDENBERG—With deep veneration for the great Wilson memory, Mr. Roosevelt, I respectfully beg to ask you to call the roll of his "captains," and to tell the country from which of them you have taken counsel. And why do so many, of them courageously speak out today in a demand for your defeat? The Jeffersonian Democrats, speaking for themselves in Detroit convention, said your administration represents "a perversity of heart and spirit which can neither be remedied nor condoned." Can Wilsonian Democrats say less than comparing the record of the last three revolutionary years with the following immortal Wilson words? I quote:

"I do not want to live under a philanthropy. I do not want to be taken care of by the government either directly or by instruments through which the government is acting. I want only to have right and justice to prevail. Give me right and justice and I will undertake to take care of myself. I will not live under trustees if I can help it. I do not care how wise, how patriotic the trustees may be. I have never heard of any group of men in whose hands I am willing to lodge the liberties of America in trust."

The Real Wilson Ideal.

Is it not a far cry, Mr. Roosevelt, from this Wilson ideal to your bureaucratic regimentation of American life and livelihood, which you yourself confess creates instrumentalities of public power which, in the wrong hands, would "shackle the liberties of the American people"? Was not Mr. Wilson right? Are any hands worthy to be trusted with shackles for American liberty? And this reminds me of something else you said in this connection.

ROOSEVELT VOICE: "Note well that in this campaign I shall not use the words 'Republican party,' but I shall use day in and day out, the words 'Republican leadership.'"

SENATOR VANDENBERG—Yes; and isn't it equally true that you rarely, if ever, used the words "Democratic party"? As a matter of reality, have you not formed your own—the Roosevelt party—which ignores the Democratic party in principles and traditions; which emasculates the basic state rights and home rule upon which democracy was founded; which often flirts openly with socialism; which joins itself with radicalism wherever the partnership promises support and votes, and which inevitably trends toward what your Dr. Tugwell calls "a calculated change of institutions"?

Deserted by Big Men.

"Why do you stand deserted in this campaign by so many of the big men and journals which still call themselves truly Democratic and which supported you four years ago? Did you plan it this way—to borrow another of your favorite phrases—when you said:"

ROOSEVELT VOICE: Let it be from now on the task of our party to break foolish traditions. We will break foolish traditions and leave it to the Republican leadership, far more skilled in that art, to break promises.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—We'll discuss the "art" of "broken promises" a little later, Mr. Roosevelt. At the moment, I am interested in your contempt for our traditions. Which of our "traditions" do you consider "foolish"? How about the "traditions" of free enterprise and free men? How about the "traditions" of maximum local self-government and minimum federal interference with it? How about the "traditions of checks and balances in government, set up to save us from the tyrannical dictations of government by executive decree"? It is admitted that many of our "traditions" have been scuttled during the last three years. But will you not tell our people what particular American "traditions" you still consider "foolish" and which may yet be marked for further slaughter?

FROM INAUGURAL SPEECH

Another thing in this connection. When you were inaugurated you anticipated the possible need for extraordinary emergency and frankly said:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: It is to be hoped that the normal balance of executive and legislative authority may be wholly equal, wholly adequate to meet the unprecedented task before us. But it may be that an unprecedented demand and need for undelayed action may call for temporary departure from that normal balance of public procedure.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—Well, of course we were not long in departing from "normal balance." Almost immediately after your inauguration the congress speedily abandoned its independent character and became mere ditto marks for whatever mandate might reach it from all-powerful executive headquarters. We have been out of "normal balance" ever since. Meanwhile, you have ceased speaking gingerly to us about "temporary departures." Now you say: "We have undertaken a new order of things—a PERMANENT readjustment of our social and economic arrangements." No longer is there softly spoken approach to temporary innovation.

New Order Is Permanent.

The new order now is permanent. That puts the country upon fair notice. Decision day is Nov. 3. But let's remember on Nov. 3—decision day—the words of Senator Carter Glass, Democrat from Virginia, I quote:

"The New Deal, taken all in all, is not only a mistake; it is a disgrace to the nation, and the time is not far distant when we shall be ashamed of having wandered so far from the dictates of common sense and common honesty."

Then, coming intimately to the realities, Mr. Roosevelt, may I respectfully ask what you said about taxes when accepting your nomination in 1932?

ROOSEVELT VOICE: Just one word or two on taxes, the taxes that all of us pay toward the cost of government of all kinds. Well, I know something of taxes. For three long years I have been going up and down this country preaching that government—federal and state and local—costs too much. I shall not stop that preaching. As an immediate program of action we must abolish useless offices. We must eliminate actual present functions of government—functions in fact that are not definitely essential to the continuance of government. We must merge, we must consolidate subdivisions of government, and, like the private citizen, give up luxuries which we no longer can afford. By our example at Washington itself, we shall have the opportunity of pointing the way of economy to local government. . . . I propose to you, my friends, and through you, to the nation, that government of all kinds, big and little, be made solvent and that the example be set by the President of the United States and his cabinet.

SENATOR VANDENBERG — Instead of pursuing these promised economies and this vital solvency, Mr. Roosevelt, is it not a fact, I respectfully inquire, that in three years your administration has spent as much as all of your predecessors from Washington to Wilson in 124 years?

THE ALPHABET EXHAUSTED

Instead of eliminating functions and consolidating departments, is it not a fact that you have exhausted the alphabet in finding designations for new ones? Instead of setting an example in retrenchment, is it not a fact that you have added 400,000 job holders to the federal pay rolls? Instead of conserving taxes, is it not a fact that fourteen new tax bills have been passed in your administration; that each annual promise of "no more taxes" has been followed within six months by new and added taxes; that next year's budget is a billion dollars bigger than the last and that, despite an estimated increase of 193 per cent in tax revenues in 1937 over 1933, you have accumulated an actual deficit of 1300 million dollars in three years? You said you proposed to set a wise and prudent example in Washington. Could any citizen who followed that example have escaped total bankruptcy? Four long years ago, you said:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: Through this program of action we address ourselves to putting our own national house in order and making income balance outgo.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—But, Mr. Roosevelt, this is 1936 and we are still spending $2 for every dollar the treasury takes in. We have had plenty of programs for more income but none for less outgo.

Where Is the Balance?

Where is the promised balance? Even our relief costs go up as our relief necessities go down.

Don't mistake me, Rational relief expenditures were necessary. Indeed, you said something on this subject. Some of your words were these:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: I have favored the use of certain types of public works as a further emergency means of stimulating employment and the issuance of bonds to pay for public works, but I have pointed out that no economic end is served if we merely build without building for a necessary purpose.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—A necessary purpose! That's the point! But did you not condemn your own CWA by describing it as the futile process of raking leaves from one side of the street to the other? Is there a necessary purpose in such phantom undertakings as the $200,000,000 Florida canal which no responsible ocean navigator would approve and few, if any, would use if ever built? Is there a necessary purpose in using relief funds to study such things as "movement of peoples in the second millenium" and "the geographical distribution of ancient fibulæ?" Is there a necessary purpose in fabulous dog pounds and isolated golf courses and—this particularly—in maintaining a vast and needless wasteful political supervision of relief administration which too frequently plays politics with human misery and causes even Mr. Hopkins to wash his hands of what he calls the dumb politicians?

Just What Is It?

Just what is the measure of a necessary purpose, Mr. Roosevelt? I confess that I should call it a necessary purpose to quit most of this portion of the spending spree, and to substitute what I should call Landon common sense.

"Incidentally, I wonder if you think Dr. Tugwell serves a necessary purpose? I am not referring now to his anxiety to make us over into a planned society to fit his startling blue prints. I am referring to some of his resettlement schemes. I know you are partial to his ideas because you said:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: Hand in hand with this we must frankly recognize the over-balance of population in our industrial centers and, by engaging on a national scale in a redistribution, endeavor to provide a better use of the land for those best fitted for the land.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—A very pretty theory. But it has cost as much as $20,500 per homestead to settle some of your redistributed families, Mr. Roosevelt, and it has cost as much as $12,000 per 40 acre farm to redistribute some of your farmers.

Broken Dreams Already.

Some of your ready made communities already are just broken dreams. But the bills remain to be paid. Are such things "necessary purposes" when you are entirely surrounded by deficits and debt?

But let's get along—speaking of agriculture, our important interest is the philosophy of artificial scarcity. You said this very interesting thing:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: We are stricken by no plague of locusts. Compare with the perils which our forefathers conquered because they believed and were not afraid, we have still much to be thankful for. Nature still offers her bounty, and human efforts have multiplied it. Plenty is at our door step, but a generous use of it languishes in the very sight of the supply.

SENATOR VANDENBERG — Indeed, yes. Our scarcity does not come from locusts. It comes partially from drouth — and more generally from your Mr. Secretary Henry Wallace. I may add that no one seems to mistake the drouth for a blessing. Anyway, we are now importing foreign corn and wheat!

Which reminds me that Thomas Jefferson [a once highly respected authority] said: "Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap we should soon want bread." And here we are! Nature still offers her bounty. Yes. But, under the New Deal, human efforts do not multiply it. They divide and destroy it. They substitute the swivel chair infatuations of overlords at Washington for the infinite wisdom of reliable Providence. Plenty at our door step? Yes. And how prophetic you were when you said:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: But a generous use of it languishes in the very sight of the supply.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—A perfect definition of what happened, by purpose and design, when your administration deliberately destroyed food in the presence of hunger. Do you say: "We planned it this way?" Is this philosophy of scarcity to continue? Are there to be more gargantuan pig obituaries?

Are We Entirely Wrong?

Are we wrong in insisting that America's problem is under consumption rather than overproduction? Why are we wrong in asserting that when all Americans are properly fed and clothed and housed there will be busy work of all? And why doesn't this apply to industry as well? You said in 1933:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: More important, a host of unemployed citizens face the grim problem of existence, and an equally great number toil with little return. Only a foolish optimist can deny the dark realities of the moment.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—Despite a welcome upturn in our economic life, which, however, lags unfortunately behind recovery in 14 other important countries of the world—would it not be a "foolish optimist," Mr. Roosevelt, who would deny that we still have almost as many unemployed citizens as when you assessed the dark realities of 1933? Is it not true that hosts of unemployed citizens still face the grim problem of existence, and an equally great number toil with little return—particularly in WPA?

We take the position that there are more jobs in free American enterprise than in all the applied socialism that can seek to control industry and ration work from a central industrial despotism in Washington, operated by burocrats who never met a pay roll in their lives. We take the position that only "foolish optimists" deny today's crying need to give legitimate American business a fair chance.

What Holds It Back?

It and it alone can reëmploy these millions who deserve work instead of doles. What holds it back? In my humble judgment you partially said it in a pregnant sentence:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: So, first of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralizes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—But, unfortunately this fear is not nameless and it is not unjustified. It is fear that needlessly, punitive, harassing, meddling, regimenting policies again will, at any moment, end our breathing spell and toss us once more to devastating experiments. It is fear that more competitive government in business will make private business activity and private investment impossible. It is fear that multiplied extravagance and pyramided taxation will consume the substance needed in trade and employment; or that multiplied inflation—whether it be more bond-backed debt-money or whether it be straight printing press money—will make profitable progress impossible. Even though this fear be unreasoning, and you may think unjustified, it is too often fear of what Washington will do. It's too often fear of you!

About Broken Promises.

Just one thing more I must refer to. You were talking a little while ago, Mr. Roosevelt, about broken promises. How stands the record of your administration upon this score?

The platform upon which you were elected said: I quote, "We advocate an immediate drastic reduction of governmental expenditure . . . to accomplish a saving of not less than 25 per cent in the cost of federal government"—and what did you say?

ROOSEVELT VOICE: That admirable document, the platform which you have adopted, is clear. I accept it 100 per cent.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—But! Instead of reducing federal expenditures 25 per cent, you have increased them 72 per cent. Then, your platform said: I quote, "We favor maintenance of the national credit by a federal budget annually balanced on the basis of accurate executive estimates within revenue"—and what did you say?

ROOSEVELT VOICE: That admirable document, the platform which you have adopted, is clear. I accept it 100 per cent.

SENATOR VANDENBERG — But! None of your budgets has been within gunshot of balance, and you now say to have kept this promise would have been a crime. Then your platform said: I quote, "We advocate a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards," and what did you say?

ROOSEVELT VOICE: I accept it 100 per cent.

SENATOR VANDENBERG — Instead, we have an uncertain currency which is at the mercy of presidential whim. We have repudiated our gold promises for the first time any government promise was ever repudiated. We play with gold, we toy with silver, we revel in greenbacks based on debt, and we even have created executive authority to start the naked printing presses. We have devalued our money and may do so again.

We have put two billion dollars in the hands of the secretary of the treasury to peg the price of money—and we have said by law that no person shall ever be allowed to ask him and the President what he has done with the money. Our money is good because the country is good. But how much longer can even husky Uncle Sam maintain his balance on a flying trapeze?

Time forbids an extension of the inventory. I simply listen, once more and finally, to your sturdy words:

ROOSEVELT VOICE: That admirable document, the platform which you have adopted, is clear. I accept it 100 per cent.

Repudiations of Pledges.

SENATOR VANDENBERG—Then I give you the verdict of Professor James Truslow Adams, internationally noted historian, in his latest work which is significantly titled "The Living Jefferson." Says Professor Adams: "I cannot recall any other President and party which has gone so far in the solemnity of their pledges; nor do I recall any other such repudiation of them."

Yesterday's utterly shattered promises emphasize and prove the absolute impossibility of relying upon any of today's assurance for tomorrow.

And this concludes our fireside chat. It has been dissective of the record. The record is part of every earnest citizen's consideration as he contemplates his November responsibility. The question is—Shall we vote for more of the same; or shall we support the cause of faithful Constitutionalism, solvent government, humane and rational liberalism, free enterprise, free men and Landon common sense?

IMPATIENCE

By CALEB

THE stagecoach wheelwrights in England, in 1800, did piecework, toiling customarily from 5 A. M. until 8 P. M. Frequently, too fagged to eat, they would rest first, then eat, only to tumble into bed to turn out for the fifteen hour grind—all over again.

Only twenty years ago, labor in this country worked not less than ten hours a day, six days a week. Twenty cents an hour or less was the prevailing wage.

Workers of today are eager for more jobs and more money. Their leaders are impatient that conditions do not adjust themselves with revolutionary rapidity. But evolution inevitably prevails, sometimes impeded by the revolutions fomented to hurry it.

The workers of the country and their leaders share their impatience with most of humanity. For the world is impatient. In the paper you buy, the magazines you scan, the book you read, you see the fretting human, hoping to realize tomorrow what he dreams today.

Great works are done in the patient flow of hour on hour—when the spirit is subservient to the small need of the moment. Our city is full of businesses, institutions, and organizations, great now—thanks to early sponsors who wrought patiently.

Reformers burn and stew with indignation and restlessness. Too slowly for them the world shifts and alters the pattern of its thought and actions. If their reforms are worth while, if they are right for the race of men, nothing will stop their ultimate accomplishment, but the most rabid impatience hardly serves to speed the day.

It is a fruitless waste of temper. The zealot is a prophet and crusades militantly now. His cause will not come to possess its placid high priests until a far tomorrow.

Despite the impatience of those who condemn our system and our society, they have made, and make, steady progress.

Even in the depths of the depression—and with many idle people clamoring for work and offering their services at reduced rates—wages were far more respectable than they were during good times several generations ago.

Today, there is vast unemployment. When industry and business regain confidence in the country's financial future, unemployment will be reduced. Wages will tend higher as they have decade by decade. Our average of employes' wages is materially higher than it was a year ago. High wages mean high purchasing power. Business men want it so.

PRESIDENT ENDS 'BARNSTORMING' TRIP IN N. Y. STATE

Small Crowd Greets Him at Rochester.

BULLETIN.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt arrived here tonight at 10:45 p. m. (E. S. T.) to spend a day at his home, resting up from a week and a half of campaigning.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

Aboard President's Special, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—The greatest political barnstorming tour ever undertaken by a President of the United States ended tonight with the return of President Roosevelt to his home on the Hudson river.

The tenth day of the 5,000 mile trip furnished a distinct anti-climax. In his home state of New York, Mr. Roosevelt's appearance attracted few persons. Moreover, a heavy rain fell all day. The President, always responsive to the mood of his audiences, indulged in few of the pugnacious phrases which he has popularized on this excursion.

Landon Crowd Much Larger.

A few weeks ago Gov. Alf M. Landon attracted a crowd of 10,000 at the same spot when his train made a stop at 1 o'clock in the morning, when rain also was falling. Upstate New York, it was apparent, will deliver a heavy majority for the Republican candidate.

The President detrained and proceeded to the local convention hall, where he delivered a formal address. He recalled that he had been nominated for governor of New York in Rochester in 1928.

"That year," he remarked, "we were in the midst of the great jazz era—socially, politically, economically, and financially. We were even then a sick nation, though we had not yet begun to feel the pain, the headaches, and the heartaches."

Mr. Roosevelt termed the 1928 situation "lopsided economy."

"The few" were gobbling up all the profits, he asserted. But soon thereafter "the skies fell," he remarked.

Boasts of His Stewardship.

In a mildly boastful vein, the President talked about his deeds as governor of New York.

"It is perhaps worth noting," he said, "that when the depression occurred, your state government undertook many policies which ultimately were the basis of the national legislation of the last three and a half years.

"This state was the first to undertake, in a major way, to care for its needy unemployed. It was, I think, the first state to tie in the success of its farming population with the prosperity of its industrial population—for it was in those years that we undertook to remove submarginal land from cultivation, to extend our forestry and our parks, our farm to market roads, and our coöperation with the farm organizations and the farmers themselves.

Cites Other Accomplishments.

"In those years, we started the splendid system of relief for the aged; we worked for the development of water power and for the reduction of rates for electricity and we greatly strengthened the laws for the protection of labor.

"It also is true that in the same period the opposition to social and economic legislation of this kind came from the same sources in this state which have opposed and are opposing the same type of forward looking legislation and administration in the national capital."

The President said he was happy that his lead in the leadership of New York had been followed by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman.

Predicts Own Reëlection.

At Albany, capital of the Empire state, Mr. Rosevelt stood by the side of Gov. Lehman on the steps of the executive mansion and thanked a crowd for tonight's reception. After posing for a photograph, the President remarked:

"I still have more hair than Herbert."

Lehman, who is very bald, smiled sadly.

The presidential remarks were strictly a "good neighbor" talk.

"I think that Albany, along with the rest of New York, thinks that we can't afford to have any change in the occupants of the executive mansion," said the President.

"Frankly, I think that in the next four years my wife and I are coming up here from the White House in Washington to spend some week-ends with Gov. Lehman and his wife here in the executive mansion," the President concluded.

The presidential special left for Hyde Park at 9:10 p. m. Gov. Lehman rode to the station with the President and they engaged in several minutes' earnest conversation before Mr. Roosevelt boarded his private car.

Answers Landon on Relief.

In his first speech at Buffalo, the President replied directly to the assertion of Gov. Landon that the burden of relief for the unemployed and needy should be returned to the states.

"You will remember in those days, not so long ago," he said, "the depression had made it impossible for private agencies and local communities to carry the burden, and so the duty fell upon the state. But again, as the years went on, it was found impossible not only for the great and rich states, like New York, but for every other state to carry the whole of the burden of the depression and thereafter, from March 4, 1933, the federal government in Washington undertook to carry that part of the burden which the communities themselves and the states were unable to bear."

Pledges Continuation of Task.

"As long as I am President of the United States," Mr. Roosevelt concluded emphatically, "we will continue to carry out that responsibility."

Some of the customary sparkle was lacking from the President's voice as he told his audience:

"I have just returned to my native state from a trip which has taken me into many parts of the United States—into areas devoted to agriculture, to mining, to cattle and sheep raising, to great manufacturing industries. And everywhere I went I saw the cheerful faces and happy voices which told me that we had come back a long way to a real prosperity."

JAMES P. WARBURG, WHO QUIT ROOSEVELT, NOW SUPPORTS HIM

New York, Oct. 17.—(AP)—James P. Warburg, who quit as an economic advisor to the Roosevelt administration as a protest against fiscal policy developments, has informed Secretary of State Cordell Hull he would support the reëlection of President Roosevelt "unless there is a fundamental change in the general alignment between now and Nov. 3."

Warburg, whose letter to the secretary was made public here today by the World-Telegram in a dispatch from Washington, gave praise to the "recent developments in the direction of stabilization of currencies and revival of world trade" and said the achievements to date have helped "to throw into reverse the present worldwide gravitation toward economic nationalism and illusory self-sufficiency."

Warburg—who wrote of his opposition to the New Deal financial policies in "Hell Bent for Election" and "Still Hell Bent" after he had resigned his administration post and returned to his banking business in New York—continued:

"Unfortunately, the Republican platform and the Republican campaign as developed to date openly attack this principle at the very time when the administration is approaching it more closely. To attack this principle is to attack the fundamental basis of all liberty and all liberalism."

BROWDER MUST PROVE LITERACY BEFORE HE VOTES

Yonkers, N. Y., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Earl Browder, communist candidate for President, will have to produce a school certificate or proof of literacy or he may lose his vote Nov. 3.

When Browder registered a week ago Friday he said he had not voted before in New York state. The last time he went to the polls, he said, was in Chicago and he thought the year was 1924. He left on a campaign tour immediately after registering.

Election officials decided Browder was a first voter in the eyes of New York state and therefore must prove he can read and write. They took the registration, subject to challenge on election day.

Radio Speech Scheduled.

New York, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Communist party campaign headquarters announced today that Earl Browder, its presidential candidate, will speak over the radio in Terre Haute, Ind., Tuesday night. He will discuss his arrest there a few weeks ago on charges of vagrancy and the question of civil liberties, it was announced.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt Brands Hopkins a "Liar"

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Col. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., speaking at a nine county rally of Pennsylvania Republicans here today, charged that federal relief funds had been used "to a large extent to pay the political plug-uglies of Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley." He called Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, a "liar" for asserting there was no politics in the administration of relief.

FOUND HANGED IN BASEMENT.

James Vlastnick, 52 years old, 1684 Whitcomb avenue, Des Plaines, was found hanged yesterday in the basement of an apartment building at 7600 Eastlake terrace.

G. O. P. QUESTIONS PRESIDENT OVER SPEECH BY SON

"Is New NRA Planned?" President Asked.

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—The Eastern division of the Republican national committee called on President Roosevelt today to espouse or disclaim—"before election day"—the assertion attributed to his son, James, in a political speech in Massachusetts last night that the President intends to ask for a constitutional amendment embodying the principles of the NRA.

It seemed likely the son's speech made at Gardner, Mass., might become a focal point of the campaign. It appeared further that Democratic strategists considered the quotation too strong. From James Roosevelt's office in Boston there issued today a revised version of the quotation, purporting to be a stenographic transcript. It was much less ardent than what a reporter said he had heard.

As Quoted by Paper.

What the President's son said, in response to a question from the floor at the meeting, a Democratic rally, was, according to the Worcester Telegram:

"If the NRA had not been knocked out, we would not have had as much unemployment. The way to correct this is to shorten the hours of labor.

"In order to accomplish this the President intends to continue the principles of the NRA by going before the people and seeking an amendment to the constitution to make the principles of NRA the law of the land."

According to the statement issued at his office today, what he said was:

"The answer to the second part of the question [regarding recovery] is the necessity for shorter hours and better working conditions to eliminate the unemployed. These are the purposes of the NRA. The administration is pledged to attempt to carry out the purposes of the NRA in every constitutional manner.

Offers Different Version.

"Should there be no way in which this can be accomplished, which we do not admit, I, as an individual, see no alternative, but to ask the people for the right to make those purposes constitutional."

The second version, issued on his behalf, was said to have been transcribed from the notes of his own stenographer.

Demand by G. O. P.

The Republican demand that the President take a stand on the issue cited Gov. Landon's speech at Detroit Oct. 13:

"If the President thinks agricultural and industrial anarchy can be prevented only by the reënactment of the principles of NRA and AAA, let him say so. Let him tell us—and tell us before election day—just what amendments to the constitution he had in mind. By his silence on this he is attempting to dodge the fundamental issue of this campaign—the issue of whether he intends to change the form of our government—whether labor, agriculture and business are to be directed and managed by government—directed and managed by politics.'"

The Republican demand added:

"This is not the time to argue whether a constitutional amendment legalizing the NRA should be adopted, but it is the time for the New Deal candidate for President to declare what he proposes to do about this major issue in the event he should be reëlected."

Paper Stands by Story.

The Worcester Telegram today issued the following statement:

"The Worcester Telegram stands on its report of James Roosevelt's remarks in Gardner, Mass., last night, when the Telegram quoted him as saying the President intends to continue the principles of the NRA by going before the people and seeking an amendment to the constitution to make the principles of the NRA the law of the land.

"The Telegram's report of the speech was taken direct from an unbiased stenographic record made at the meeting and is further supported by persons who attended and listened closely to James Roosevelt's remarks."

MAYOR HOAN ASSAILS ROOSEVELT; CHARGES LAXITY TOWARD COURT

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee, Wis., today told the annual convention of the Public Ownership League of America that "it is disturbing that President Roosevelt has not taken a position in regard to the Supreme court's usurpation of power."

Hoan charged justices of that court "have allowed economics to influence their legal decisions."

"The general welfare of a people is the first duty of a government and the Supreme court has no right to interfere," Hoan added.

HELD FOR SHOOTING DEPUTY.

Benton, Ill., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Joe Carbolino, 65, of Coello, was held in the county jail here today charged with assault to murder following the shooting of Deputy Sherif Hart Coffel in the right arm last night.

REED ASSAILS RED ADVISERS OF ROOSEVELT

Missourian Cites Hostility to Constitution.

James A. Reed, former United States senator from Missouri, pictured Franklin D. Roosevelt last night as a President surrounded entirely by communistic advisors—one who has boldly announced his own violation of the constitution. The fiery Missourian spoke here over a network of the National Broadcasting company on why he as a Jeffersonian Democrat opposes the Democratic nominee for President.

Mr. Reed supported Roosevelt four years ago, he said, as he had supported the Democratic ticket in every campaign for half a century. He styled himself a Democrat of the same sort he always has been, but asserted that a complete new political alignment has taken place.

On one side, he said, are those who believe in preserving our constitution and our form of government; on the other are radicals, communists, and revolutionaries seeking to change and in the end to overthrow the American system of civilization.

The List of Left Wings.

In his picture of the President's radical advisors he paraded David Dubinsky and Sidney Hillman, whom he characterized as agitators of the most virulent type; John L. Lewis, who renounced the leadership of William Green of the American Federation of Labor; Donald Richberg, sometime "assistant president;" Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska; Cabinet Secretaries Ickes, Roper, Wallace, and Morgenthau; Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell, and Felix Frankfurter.

"In 1931," asserted Mr. Reed, "a conference was held in Washington called by Norris and other radical senators for the purpose of boring from within and thus obtaining control of one or both of the great parties. Roosevelt appointed four members of that convention to his cabinet—Roper, Ickes, Wallace, and Morgenthau. The last three never pretended to be Democrats."

The Conference of Usurpation.

The President, according to Reed, confessed he had set up and exercised power under which shackles could be placed on the liberties of the people. Thereby the President admittedly violated the constitution he swore to preserve and protect, the Missourian charged.

"Roosevelt is relying for support largely upon people who are on relief," Mr. Reed concluded, "and upon those who have received financial benefits from the government. Let me admonish all such people to not follow the sad example of Esau by selling their liberties for a mess of pottage. The day will speedily come when an exhausted treasury must cease these payments, and when the burden of taxation falling on all alike, will crush enterprise and destroy hope."

Hard of Hearing Week Proclaimed for Oct. 24

DRUGGAN HIDES

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Terry Druggan, one affluent beer baron of prohibition cays, was arrested for investigation yesterday at Jackson boulevard and Rockwell street by Sergt. Florian Smuczynski and his detective squad. Taken with Druggan was Harold Hayes, who said he owned the Metropole hotel, 2300 South Michigan avenue, old time headquarters of the Capone gang.

"This will ruin my business," moaned Druggan. "I'm a respectable brewer now, you know, out near my home at Prairieview, Ill."

Druggan and Hayes had only $2 between them. They explained this phenomenon by saying they were on the way to a bank. Hayes said he was Druggan's secretary.

CRAZED PROWLER IS CAPTURED IN EVANSTON HOME

Four Evanstonians yesterday captured a demented colored man who broke into a home in the suburb and terrorized a housewife, Mrs. Florence Smithson, 3313 Culver street. The colored man, Arthur Jones, 24 years old, 5742 South State street, former member of a Glenview CCC camp, broke in a basement window while Mrs. Smithson was alone in the house. She fled to the second floor and locked herself in the bathroom. Jones tried to beat down the door with his fists and Mrs. Smithson threw open a window, screaming for help.

Her cries were heard by George and Harold De Vries, 3301 Hartzell street; Kenneth Appleyard, 3301 Culver street, and William Downes, 2615 Crawford avenue. Arming themselves with clubs, the four men dashed into the house and seized Jones. He was examined by Dr. David L. Hedberg, police physician, who recommended he be sent to the psychopathic hospital.

State St. to Mark Birthday of Light System Tuesday

The tenth anniversary of the installation of the modern lighting system in the State street retail district will be celebrated at a luncheon to be held at the Palmer house Tuesday noon. The State Street council which made this announcement yesterday, said that civic and industrial leaders would poin the council in the celebration. As the luncheon date coincides with the anniversary of the invention of the incandescent lamp by Thomas A. Edison, N. H. Boynton of Cleveland, will deliver a tribute to the great inventor.

DEMAND HORNER ANSWER CHARGES MADE IN PRIMARY

Governor Here Today for County Drive.

[The last of a series on state offices to be filled in the election of Nov. 3.]

Never within the memory of the oldest old timers has there been an Illinois election in which utterances during the primary have taken on the importance now given to charges against Gov. Horner, made by members of his own party last spring.

Wayland Brooks, the Republican nominee against Horner, has refrained from personal attacks upon his opponent, but throughout the state there has been a resurrection of bitter assaults upon the governor which he answered during the primary merely by counter-attacks on boss rule and to which he has not refrred this fall.

Horner Comes Here Today.

As Gov. Horner comes into Chicago today to spend the final two weeks of the campaign stumping Cook county, it is predicted that the attention of the voters will be centered largely on these charges since most of them originated here.

The primary attacks on Gov. Horner's record and qualifications for the office he holds were put into formal shape in a sixteen page booklet which was distributed through the Cook county Democratic organization. It was entitled:

"Twenty reasons why Horner would be defeated in the November election were he nominated in the April primary."

Following this heading, the cover of the pamphlet explained that the contents gave the reasons why the "anti-Roosevelt press is hoping for Horner's nomination."

"Many Mistakes" Charged.

"They know," continued the explanation," that Horner's nomination would mean electing a Republican governor in November and the loss of hundreds of thousands of votes for Roosevelt and the entire Democratic ticket."

An introduction to the actual list of reasons recited that "Horner made so many mistakes as governor" that "the party would have an uphill fight to keep Illinois in the Democratic column next November."

"The Horner sales tax alone," read this preface, "very probably would sweep the whole party to defeat."

Some of the twenty reasons thereafter recited have not so much bearing on the election as they had on the primary but some of them as they were listed numerically were as follows:

"1. Taxing the Poor—Favoring the Rich. Horner stands for an unfair sales tax.

Charge Prison Scandals.

"4. Scandalous Prison Mismanagement. Horner's prison administration has been a stench and a scandal.

"5. Did Not Help Labor. Horner failed to help the workingman.

"7. Playing Politics With Roads. Horner, ignoring the pledges of the Democratic party, has played politics with Illinois highways.

"8. Balked Help for Schools. Horner turned a deaf ear to the pleas for real help for the financially embarrassed schools of the state.

"9. Political Assessment of the State Employés. Horner has violated his professed personal principles and the principles of the Democratic party by ordering department heads to sandbag all state employés to contribute from 2 per cent to 9 per cent of their meager salaries to his personal political campaign fund.

Aid for Motorists Opposed.

"10. Opposed Relief for Motorists. Horner, in his lust to build up a surplus in the state treasury, did everything in his power to keep Illinois automobile owners from obtaining necessary tax relief in the shape of reduced motor license fees.

"11. Padded Pay Rolls. Horner, while claiming economies, which were achieved by cutting the pay of regular employés, has padded the pay rolls of the state of Illinois, passing out 'jobs'—for which no work is required—to thousands of persons in order to build up his own personal political campaign organization.

"13. Debauched Civil Service. Horner, while professing adherence to the principles of civil service, has debauched the civil service so that friends of the merit system charge that administration of civil service laws in the state during the Horner administration has been the worst in the history of the state.

The Age Pension Law.

"14. Balked Old Age Pension Law. Horner, by his desire to build up a personal dictatorship, nearly wrecked the possibility of old age pension legislation for Illinois.

"15. Failure as an Executive. Horner is wholly lacking in executive ability.

"16. Attempted to Boss the Legislature. Horner, while making a poor executive, arrogantly attempted to boss the legislature of Illinois, thus exceeding his constitutional powers and causing wasteful confusion.

"17. Curbing the Poor Man's Pleasure. Horner favored hypocrisy in liquor control. He insisted that neither beer nor liquor of any kind be permitted to be sold except in restaurants and clubs and then only with meals.

"Squandering of State Money."

"18. Squandering of State Money. Horner encouraged extravagance and secret spending of the public money, insisting on large lump sum appropriations instead of itemized appropriations—a backward step in legislation, the constitutionality of which has been seriously questioned. These tactics permitted personal squandering of state funds and the placing of thousands of payrollers on the pay rolls.

"19. Spite Influenced Official Acts. Horner has permitted spite and personal caprice to color and influence his position on legislation affecting the welfare of the state and Chicago."

These quotations are, for the most part, merely the headings of the twenty sections of the pamphlet. Following them were detailed support for the reasons why "Horner would not be elected."

"A Tax on Poverty."

Among some of the more vitriolic parts of this kind of text were these statements:

"He has refused to listen when the leaders of the party have pointed out that under the Horner plan the sales tax became a tax on poverty, that it is a means of shifting the tax burden from the rich and placing it on the poor—the poor who are least able to pay the tax. The home owner realizes that he is forced to pay much more in sales tax than the little he saves on property tax and that the persons who really benefit from the Horner sales tax are the wealthy owners of loop property—about 150 wealthy corporations or persons, most of whom do not even live in Chicago."

"Victor A. Olander, secretary of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, resigned last June from commissions to which Horner appointed them in protest against Horner's failure to get anything done for organized labor. In a statement issued June 25, 1935, Mr. Olander denounced the Horner administration for its disregard of legislation sought by labor."

Charges Contractor Deals.

"Horner has permitted his appointees to call in contractors who do work for the state and 'invite' them to contribute to the Horner slush fund, knowing that such contributions later are added to the cost of materials and thus paid for by the taxpayers of the state."

"Small salaried employés in all state institutions were threatened with dismissal if they failed to become dues paying members of the Illinois Iroquois league, a political organization controled by Horner."

"Horner's opposition prevented the greater reduction in state automobile license fees that was urged by Mayor Kelly and Secretary Hughes."

The Legislative Sessions.

"The legislators of both parties resented unwaranted interference on the part of a blundering governor and, as a consequence, Illinois was cheated out of much good legislation although Horner kept the legislature in session at great expense to the taxpayers probably longer than in any other period in the history of the state."

The resurrection of the Democrat versus Democrat charges have included republication of some of the many things Mayor Kelly said against Gov. Horner last spring. A few follow:

"Horner owes the school board $2,500,000 for the crippled children's fund, but we can't get it, even though he has a fifteen million dollar kitty."

"I told him [Horner] he had been a good judge, but as a governor he was a hod carrier. You don't send for a hod carrier when you want a fine watch fixed. There are a lot of people in this audience who would make a better governor than Horner."

"I understand that at least 10,000 people have been placed on the payrolls on jobs with no work, to be paid out of the 3 cent sales tax."

With material of this sort being brought into the campaign everywhere, the voters have given little attention to subjects ordinarily discussed in a campaign. Even the Horner managers have devoted no space to his record before he went to Springfield.

Usual Discussions Sidetracked.

In brief, the record shows that, as the candidate of the Democratic machine in Chicago, which he now assails for "bossism," he was elected six times as probate judge of Cook county. He was the personal candidate of the late A. J. Cermak for the governorship and in the primary ran third in the downstate area. Cook county's overwhelming vote nominated him.

The story of Wayland Brooks' life is well known to the voters of the state as the result of his recent campaigns. Twice he was beaten only by Democratic landslides, the Roosevelt victory of 1932 and the "off year" machine victory of 1934.

In the first instance he was nominated for state treasurer and in the second for congressman-at-large. Proclaiming that they were not a bit discouraged, since he proved himself the best Republican vote getter in Illinois, his supporters backed him for governor this year and brought him an overwhelming victory over seven opponents last April.

Political Notes

Daniel C. Roper, secretary of commerce, will speak at a dinner next Friday in the Hotel Sherman under the auspices of the Good Neighbor league, an "independent" organization seeking the reëlection of President Roosevelt. Other dinners honoring the President will be held at the same hour in other cities throughout the country. Mr. Roosevelt will address the meetings by radio from the White House.

A petition asking the United States Supreme court to review the decision of state authorities in taking communist party candidates off the Illinois ballot was sent to Washington by plane yesterday, according to the announcement of John Martin, state party campaign manager. The petition will set the constitutionality of the Illinois election law, Martin said.

"Women were largely responsible for the enactment of prohibition. Now they are helping the return of prohibition because they spend so much time in saloons and cocktail bars." This is the observation of Dr. Leigh Colvin, the prohibition party candidate for President, who arrived in Chicago yesterday. "I have spoken in thirty-two states, more than any other presidential candidate," Dr. Colvin said. "Everywhere I find the same complaint. People are disgusted at the sight of women perched on stools at bars." Dr. Colvin assailed President Roosevelt, asserting that the New Deal has been responsible for the return of "the highly monopolistic liquor industry which has taken eight billion dollars of the people's money since repeal."

Choose Public Officials on Ability, League Urged

The selection of public employés solely on their ability to administer duties is the most esesntial need of American government, said Richard Graves, chairman of the civil service committee of the American Municipal league. He spoke yesterday at the closing convention meeting of the organization in the Stevens hotel. "Naturally the cities, mayors, and councils we represent are not as convinced of this as we are," Graves said. "One of the reasons we cannot continue on a political basis is that government functions are becoming more technical and complex."

GARNER LAUDS 'CONSERVATISM' OF ROOSEVELT

Defends 'True American' Acts of New Deal.

Uvalde, Tex., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Vice President John N. Garner declared tonight in his first speech of the campaign that the administration's program represents "the highest type of true American conservatism" and that "the safest thing that could happen to this country is the reëlection of President Roosevelt."

In a nation-wide broadcast from his home the Vice President defended the President against charges that he welcomed communistic support, asserting that "Franklin D. Roosevelt is no more of a communist than I am, and in my own country I generally am estimated as a hard-headed business man."

He said "the one outstanding and dominating issue of this campaign is whether you think Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Landon is better qualified to conduct the business of the federal government for the next four years."

Terms Errors Negligible.

"I do not pretend that everything done by this administration was destitute of errors, but I do insist that the mistakes were mere flyspecks compared with the aggregate good that was accomplished.

"I had thought that in this campaign the electorate was going to be asked to judge the Roosevelt administration on its record as contrasted with the theories and policies which the Republican party intended to present.

"That is the way in which campaigns have been fought in the past. It is the only yardstick which can be applied successfully if we have the future of this government and its citizens at heart.

"That is not the way, however, in which the challenging party is conducting the campaign this year."

Deplores Abusive Campaign.

At the outset of his speech the Vice President decried the "intemperate language and violent abuse" coming from all parties in the campaign.

"It seems to me," he said, "that we might be able to hold an election in this country without cussing each other and making accusations which, if they had any foundation, would suggest that Leavenworth penitentiary rather than the capitol or White House at Washington was the fitting destination of a candidate.

"Down here in Uvalde the rattle of political musketry reaches us but faintly. We look around us here, as I know they do in hundreds of other communities like this in the United States, and wonder what all the shooting is about. There is no evidence before us of the terrible conditions we hear described. Instead there are evidences on every hand of tremendous improvement and better times.

Discounts Republican Warnings.

"I know, and I may add, my Republican friends—of whom I have many—know equally well that the present economic condition of the United States is due to the efforts of our President. I know, and they know, that the dire prophecies that are made by the crowd that would like to regain control of the government are of the stuff that dreams are made of."

He said the charge that President Roosevelt is an enemy to business is "perhaps the most grotesque of the arguments advanced by the minority party candidates and those who are their allies for revenue only.

"I think I am as much concerned with the integrity of the affairs of commerce and finance as the next citizen," he continued. "I have a family. I have, in the course of my life, succeeded in building up some little enterprises that are moderately successful—not successful to the extent that would qualify me for fellowship in the Liberty league, but to give my children and grandchildren a respectable start in life.

Fears No New Taxes.

"I have no fear either for myself or for my children that unbearable taxes will be required to meet the burden the federal government had to assume in the face of disasters brought on by the depression.

"The President has told you that if the present upward course of business continues no higher taxes are on the way. From long experience with the President I am able to state that he is given neither to undue optimism nor to reckless statements in any direction."

Referring to Republican claims that they can administer relief more efficiently and with less waste than the Democrats, Mr. Garner said:

"If there is anything in the history of this country to indicate that the relief program could have been carried on or will be carried on with greater efficiency and honesty under Republican rule, then I have yet to discover that evidence.

Recalls Teapot Dome.

"I was one of those men who sat in congress while there was being unrolled before our eyes the evidences of corruption under a Republican administration that shocked the nation and will stand for all time as an affront to public decency. I refer to the Teapot Dome and Elk Hill oil scandals and the abominable perversion of the veterans' administration under the Harding administration.

"But it is not necessary to go back to the oil scandals. The memory is still fresh with us of the bungling and inept Hoover administration which mishandled every major problem presented by the depression."

OPERA BALLET REHERSES

Josephine Seymour (left) and Betsy Ross, with 48 other young ballerinas, try out for Chicago Civic Opera ballet. Thirty dancers were selected. These girls are dancing before a mirror.

50 in Tryouts

Rehersals for the Chicago civic opera ballet, directed by Ruth Page, premiére danseuse, began yesterday on the 14th floor of the Civic Opera house. More than 50 young ballerinas tried out for the ballet, for which 30 are needed.

Miss Page is planning two spectacular new ballets for the coming opera season, she disclosed. One, executed with a touch of modern buffoonery, will be a ballet for George Gershwin's "An American in Paris," which will be given possibly in late December.

The other, "An American Woman," presents in dance the "problem of the modern woman," Miss Page said. Dance steps can illustrate this problem much more deftly than words, she explained. Music for the latter, which probably will be given when the opera company presents Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi," was written by Jerome Moross. Costumes and scenery for both were designed by Nicholas Remisoff.

Birth of 'Quads' Ties Up Whole N. Y. Police Routine

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—One hundred and seventy-five detectives, twenty-nine subjects for the daily lineup at headquarters, and incidental police officials were delayed forty-two minutes today because a green-eyed cat had quadruplets in the finger print file room.

STATE BLOCKING 31 RESURFACING PROJECTS HERE

Thirty-one street resurfacing projects in Chicago were still tied up yesterday by the state highway department's refusal to approve the allocation of $1,615,148 of the city's $7,000,000 share of accumulated 1936 gasoline taxes. Refusal of the state to give Chicago its own money has been attributed to the political feud between Gov. Horner and Mayor Kelly which developed at the April Democratic primary fight.

Chicago has been trying unsuccessfully since last June to get some of its money to carry on the resurfacing jobs. The Works Progress administration has set aside approximately $30,000,000 to be used for this work when the city can provide part of the funds.

Hope was raised that Chicago would get some of the money when Ernst Lieberman, chief highway engineer and Gov. Horner's spokesman on highway matters, notified the city nearly two weeks ago that the state would approve the thirty-one projects as soon as the council passed the necessary ordinances. The council met the next day and passed them.

At the time the ordinances were passed attention was called to the fact that the state had held up work so long that the summer working months had been wasted.

Geographic Medal to Go to Lincoln Ellsworth

The Geographic Society of Chicago announced yesterday that its annual gold medal award for distinguished geographic service will be presented to Lincoln Ellsworth, flyer and explorer, at the society's yearly luncheon next Saturday in the Stevens hotel. Mr. Ellsworth was selected because of his trips into the arctic and antarctic. The presentation will be made by Col. Tryggve A. Siqueland, president of the society.

PREDICTS LANDON ELECTORAL VOTE TO BE 315 TO 350

Hamilton Cites Majority in Digest Poll.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A claim that Gov. Alf M. Landon will have between 315 and 350 votes in the electoral college was made last night by John Hamilton, Republican national chairman. Necessary for election are 266 votes.

Hamilton based his predictions on the Literary Digest poll and on what he called a "decided pickup" in contributions to the Landon-Knox campaign fund. He traced this to the tour of Illinois, Ohio, and Michigan which Gov. Landon has just completed. Contributions were received from more than 11,000 persons on one single day last week, he announced.

"The Literary Digest poll, which never has been wrong, gives Gov. Landon 1,004,086 votes and Mr. Roosevelt 728,088 votes out of a total of 1,811,489," said Hamilton. "This makes Gov. Landon's percentage of the popular vote 55.4 per cent against only 40.1 per cent for President Roosevelt, or 370 electoral votes against 161.

"Small polls here and there show a majority for the New Deal candidate, other similar polls are against him. But none of these faintly approaches the huge volume of the Literary Digest poll and its reputation for accuracy. I remember how we tried to prove the Digest polls wrong in 1932; look how wrong we were.

"Commenting on the Digest poll on Oct. 15, 1932, James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, said: 'Any sane person cannot escape the implication of such gigantic sampling of public opinion as is shown in the Literary Digest poll. I consider this conclusive evidence as to the desire of the people of this country for a change in the national government. It is a poll fairly and correctly conducted.'

"If Mr. Farley's enthusiasm of four years ago was waranted—and the returns proved it was—the same basis of conclusion is good this year.

"Probably the most significant part of the current Digest poll is the vast number of Democrats who voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, but who this year are voting for Gov. Landon," Mr. Hamilton added. "In most of the states north of the Mason and Dixon line, which either party must carry to win, an average of about one out of every three Democrats is voting for Gov. Landon.

"Apply this percentage only to the fifteen million Democratic votes of 1928 and it is clear that we are conservative in predicting that four or five million Democrats who voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 will vote for Gov. Landon this year. This is a turnover of eight to ten million votes.

"Out of a total 61,981 votes cast in the Digest poll for William Lemke, third party candidate, 40,707 voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932. From these figures it is apparent that Father Coughlin's candidate is drawing the big majority of his support from the New Deal.

"Complete votes of a number of big Democratic cities are not included in the Digest poll to date. From our own careful canvass of the situation, however, we are confident that there is not enough New Deal sentiment in these cities to overcome Gov. Landon's tremendous lead."

MONMOUTH ATHLETE IN DRESSES DATES UNWARY FRESHMAN

Monmouth, Ill., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Leap year week-end at Monmouth college—they put convention in reverse gear so the co-eds could date the boys and pay the bills—provided a campus-wide laugh today.

One of the school's belles arranged to escort a freshman last night. The delighted freshman went to his fraternity house living room to receive his demure companion. The smile faded from his face when she appeared—hulking, broad shouldered and bass voiced.

His surprise turned to chagrin when he learned his "girl for the evening" was one of Monmouth's football heroes in feminine attire.

Many of the men whom the girls had taken out for a movie and an after the show snack sneaked back to the restaurants later for more substantial repasts.

Otherwise the experiment was hailed as a success.

LANDON FORCES ROOSEVELT INTO DEFENSIVE PLEA

President Is Silent About Leftist Plans.

gage the attention of the public. The New York Daily News which was wrong in 1928 but right in 1932 is conducting a poll of New York state on the basis of which it predicts that Roosevelt will carry that state by three quarters of a million. If that is correct it is all over but the shouting, for Gov. Landon cannot win without New York's 47 votes and conversely, a Democratic candidate who bags New York always wins.

I think I betray no confidence when I say that Farley's claim to all but three states for Roosevelt is viewed by his colleagues with the indulgence usually accorded his utterances. They put it in the same category as his claim of a surplus for the post office department.

Hamilton Nearer Correct.

So far as the east is concerned it is dollars to doughnuts that Hamilton is nearer right than Farley. It is in the conservative populeus territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio that the Republican cause is strongest and even if Gov. Landon should be defeated he probably will carry more eastern states than will Mr. Roosevelt.

The president and his managers are well aware of this; that's why Mr. Roosevelt is concentrating on the east, why he, as well as Gov. Landon, will wind up his campaign in the pivotal state of New York.

If Gov. Landon should carry all the eastern half of the country outside of the south and the border states of Maryland, West Virginia and Kentucky he would have a total of 243 electoral votes and his election would merely be a question of an added 23 votes west of the Mississippi to make up the required 266, which is the majority of the electoral college of 531 votes.

Good Landon Prospects.

States west of the Mississippi which are good Landon prospects are Arizona, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota and Wyoming with a total of 63 votes. With only 23 of these necessary to a majority Gov. Landon would win hands down.

But if Gov. Landon should lose New York he would be done for. Even with the rest of the east in the bag he still would need 70 votes west of the Mississippi, a larger number than it seems reasonable at this time he could expect to obtain in that region.

I think there is little question that Gov. Landon will receive the electoral votes of all six New England states. I believe he will carry Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Michigan. I think he probably will carry Ohio.

Fifteen Votes Short of Victory.

If Gov. Landon were to carry all the east except Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin, he would need 78 votes west of the Mississippi, 15 more than the number there is a reasonable prospect of him getting. He could lose Illinois or Indiana and Wisconsin and still stand a good chance of victory, provided he captured all the rest of the east. On the other hand if the Republican prospects west of the Mississippi were to fail Landon in any material degree he would need to carry every northern state east of the Mississippi if he were to win by an eyelash.

Mr. Roosevelt starts with the solid south and the border states with a total of 151 electoral votes. To these may be added the good Democratic prospects west of the Mississippi which are California, Idaho, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah, and Washington, with an aggregate of 74 votes. With this grand total of 225 he would need only 41 more. New York would turn the trick. Or Illinois with either Indiana or Wisconsin.

Among politicians it is a matter of wide comment that Mr. Roosevelt has lost the initiative in the campaign fighting within the last week or two. He is now fighting definitly on the defensive, endeavoring to answer the questions Gov. Landon hurls at him, evading or ignoring them. He has been on the defensive from the moment he found it necessary to disavow the support of the communists who were making out such a good case for voting for the reëlection of the President if what is wanted is to promote the early attainment of communism in America.

The edge of this repudiation was considerably blunted by the reaction of the communists who not only endured the rebuff with a smile but reiterated that the all important matter for communists and other socialists in this election is to defeat Landon, whose election would check their drive for the socialist state.

Same Backing in Wisconsin.

Another development that even aspersed the good faith of the repudiation was the action of the President in causing the withdrawal of Democratic candidates in Minnesota in favor of candidates of the Farmer-Labor party, the Socialist unit designated by the communists to serve in this election as the "popular front" against capitalism.

Furthermore it was disclosed that the most potent support of the President in Wisconsin is being furnished by this same "popular front" against capitalism in the shape of the Farmer-Labor Progressive league, organized by the La Follettes and indorsed by the communists.

Then Gov. Landon demanded a categorical answer from the President as to his New Deal program for the next four years if he should be reëlected. Is the President going to resume the march toward a dictatorship which was interrupted by the Supreme Court? Is he going to reconstitute the NRA and the AAA and change the form of government in such manner that labor, industry, and agriculture would be regimented and directed by a federal burocracy?

This was recognized at once as a thrust at one of the weakest points in the President's armor. It is the one matter on which he has been more eloquently silent than on any other ever since his first suggestion of a change in the form of government in his famous "horse and buggy" fling at the Supreme court was coldly received by the country and by his party.

The New York Times, leading newspaper supporter of the President, pronounced Gov. Landon's question a fair one that Mr. Roosevelt should answer. Up to date, however, the President has not answered it.

HINDU-MOSLEM RIOTS SPREAD IN BOMBAY; 46 KILLED, 390 INJURED

BOMBAY, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Casualties in the fierce rioting between Moslems and Hindus rose tonight to 46 killed and 390 injured as the disorders slowly spread to the densely populated mill area. For three days, flashing knives and barking guns have spread terror through the region.

Nine attempts to set fires were made, and one Hindu temple was burned to the ground. Police fired on six occasions into mobs of rioters. Troops, held in readiness, were not called into action. The police wore protecting shields of wicker three feet in diameter.

The rioting started during the construction of a Hindu place of worship near a mosque.

THE VOLUNTEERS, A CROSS SECTION OF A LARGE CITY

Rolls Show Accountants to WPA Workers.

Who are the Volunteers?

The list of occupations of the thousands and hundreds of thousands who have joined the patriotic organization to fight for Landon and Knox begins with "accountant" and ends with "WPA worker."

Between these alphabetical extremes are listed hundreds of trades and employments, professions, and businesses. The list grows daily as the Volunteers movement spreads from state to state, county to city, village to farm. More than one million already. Seventeen days to save America.

Blacksmith Listed, Too.

In the "A's" are an auctioneer, an assembler, an author, an aviator. The "B's" begin with baker, then barber, beautician, bellhop, and blacksmith. National headquarters observes that the latter must be a holdover from the "horse and buggy age" President Roosevelt talked about after the Supreme court knocked the NRA out of the New Deal alphabet.

There is a book agent, a bread wagon driver, a bricklayer, a butcher. The butcher is the man who must sell bacon with an 8½ cent tax per pound on it—a tax that came along with the New Deal's "more abundant life."

In the "C's" are a cabinet maker, a car conductor, a car washer, a carpenter, a caterer, a chandelier maker—the modern candlestick maker, to complete the childhood jingle. A chemist, a comptometer operator, a cook, and a cutter. "D" begins with dental assistant and ends with dyer. In the "E" column are an electrician, an elevator operator, and an enamel sprayer. Headquarters remarked that it would take a lot of enamel to cover up the New Deal failures.

Factory Workers and Farmers.

"F" contains a factory worker, a farmer, a fireman, a flagman, a florist, a foreman, a funeral director, a furnace hand, and a furrier; the "G's" gown designer, grain man, grocery man, guard.

From hairdresser to houseman run the "H's". Then skipping at random through the list: Iron worker, janitor, judge, laborer, lacker roller, lawyer, letter carrier—even a "literati," as one signer of a Volunteer pledge card gave his occupation.

In the M list are machine operator, maid, mailer, mechanic, meat cutter, merchant, messenger, minister, milkman, milliner, millwright, missionary down to "mother." There was no explanation of this designation. The Volunteer officers hazard the thought that she may have been thinking of her children and the debt the New Dealers have piled upon them.

Oculists and Red Caps.

There is an oculist and an optometrist, a painter, a pharmacist, a physical director, a pilot—"both lake and river," he wrote. And a plumber, a policeman, a polisher. Yes, and a "politician." Follows three types of porters, Pullman, hotel and red cap. A large Volunteer unit has been enrolled among the smiling, red-capped, blue-jacketed boys at the railroad terminals.

A printer, a proof reader, a plasterer, and a physiotherapist are listed among the "P's." Then comes a radio worker, a real estate man, a roofer, a service man, a shoe worker, a social service worker, a stenographer, a stevedore, a stockman, a student, and a secretary.

Teachers and Unemployed.

The "T's" start with a tailor and produce a teacher, teamster, tearoom manager, telegraph operator, telephone operator, theater manager, timekeeper, tool maker, truck driver—there are many of them—typesetter and trained nurse. Undertaker, unemployed, upholsterer, usher, runs the list. Only one occupation is listed in the "V" column, a veterinary.

The "W's" have a waiter, waitress, watchmaker, weaver, welder, window trimmer, window washer, wood pattern maker, and at the end, the WPA worker. He is only one of hundreds of those on the federal dole who asked for Volunteer buttons and are working for Landon and Knox.

Sixth Ward Young Republicans Join the Volunteers

Floyd R. Cunningham (seated, left), president of the ward's Young People's Republican club, and Patrick Sheridan Smith (right), Sixth ward committeeman, enrolling members of the club in the Volunteers, patriotic organization working to preserve a free America. The meeting was held at 6546 Cottage Grove avenue.

LEHMAN CALLS EXTRA SESSION TO LENGTHEN TIME FOR BALLOTING

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman issued a proclamation today calling an extra session of the state legislature to pass on a proposal to add three hours to the voting time on election day. The time extension is deemed necessary to take care of the large vote anticipated from the record registrations reported throughout the state.

Calling of the special session was decided upon by the governor after conferences with the Republican and Democratic legislative leaders. Formal requests for lengthened voting hours was made to the governor here last week by the New York City board of elections when it became apparent that unless this relief was obtained voters of the Bronx, Queens, and Richmond would be forced to use paper ballots on Nov. 3, due to a shortage of voting machines occasioned by 560,000 increase in the Greater city's registration over the previous all-time record set in 1932.

SONSTEBY HIDES JURY LISTS, SAYS CASEY IN LETTER

Asks Bar's Aid to See if There Is Manipulation.

Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court was accused of withholding the jury lists of the court from public inspection in a statement issued yesterday by Judge Edward B. Casey. Judge Casey is Judge Sonsteby's Republican opponent in the November election.

"I want to examine those lists to see if fraud has been perpetrated in compiling them," Judge Casey said in his statement. "I have repeatedly requested copies of the list and have asked permission to examine the jury rolls in the office of the chief justice, but my requests have been denied. I think an examination of the jury rolls would show manipulation."

Letter to Bar Association.

Judge Casey his written a letter to the Chicago Bar association, asking help in getting the records.

"Being one of the judges of the Municipal court, you might suppose that the court records would be available to me," he said in the bar association letter, "but that is not the case."

Matter of Public Record.

"I told him exactly what I expect to find in the records," Judge Casey said, "but I don't want to make any public charges concerning jury frauds until I have seen the records. These are public records. Why should Judge Sonsteby hide them, when a simple examination could disprove the charges I made to him if they are untrue?"

Judge Sonsteby could not be reached yesterday for an answer to Judge Casey's accusation.

Mother Is Made Guardian of Girl Picked for Opera

Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to the probate judge, yesterday issued guardianship papers for Betty Jane Schultz, 15 years old, youthful soprano, to her mother, Mrs. Stella Schultz, 8012 Essex avenue. The papers were necessary so that Mrs. Schultz may sign a contract for her daughter with the Chicago City Opera company with which she will sing this winter. Betty Jane has been picked to sing the rôle of Mimi in the opera "La Boheme," according to Paul Longone, general manager of the opera company. The girl is a student at the Starrett School for Girls, 4515 Drexel boulevard.

Robbed by Machine Gun Bandits Who Curb Auto

Nicholas Rieter, 28 years old, 11333 South Park avenue, part owner of a filling station at 437 West 111th street, was robbed of $441 yesterday by three masked bandits who curbed his automobile at Wentworth avenue and 103d street as he was returning from a bank. One of the robbers was carrying a submachine gun, Rieter told police. Kensington police said the bandits may have been the trio of Indiana desperadoes, known as the "new Dillinger" gang, who broke out of the Greenfield, Ind., jail last Sunday, and have been reported seen near Hammond.

URGE NEW DEAL DEFEAT TO SAVE FREEDOM OF U. S.

Brooks and Glenn Make Joint Appeal.

American men and women must vote out the New Dealers on Nov. 3 if they want their country to continue as a free nation with an equitable distribution of opportunity. This appeal was made last night by Wayland Brooks, Republican candidate for governor, and by Otis F. Glenn, Republican candidate for United States senator, before 500 members of the John Ericsson Republican league of Illinois.

Mr. Brooks paid tribute to the memory of John Ericsson, noted Swedish engineer, and praised members of the Scandinavian race "who for centuries have known and still know the joy of popular government."

Tells Record in Illinois.

"The New Deal administration in Washington in 1935 demanded the right to dictate the Illinois law and the terms under which we would receive federal coöperation in the provisions for our unemployed, our destitute, and our aged," said Brooks. "That same federal government, dictating our law, took from our people $194,000,000 more than we received in relief from the federal government.

"We find our state administration, while bowing to the edicts of the federal government, has also collected $200,000,000 more from our people than any previous administration, and this excessive taxation at a time when our earnings were at their lowest ebb. While vast sums were being collected under the guise of relief, 10,000 paid workers were put on the pay rolls of the Illinois relief commission. Our state law, which was intended to provide for the aged, was not allowed to stand. It was changed under the direction of the federal government, until now the law is nothing but a charity to paupers.

"I believe we will never put men back to work as long as we continue to pile up taxes. If we can guarantee to our people that no burocratic government will meddle with their lives, their savings, their opportunities, America will go forward as she has done under our form of government for a century and a half."

Hits Strange Theories.

Mr. Glenn warned that strange theories by impractical planners would substitute for the American system processes of government which have failed in every country in which they have been tried.

"The country needs the Republican party," he said. "We must turn out the New Deal because strange voices, and strange theories now occupy the national capitol. Never before in our history have communists dared to parade the streets of our cities, carrying the red flag of anarchy and singing the Internationale. Yet none of these communists has been deported, probably because the ships were too full of New Dealers on their way to Moscow."

Dr. E. P. Joslin of Harvard to Head Medical Society

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 17.—[U. P.]—Dr. Elliott P. Joslin, Harvard medical school professor, will succeed Dr. John Erdmann, New York, as president of the International Medical association in 1937. Delegates to the association convention also chose Dr. A. Merrill Miller, Danville, Ill., to succeed the late Dr. Edward S. Murphy, Dixon, Ill., on the board of trustees.

GUARD VETERAN TO RETIRE

On Armory Board

After more than 22 years of service Col. Lawrence V. Regan, chief of staf of the 33d division of the Illinois National Guard, announced yesterday he had forwarded to Adjt. Gen. Carlos Black a request that he be placed on the retired list. Under the law Col. Regan will retire as a brigadier general.

Col. Regan enlisted as a private in Troop F, 1st cavalry of the Illinois National Guard on Dec. 29, 1913. During the world war he served overseas, particpating in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne operations and in the division's earlier campaigns in France. He was decorated with the Silver Star Citation medal with two oak leaf clusters. Col. Regan also saw service on the Mexican border in 1916.

Col. Regan explained he asked to be placed on the retirement list so as to devote his full time to the Illinois army board, of which he is executive and fiscal officer. The board is now engaged in plans for the construction of 18 armories throughout the state.

The new chief of staf of the 33d division will be Lieut. Col. Leroy E. Nelson, who was an officer of the old 1st cavalry and commanded a battalion of the 122d field artillery in France.

3 BANDITS ROB WOMAN AS HER ESCORT ESCAPES

Morris Haas, 40 years old, 3411 Elaine place, part owner of the Morrey Millinery shop, 1242 South Halsted street, and Mrs. Bella Shay, 47, of 1827 Scoville avenue, Berwyn, an employé, were about to enter his automobile in front of the shop last night when three bandits drove up.

Haas braved the chance that they would fire and fled, police said, but Mrs. Shay was not quick enough to follow. The gunmen pushed her into their car. They took $17 and a wrist watch, valued at $40, from her and then threw her out of their car at Adams and Morgan street.

CRIPPLED GIRL, 20, ASKS COURT TO JAIL HER FATHER

Miss Anna Kroll, 20 years old, 823 Webster avenue, whose legs were crippled because of an illness of infantile paralysis, urged Judge Erwin J. Hasten in Town Hall court yesterday to send her father, Bernard, 58 years old, to jail.

"I am continually failing in my classes at the Spaulding School for the Crippled," she told the court, "because my father comes home drunk ad makes so much disturbance by cursing and raving that I can't do my lessons." The girl was joined in her plea by her mother, Mrs. Eugenie Kroll, 45 years old.

When Kroll insisted he didn't see any harm in cursing in his own home, Judge Hasten fined him $100 and then placed him on probation for six months. The judge warned him that if he did any drinking during the probation period he would be sent to the Bridewell.

HORNER BORROWS AN IDEA: CLAIMS 250,000 VICTORY

Speaks in McHenry and Lake Counties.

Gov. Horner reversed the predictions on his Republican opponents yesterday with the forecast that the Democratic national and state tickets will carry the 101 downstate counties of Illinois by 250,000 votes—the exact figure Wayland Brooks and Otis F. Glenn, heads of the Republican ticket, used Friday as the G. O. P. margin of victory.

Mr. Horner prepared to enter his Cook county campaign by speaking in McHenry and Lake counties. He addressed a large meeting at Woodstock in the afternoon and spoke in Waukegan and Highland Park during the evening.

Just before the governor arrived Walter Kelley of Crystal Lake, Democratic candidate for state's attorney of McHenry county, spoke.

"The Democratic organization in McHenry is not working," Kelley said flatly. "Unless something is done to put the Democratic county candidates in office, the people on the state payroll here will find they have no jobs. The precinct committeemen are not working."

In Highland Park where the governor addressed 300 persons at the Elm Place school, he referred to the bitter primary campaign, in which he defeated Dr. Herman N. Bundesen.

"I promised in 1932 to be governor of the wh[ole] state," said Mr. Horner, "and I ke[pt] that promise. You know how I got into a lot of trouble last April as a result."

John Ste[l]le, candidate for lieutenant governo[r], who supported Bundesen, was sitt[ing] on the platform. He grinned shee[p]ishly.

BROWDER ASKS COURT TO FORCE NAME ON TICKETS IN ILLINOIS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—With the presidential elections only a little more than two weeks away, Elmer Johnson of Illinois today demanded that the Supreme court take steps to force Gov. Horner and other state officials to place the names of Earl Browder and James W. Ford, communist presidential and vice presidential candidates, on the election ballots Nov. 3.

Mr. Johnson filed a brief with the court attacking the governor, Secretary of State Hughes, State Auditor Barrett and seven county clerks because the names of communist electors have not been certified nor preparations made to include the names of Browder and Ford.

The Federal District court in Illinois dismissed the Johnson suit Oct. 5, without rendering an opinion. Thereupon Mr. Johnson appealed to the Circuit court, but he now desires to jump the case past the Circuit court direct to the Supreme court. Seeking a Supreme court review, Mr. Johnson says a question of national interest and importance is presented.

Guest Fatally Scalded in His Hotel Bathtub

Christ Phipps, 45 years old, a paper salesman from New York City, died last night in the Columbus Memorial hospital of scalds received when he fell asleep in his bath last Thursday in the Knickerbocker hotel, 163 East Walton place. Police said that Phipps got into the tub early Thursday morning and drowsed off while the hot water was running from the faucet. Phipps' home was at 8 Highway way, Larchmont, N. Y.

HEIR TO WOOLEN MILLIONS FREED ON $25,000 BAIL

New York, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Andrew G. Pierce III., 26 year old heir to the American Woolen millions and husband of Mrs. Marion Hughes Whitehead Pierce, New York heiress, was released in $25,000 bail tonight from alimony jail, where he was lodged early in the day on charges preferred by his wife.

Pierce was arrested in a midtown hotel last night on an affidavit sworn out by his wife, who charged him with cruelty, consorting with women of ill repute, and abandoning her on Oct. 26, 1935, two years after their marriage.

Deputies took Pierce into custody after his wife identified him from a seat in a taxicab as he sat in the grill room of the hotel. She said he was getting ready to leave for St. Paul, Minn., on a duck hunting trip.

Mrs. Pierce has started suit for a separation and an "adequate" separation allowance. Late in the day she drove to the alimony jail, was ushered into her husband's cell, and remained inside for half an hour.

CHIEF OF AUSTRIA HINTS OTTO MAY BE GIVEN THRONE

VIENNA, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg gave guarded encouragement to Austria's monarchists tonight and hinted that the people may some day have a chance to decide whether Archduke Otto shall be made emperor.

In a blast of defiance which observers said was directed at the little entente nations, Dr. Schuschnigg in an address to fatherland front leaders shouted:

"No outsider, but only Austrians will decide whether the monarchy shall be restored!"

The day of a plebiscite to decide on the question of restoration of the Hapsburg claimant to the throne is "not yet in sight," the chancellor said. But, with Princess Adelheid, sister of Archduke Otto, listening, he declared that monarchist propaganda has a "proper place" in Austrian life.

CHICAGO'S Coffee Taste is most discriminating

*This was the test that proved Chicago hostesses are as quick to appreciate fine coffee flavor as they are to choose English china, Irish linen, and distinctive quality and pattern in their Sterling. Samples of different blends and roasts of coffee were tested by 4648 homes in Chicago and suburbs for a week this spring. These homes were then asked to choose the blend that best pleased their taste. And their choice was one which agrees with that of the leading coffee experts of the world!

The unusually delicate and aromatic blend of upland plantation coffees these Chicago families selected is the Extra-Fancy Blend of Royal Jewel Coffee—Perfect for Chicago's water, climate, and coffee-making conditions—it is available, always fresh, at your own Jewel Food Store.

CHICAGO'S UNUSUALLY KEEN coffee taste was demonstrated in Jewel's Chicago coffee test this spring.* Not only did Chicago vote for a blend of special upland plantation coffees famous among experts as mild and particularly aromatic . . . but for this blend of coffee very delicately roasted to bring out the volatile essences which make good coffee universally popular.

BENNETT GIVES A CLOSEUP OF LANDON THE MAN

Veteran Writer Sizes Him Up at Short Range.

If you have time for six sentences (sixty-six words), these give you Landon at a glance:

"We must quit government by ukase.

"There is no future on the relief rolls.

"Every dollar foolishly spent means a dollar less for the things that are necessary and wise.

"The American people can have their nation back.

"You've got a hard job ahead of you, fellow countrymen, but you've got the strength to do it.

ALF M. LANDON.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

During the five days I made random record of Gov. Landon's conversation in Topeka and on trains he talked about—

Homemade bread. . . . The value of a giggle. . . . Foreign relations. . . . And the lost martingale.

Napoleon Bonaparte. . . . Peggy Ann and "the way of the truth and the light." . . . How to reduce government expenses. . . . And 4-H clubs.

Pigs' knuckles and sauerkraut. . . . The Emperor Diocletian. . . . Brown eyes. . . . And the worst kind of ignorance.

Going to church. . . . Newspaper photographers and a nominee's children. . . . Campaign trips. . . . And an honest day's work.

The spirit of helping one another. . . . School teachers and a special oath. . . . And reading versus horseback riding.

It was cheerful talk, spontaneous, casual, unpretentious, and often enlivened with fun, but never with guffaws. Its moral quality was kindliness; its intellectual quality a forthright shrewdness that went straight to the nub of a matter—as when, the subject of a statute obligating school teachers to take a special oath having come up, he said, "They want to pull it down to the level of a suspect profession, eh?" His grunt of disapproval was emphatic.

An Honest Day's Work.

And again, some elaborate ethical formula for elevating everybody having been referred to, he said, "I guess doing an honest day's work with good will is a long step toward a people's salvation."

He contributed abundantly to the conversation without domineering over it, and he seemed wholly content to stay out of it when anybody contributed a substantial fact that was new to him. Then he would perk up his head—I can think of no elegant phrase of description for his alert way of coming to attention—and would listen intently, as if, squirrel-like, he were tucking that fact away for future reference. I learned later that this avidity for information, from the lips of men or out of a book, is one of his principal characteristics.

Never a Word of Profanity.

In the social hours he seemed to wish to be jolly. His ways were ways of pleasantness. But there was no facetiousness; no heavy tug for the kind of joviality that is so boring and so wearing as to be more desolating than dullness. His is a quiet jollity.

In diction he was not always solicitous about the fate of the final "g," and once he used "suspicion" as a verb, and that, he being a university man and the word "suspect" being convenient to everybody's hand, surprised me.

There was never a word of profanity, a kind of vulgarity to which politicians, perhaps because of the exciting nature of their trade, are much given, although the shrewd ones avoid it when among strangers.

"Speak," said Roger Ascham, who schoolmastered the fiery Elizabeth in Demosthenes and Sophocles, "speak," said he, devoted classicist though he was, "as the common people do, but think as wise men do." If five days of listening warrant a guess, I would say something like that is Mr. Landon's aim in conversation.

WHEN ALF, F. D. R. VISITED

The Republican nominee relishes life and wants to know what you think about it; relishes reminiscence; relishes talk on travel and on foreign political situations. Eagerly he plied with questions a fellow Kansan just home from France and Spain. . . . What did the future hold for France? What were the plain people saying? Were French statesmen giving direction to trends or merely waiting? How long would the people in Spain with something to lose endure chaos? To the answers and guesses he listened closely. Then he said, "During the President's drouth conference with the governors I asked him about the French and Spanish situations and he said . . ."

Reader, any reporter with any sense knew that Mr. Landon knew that the reporter knew that what the President replied was not to be printed. The printable facts are that the governor, talking privately with Mr. Roosevelt, had bombarded him with questions pretty much as he bombarded the traveler, and Mr. Roosevelt had answered specifically and from a large store of information from the department of state.

A Week's Wages, Gladly.

I would give a week's wages for a shorthand report of the talk of the two rivals. Evidently they were as cozy as duumviri in old Rome—probably a good deal more so. Meanwhile the correspondents were sitting outside gnashing, as the saying is, their teeth. They, too, would have given a week's wages.

That is how disarming Alf Landon can be. He wanted to know; he went to it—and he got it. Plainly the President took to him.

"At a venture I broached foreign relations to Mr. Landon, saying that in none of his speeches had he taken up the topic. Laying the forefinger of his left hand along his nose and half closing his eyes—as is his way when in meditative mood—he replied:

"Remember that 'Endless Adventure' of Frederick Oliver's we were digging into?"

"I certainly do!"

"Well, he says it's a homely but sound principle that every nation understands its own affairs far better than it understands those of its neighbors—something like that."

Into that subject the governor did not at the moment further go, and it was not for me to press him. Later I looked up the Oliver passage for you. It is on page 108, and he had heavily underscored the words.

Another time the topic was trouble—the contretemps of one day and the next—and, incidentally, the rigors and anxieties of a presidential campaign.

"Nine out of ten troubles," said the governor, "will surrender quicker to a giggle than to a groan. That was the tragedy of Woodrow Wilson. He had never learned how to giggle himself out of anything. Bill White tells about it in his book."

Simplicity a Characteristic.

In the first days of study of this man, what captivates you about him is, I think, what you would call his almost boyish simplicity. After the first days he might begin to baffle you. For example: For one of the long campaign trips this nominee of a great party, who uses "suspicion" as a verb, tossed into his traveling bag for train-reading, what? A brace of mystery stories? No. . . . Some economic monographs? Come on! What, then?

That volume contains history-making prefaces by authors who, in those prefaces, gave new direction to trends in ethics or in literature—dour John Calvin's dedication to vacillating Francis I. of his "Institutes of the Christian Religion," 26 pages; Copernicus' dedication of his "Revolutions of the Heavenly Bodies," 6 pages; Bacon's various prefaces—in translation—to his "Instauratio Magna," 28 pages; Samuel Johnson's prefaces to his dictionary and his edition of Shakespeare, 73 pages; various prefaces and appendices by Wordsworth, 73 pages; Walt Whitman's preface to his "Leaves of Grass," 24 pages, and so on; in all, twenty-eight weighty treatises. Hardly what one would call light reading.

Only a naturally studious man would be interested in most of them.

Mr. Landon said the convenient sized volume, all compact of wisdom and good style, rested him by taking him out of himself—"Just as much rest to the mind," he added, "as to go out on a horse for a couple of hours."

Who can gainsay him!

The governor is enjoying the campaign. He loves meeting thousands upon thousands of his countrymen face to face. As one householder to another he loves telling them, "The only way to reduce public expense is to reduce what you're wasting money on." He believes he will be elected—told Arthur Henning that, and Arthur Henning is not a man to whom politicians talk empty bravura.

His principal worry is that little John and Nancy Jo will be made self-conscious by the "Ain't-They-Cute" type of partisans. That is a real worry.

"I want," he said, "to give the photographers a break, and I have no objection to pictures anywhere but at church—and of the children. At the state fair, fine! But church is not the place for that kind of thing, and as for the children it's very injudicious. They soon [with a grimace of pronounced disfavor] get to be little actors and actresses."

Sometimes He Looks Glum.

In last Sunday's article I was telling you that the governor did not smile—indeed he looked rather glum—when his little son paid a lady a droll compliment upon being presented to her. That was the reason. He does not want the child to be applauded into pertness.

Another time he was protesting to the correspondents against the taking of photographs in church.

"But," said one, "a photographer did take you in church that Sunday in Portland."

"Yes, but later he promised me he wouldn't use it."

"Nevertheless he did use it."

Again the glum look.

On a Saturday evening one of the correspondents—sometimes there are thirty on the Topeka scene—asked, "Going to church in the morning, governor?"

The reply, not surly but decisive: "The only way you can find out whether I'm going to church is to be there yourself. Besides, it will do you good to go."

2,000 DAILY HANDSHAKES

"The trips, sir," I asked, "do they take it out of you?"

"Not much. And yet on the train I shake hands with maybe a thousand people a day—county chairmen, committeemen, committeewomen. And then more from the rear platform; probably another thousand—well [in hurried correction of any seeming exaggeration], well, five hundred anyway. But they give me as much as they take. I [this with a trustful ingenuousness that I found very touching], I love people."

At his own table indubitably homemade bread was served, and an apartment dweller exclaimed over it.

"Yes," the host responded, "this bread has character. You can put your teeth into it. When I am eating bread I don't want to be thinking spongecake."

"Don't Forget the Bakers!"

"Be careful," said the hostess—"don't forget how many protests came from the bakers after your praise of my bread appeared in newspapers."

He laughed; then suddenly assumed an air of forlorn gravity, saying, "In the matter of homemade bread I've tried to lead Peggy Ann in the way of the truth and the light, but she won't be interested."

Of that young lady and her father, I heard this from Roy Roberts, Kansas City journalist and close friend to Alf Landon these thirty years:

"I've known him to drive all night, in from the oil fields, to spend Sunday with Peggy Ann. After the mother died he was father and mother to her. I have never seen such a tender relationship between father and daughter."

The Elder Landon.

The nominee's father interested me, partly because of his stately presence and partly by his courtly manner. His words were few, but the manner was eloquent of poise. He bent low over the ladies' hands in bidding them good-by and his voice was equable, like his son's. A very presidential looking parent, thought I, and he reminded me of old steel engravings of James Fenimore Cooper and Zachary Taylor, and those ample men of the mid-nineteenth century America.

The invaluable Mr. Roberts gave me these sidelights on him:

"The old gentleman's the soul of integrity. Alf got his bull moosing from him, and a man once a bull mooser never loses it in his soul. T. R. is still Alf's ideal. He has always shown himself a stalwart friend to a reform, if it was true reform and not fantastic hoop-la masquerading as reform. When he takes up a cause he wants to be able to see his way through. Alf today expresses, more truly than any other man in American public life that I know of, the small city that is a real community versus the huge city, the small company versus the big, and rational expenditure versus slathering it around.

Standards in His Business.

"In business his standards have been his father's solid standards. Despite the adventurous field he was in he never had any get-rich-quick urges. In oil he never sold stock. He drilled a well. And he drilled another when the earnings of the first enabled him to. He never borrowed money on one well to buy another. In the wildest business on earth he never went wild. He was cautious and methodical. By the usual precedents of the business he ought today to be several times a millionaire or in the street. Well, he is neither. I don't know how much he is worth and I doubt whether anybody else does, but he is comfortably fixed—and he earned it.

"He and his father are good companions to one another—and one doesn't need to say better than that about either of them, for they both are sterling.

The Corsican bandit stalked into one of the conversations, as that Jovian man usually does when persons who love history are discussing it in its more general aspects.

We were talking of our youthful reading.

Gov. Landon [smiling reminiscently]: "Once I had the Napoleon complex. That was many years ago—more as a boy than since, I guess. More than his victories it was his genius for the public business that captivated me. I hope so. Suppose you went through that idolatry, too? Nearly every boy does."

"With a shudder, sir, I remember that I did."

"Why the shudder?"

"Because the idolatry made me a pompous little fool. I used scrupulously to speak of Napoleon as 'the emperor.' Once I was blathering about him, and my mother said, 'Ah, but so cruelly selfish!' and I shot back with, 'Why, mother, he was a god!'"

"What did your mother say to that, Mr. Bennett?"

"She didn't say anything. She only sighed. She should have boxed my ears."

"So Cruelly Selfish."

Mr. Landon mused on the words, saying twice, "so cruelly selfish" . . . "so cruelly selfish" . . . then adding briskly, "I'll say your mother went to the heart of that tragedy when she said that."

Often on the governor's lips in his public addresses and in private conversation are the words, "If history teaches us anything, it teaches us that" . . . and then he will make his point.

Like Thucydides, the master historian, whom Macaulay called "the one great historian," the governor thinks that the prime value and interest of history is in the warnings it can impart to each oncoming generation.

"The vexing problems," he said, "of this day—our day—the day for the right living of which we are obligated—are only old foes with new features. I have read enough history to be able to recognize some of the foes. The name of one of them was Diocletian, with his numerous and meddlesome edicts that drove the Roman business man nearly distracted and did not help the consumer one jot."

That utterance touched to life and present meaning the well meant muddling of sixteen centuries ago by the sumptuous—and sumptuary—autocrat with whose accession the degrading practice of falling prostrate before a Roman emperor came into vogue.

"The empire," said the governor of a state that, had it existed then, would have been one of Diocletian's richest graneries, "was vaster under Diocletian and nearly as populous—120,000,000—as our country now is. And victories wherever the legions marched. But such wealth and such power didn't solve the problem of how not to pauperize the people by doles on the one hand and by the disheartening of business through governmental meddling on the other.

"You'll find it all neatly set forth on half a page of the late Gov. Hadley's 'Rome and the World Today'—how the edict of prices was set up in every market place of the empire; how a maximum price was fixed for every commodity and maximum wage schedules for everybody from laborer to lawyer. And if you violated the edict of prices what happened to you?—death!

TRADE'S STRAIT-JACKET

"What was the result of all that new dealing? The usual one. Trade ceased to fluctuate, partly because the government had taken no account of differences in conditions of production and transportation. Apprehensive and uncertain, business men who could do it got out of business. Hadley said that the empire lived in 'an economic and industrial strait-jacket because burocracy was defying 'inflexible rules of human nature,' and 'inexorable laws of supply and demand.' So, hope and ambition and initiative died in men's hearts. The human machine broke down, and with it the machinery of business.

"Why! the bare list of some of the commodities and callings affected by that meddling makes appalling reading even to this day. You'll find it in Gibbon—meat, poultry, game, fish, vegetables, fruits, oil, salt, honey, clothes, hides, boots and shoes, harness, lumber, wheat, beer and wine. O, they had a planned economy, all right! But it wouldn't work.

Looks to Era of Progress.

"In one way and another I've pointed out those facts in my speeches a score of times—tried to emphasize them here in Topeka the other day in my talk to the Youth conference. I told those earnest young folks that some people say that we 'have come to the end of an era' and that 'our industrial plant is complete,' with the result, they say, that we must live on what we have. Now that kind of reasoning is based on our seven years of hard times instead of on our century and a half of progress.

"Our 'industrial plant' is not complete. With every decade of our annals it has been developing and extending by leaps and bounds and will continue to if it is not throttled by burocrats.

"Judicious governmental regulation of business is not a new measure in our economy. We have had it—and have been benefited by it. But judicious regulation is not autocratic direction and management. The difference is wide, but it can be defined simply:

"By wise regulation our government can justly and helpfully make known to us what we ought not to do—yes, and shall not do. By the policy of direction and management of business—which is a new policy in our system—a burocracy largely composed of empirics would like to blue print to us from Washington what we must do.

WHAT YOU VOTERS FACE

"That is one of the supreme questions of this momentous election—the question of what powers the government shall have and what powers it shall not have.

"That difference is vital to the happiness, the well-being, and the self-respect of every one of us. For it is the difference between government by the people and government by a highly organized authority wielded by one man. It is the difference between a system in which the government is the umpire who enforces rules made by the people's representatives and a system in which the government itself plays the game. It all comes to the difference there is between free electors and regimented puppets; the difference between intrusion and guidance, and the difference between independence and loss of independence.

"In short, the American people should strengthen the rules governing business, but should not permit government autocrats to manage businesses."

Thus does Mr. Landon "know enough history"—as he put it—to be the possessor of many a steadying fundamental concerning the warnings which history spells out—sometimes in letters of fire, sometimes with a pen that was dipped in blood and tears.

When, for example, he deplores excessive taxation and the waste that goes with excess, he knows that shrewd Elizabeth, who loved to be called the mother of her people, knew that excessive taxation is the most prolific parent of revolt, and that she cut her cloth accordingly.

Such precedents and warnings have sunk deep into an intensely acquisitive mentality that is uncluttered with trivialities and fantasies.

Much though the governor of Kansas dreads the devitalizing of initiative—especially the initiative of the man of small means—by an administration that undertakes to manage private business, he dreads equally any administration's attempt to make government remote from the people.

"ANOTHER COSTLY ERROR"

"This," he said, "is another costly error—this effort by Washington to short-circuit the capitals of the states instead of using them to good advantage. Government by the people will go to pieces if the people are lured into believing that a few busy burocratic Georges a thousand or two thousand miles away will fix everything by ukase. Excessive centralization of economic forces would undermine our political system.

"A lazy public spirit, in small communities or in large, is a great danger, politically and morally. It destroys the fibre of good citizenship that binds a nation together. It makes the elected lax and the electors putty, and it breeds the most dangerous kind of ignorance—ignorance of the true and urgent needs of the state, the county, and the town. The free functioning of state and county governments is essential not only to democracy but to the free and full development of our people."

Those last sentiments, I should add, the governor did not utter to me, but to others, among them Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer of Washington, who passed them on.

Spirit of Helpfulness.

But this specific illustration of the importance of an intimate state and community knowledge of "the true and urgent needs" of the people he did give me: I had spoken enthusiastically of the resourcefulness and address he had shown in 1934—the summer of the terrible drouth—in getting centrifugal pumps to work in wells that the United States government had dug but not equipped. "And I understand," I added, "that you practically commandeered the pumps from the oil companies and so saved the situation."

He frowned.

"No, I didn't commandeer," he said. "I drew on the old spirit of helping one another that's always on tap in this country, if you know how to use it!"

The italicized words give you Landon to the core.

Understand One Another.

"And that spirit," he continued, "is born of a good, honest, informed neighborliness between public officials and the citizens who elected them. That's how I got those pumps. Our people understood one another's needs and they showed the true community spirit because their community consciousness and their feeling for their community have not been legislated out of them by remote control."

Next Sunday's article—the third and last of these studies of the governor—will describe him as campaigner, tell how he puts his speeches together and how he, so unassuming and not at all a "jollier," completely disarms all sorts and conditions of men in his personal meetings with them. Also: What surely, if he is elected, may be expected from his presidency.

CAPPER TELLS WHY HE SUPPORTS LANDON AGAINST NEW DEAL

Topeka, Kas., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Senator Arthur Capper [Rep., Kas.], said tonight he was supporting Gov. Alf M. Landon because as president he would retain the "good things" and abolish the "bad things" of the New Deal administration.

Saying in a prepared radio address that he had received a letter from a farmer asking why he had supported New Deal measures and was now campaigning for Landon, Capper said:

"That is a fair question. I did vote for many New Deal measures. And like the farmer who asked the question, I am glad that I did. . . . During the eighteen years that I have been in the senate I never have allowed partisanship to enter into my views and acts on the farm problem."

Explaining that he had voted for the AAA and the subsequent soil conservation act and other farm measures, the senator said he was convinced they would aid agriculture.

"I am supporting Alf Landon," he said, "because I believe the United States have need of his common sense, his complete integrity, his liberal views, his ability as an executive, and his knowledge of government."

VATICAN WILL GUIDE WORLD-WIDE FIGHT AGAINST COMMUNISM

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 17.—(AP)—A world-wide organization, to include both Catholics and Protestants, is being formed by the Congregation for Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs for the fight on communism, prelates disclosed tonight.

The organization, the prelates said, will be based on the "pro Deo" [for God] committees now existing in several European countries. They are composed of both Catholics and Protestants, disseminate anti-communist propaganda, and keep their respective countries informed of bolshevist activities.

The Vatican now sees the desirability of extending the "pro Deo" committees to all nations, the prelates explained, giving them a central coördinating organization. Pope Pius, it was stated, probably will bring the committees under the pontifical commission for Russia, which forms a section of the Congregation for Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs.

A. F. OF L. REPORT LEANS TOWARD NEW DEALERS

Landon Sponsor Quits the Executive Board.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—The American Federation of Labor today issued its long delayed and bitterly contested "nonpartisan" political report on the platform and candidates of the two major parties.

As had been expected the New Deal majority of the A. F. of L. executive council interpreted President Roosevelt's labor record as entirely favorable to the labor cause. Gov. Alf M. Landon's record was presented more sketchily and without interpretation, purportedly because it was not available in the same concrete form of bills supported or opposed.

Republican Quits Council.

The report was made public within a few hours after the resignation from the Federation's executive council of William Hutcheson, chairman of the Republican national committee's labor division. He is president of the carpenters' union.

Largely through the opposition of Hutcheson the report has been delayed for several months. In the past scrupulously nonpartisan reports have been issued shortly after the

John L. Lewis, leader of the committee for industrial organization unions, which were suspended in the battle over craft versus industrial organization, is aggressively for the New Deal.

Both Support Roosevelt.

Lewis skillfully has attempted to convey the impression to his followers that the White House is behind his vote. This maneuver was met by A. F. of L. president, William Green, with a declaration of personal support for Roosevelt.

The report, largely dictated by Green, does not make an outright recommendation for either party but depends largely on the weight of the record. That the weight is Roosevelt's was admitted by Green in the statement that labor "will know who to vote for."

The report also classified the vice presidential candidates giving John N. Garner an executive score of favorable action on eleven bills and unfavorable action on eighteen bills. Frank Knox, Republican candidate was left unclassified because "he never has been called upon to go on record on specific legislative measures.

Cites Landon's Speeches.

Gov. Landon's record as governor of Kansas was not listed. All that was listed for him was a series of excerpts from messages delivered to the Kansas legislature having to do with labor and social security and excerpts from his speeches.

One excerpt from a message said, "every possible effort should be made by the state government to ameliorate the conditions of Kansas workers."

Among the quotations from Landon's speeches was his statement "employés are to be free from interference from any source," which has been interpreted in more suspicious circles as a declaration for company unions. The report made no comment on that statement.

The report listed 47 bills signed by President Roosevelt. Eleven were described as favorable. Among these were bills creating the Home Owners Loan corporation, the Tennesee Valley Authority, the 4 billion 880 million dollar Works relief bill and other New Deal legislation. The report traced the Roosevelt record back to the New York state senate in 1911.

Cites Group of Bills.

The report prepared by a sub-committee of six Democrats will be submitted to 110 national and international unions, 48 state federations of labor, 800 central labor unions and 33,000 local unions. The six Democrats closed the report by urging all members to vote and a statement that the American labor movement is non-partisan.

GETS TWO TERMS FOR ROBBERY.

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Joseph Rock, 24, of Gary, a steel mill worker, was sentenced to two ten to twenty-five years reformatory terms here today for automobile banditry and robbery in connection with a $2,680 payroll holdup here Nov. 19, 1935. The terms run concurrently.

VATICAN DISCLOSES 100,000 ARE SERVING IN CATHOLIC MISSIONS

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 17.—(AP)—The number of Catholic missionary priests, brothers, and sisters is near 100,000, Archbishop Celsus Costantini declared today in a world radio broadcast for mission Sunday tomorrow. The Archbishop, who is the secretary of the congregation for the propagation of the faith, directing the Catholic church's world mission activities, said:

"Never during all the centuries have there been as many missionaries as today—a fact which helps us keep our faith that a capacity for good still can be found in the souls of men. Extremes meet: If the antichrist multiplies its missionaries of hate, Christ, always a living Christ in his church, multiplies his missionaries of love."

The archbishop added $4,800,000 had been spent on missions last year.

JAKE'S BARGAINS PROVE JUST TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE

A few weeks ago Jacob Bradford, 36 years-old, 405 South Halsted street, opened up a general store at Quincy. His success was immediate.

Farmers flocked to the Bradford store from miles around the countryside, drawn by such amazing bargains as "20 well tailored trousers at 50 cents a pair," "6 new suits at $1.50 each," "4 pairs of golf knickers at 50 cents a pair."

Unable to meet this cut-throat competition, the Quincy merchants demanded that Bradford be arrested for investigation. Yesterday his fingerprints arrived at the detective bureau for examination. They revealed he is wanted at Graettinger, Ia.; St. Paul, Neb., and Battle Lake, Minn., on suspicion of receiving stolen goods.

KILLED BY ELEVATOR WEIGHTS.

Thomas Horne, 50 years old, 4347 West Congress street, a janitor, was killed yesterday when he was struck by counterweights at the bottom of the elevator shaft in the Rockefeller building, 952 North Michigan avenue.

THE TRIBUNE'S PLATFORM FOR 1936

Turn the Rascals Out.

THE PLANNED PANIC.

Mr. Roosevelt reminded his audience at the Stadium the other night that he had assumed office in the midst of a panic which had closed every bank in the United States. He said it was Mr. Hoover's panic. Mr. Roosevelt did not tell of the part which he had played in precipitating the panic. Indeed, he has never offered such an explanation though the publication of the accusing documents and letters more than a year ago has been a constant challenge to him to do so.

It is now thoroughly established that he made no effort to turn Mr. Garner, then Vice President-elect, from his disastrous insistence upon publication of loans to banks by the R. F. C. The result of Mr. Garner's strategy was to shake public confidence in the banks which had been helped and thus defeat the purpose of the loans.

More especially, Mr. Roosevelt has never explained his refusal to take any steps to calm the growing panic. He had congress in his pocket. The runs were started by fear of what the new President and the new congress would do. Mr. Roosevelt and only Mr. Roosevelt could have given the necessary reassurance.

He did precisely the opposite.

As the autumn of 1932 advanced into winter the belief was growing that Mr. Roosevelt intended to tinker with the currency despite his platform and his campaign speeches which pledged him to the preservation of sound money. During the campaign he had allowed the impression to go out that by sound money he meant gold standard money. But after his election he began to do strange things.

He was in frequent conference with prominent devaluationists. Among them was Mr. Rene Leon, a banker who had formerly served as an expert for the banking and currency committee of the house of representatives. At the time in January when Vice President Elect Garner was encouraging bank runs, President Elect Roosevelt was already looking forward to a financial collapse. There was still time to stop the runs, but Mr. Roosevelt was already asking questions of Mr. Leon which indicated that he did not expect the runs to cease. He asked Mr. Leon whether there was not something surviving from the Woodrow Wilson war imperialism which would give the President power to take over the nation's gold stock.

Mr. Leon gave him the information he wanted. Mr. Leon told him that the trading with the enemy act had not been repealed. An accommodating legal opinion could hold it still valid. It conferred extraordinary power upon the President. He could use it to close all the banks by proclamation. He could prohibit the possession or export of gold coin and gold certificates. When the bank runs had done their work Mr. Roosevelt did just that in just that way.

While Mr. Roosevelt was conferring with Mr. Leon and other devaluationists leading Democrats in congress were speaking openly in favor of devaluation and no word of rebuke came from Mr. Roosevelt. Finally Senator Glass, a determined opponent of devaluation, was offered the secretaryship of the treasury, only to decline it. Some newspapers explained the refusal by saying that he could not agree with the President's monetary policies. This explanation was, of course, the correct one.

In this atmosphere of doubt foreign holders of balances in this country became nervous and withdrew their deposits in ever increasing amounts. The current of gold movements quickly turned against us. Americans also became nervous, and hoarding was resumed on a large scale. The strain upon the banking structure became tremendous. Every one who had a dollar in a bank became apprehensive. Bank runs started everywhere. Mr. Roosevelt was repeatedly urged by his own partisans and by Mr. Hoover to restore confidence, as he could easily have done with a statement repudiating all intention of weakening the currency. Instead he went for a cruise on Vincent Astor's yacht.

He sailed on Feb. 4. He did not return until Feb. 14. While he was away an eight day bank moratorium had been declared in Michigan. He must have known of it and he must have known how serious it was. Unless the Michigan banks could be saved it was altogether certain that the whole banking structure of the country must collapse. Detroit is too big a city and its industries are too important in the national economy to permit of any other result.

Mr. Roosevelt was fishing and would not be disturbed by such matters. Mr. Hoover, Ogden Mills, and others almost succeeded in preventing the closing of the Michigan banks, and almost succeeded in reopening them promptly. They failed in both attempts largely because Senator Couzens of Michigan stubbornly opposed adequate advances from the R. F. C. Mr. Couzens had been riding the R. F. C. in the senate. Naturally the board wanted some assurance that if it made the very large loans needed to rescue the banks in his state, Mr. Couzens would not later accuse the board of irregularities. Mr. Couzens stubbornly withheld that assurance.

Mr. Couzens, though a Republican, ran for renomination a few weeks ago as a Roosevelt supporter. He was a Roosevelt sympathizer in February, 1933. What Mr. Roosevelt's running mate, Mr. Garner, had started with his insistence on publicity for R. F. C. loans, Mr. Couzens, another Roosevelt man, helped along by blocking aid to the Michigan banks. It remained for Mr. Roosevelt himself to complete the ruin by his refusal to move a finger to save the nation from imminent financial collapse.

On Feb. 17, after Mr. Roosevelt had returned from his cruise, Mr. Hoover addressed a personal appeal to him to make the statement which could restore confidence. By that time the situation, though grave, was not yet hopeless. The President again asked Mr. Roosevelt to pledge maintenance of the gold standard and a balanced budget. Mr. Roosevelt made no reply.

Days passed during which the panic grew. Only when there was no longer any hope of preventing a universal breakdown did Mr. Roosevelt answer. He said there had been a clerical mistake. He had replied at once, but his secretary had thought the letter was only a preliminary draft and had not mailed it. He inclosed the letter which he said he had written eleven days before. It rejected all of Mr. Hoover's suggestions of coöperation.

A few days later every bank in the United States was closed. A fortnight later the great majority of them, representing 92 per cent of all the deposits in the country, had reopened. There had been no important addition to their assets. When they reopened Mr. Roosevelt himself certified them as sound. But in declining to stay the panic he had written to Mr. Hoover: "The real trouble is that on present values very few financial institutions anywhere in the country are actually able to pay off their deposits in full."

The two principal banks in Detroit did not reopen. Their assets have since been liquidated. At last reports almost all their depositors had been paid in full. Had the R. F. C. made the proposed loans in 1933 not a cent would have been lost by the government. In Michigan the facts are well understood, as the crushing defeat of Mr. Couzens in the recent primary indicates.

We have presented the true story of the panic which Mr. Roosevelt attributes to President Hoover. The documents upon which the narrative is based have all been published. Mr. Roosevelt has never attempted to explain his extraordinary conduct in allowing an urgent letter from the President of the United States, on a matter of colossal importance, to remain unanswered for eleven days. He has never explained why he refused to quiet the growing fears, though he might have done so merely by reiterating his promises made during the campaign that he would balance the budget and remain on gold. Mr. Hoover, though repudiated by the voters and confronted by a hostile congress, had never stopped trying. Mr. Roosevelt had never started trying. It was his inactivity and his alarming behavior which produced the panic.

Mr. Roosevelt was enabled to take office at a moment of complete financial stagnation. The nation was desperate and, of course, gave prompt approval to every suggestion the recognized leader put forward. In consequence he was enabled to foist his NRA, his AAA, and all the rest of his communistic regimentations and repudiations upon the American people. If his purpose in refusing to coöperate with Mr. Hoover was to win support for a revolutionary program which he could not otherwise have foisted upon congress and the people he had succeeded brilliantly.

Mr. Roosevelt at the Stadium the other night was still talking about that dreadful moment when he took office. He neglected only to say that he was chiefly responsible for bringing it to pass.

FOR WAYLAND BROOKS.

When the Republican party in this state and elsewhere was disorganized, demoralized, and discouraged a Republican candidate for any office was expected to go out and be pushed around. He was a forlorn hope. Not many men cared to make the fight and take the punishment. Among those who did was Wayland Brooks, now Republican candidate for governor. He took a place on the state ticket two years ago for congressman at large and with his success downstate helped put some confidence back in the discouraged party just when it was most needed.

It has been said of Brooks that he is the type of young man whom democracy must encourage to enter public life if it is to bring its practices and its ideals into line. He is young, sincere, intelligent, and an excellent public speaker. He had a splendid war record. He was wounded seven times and cited four times for valor. He was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross, awarded to "one who distinguishes himself conspicuously by gallantry above and beyond the call of his duty, at the risk of his life." He was given the American Navy medal, the equivalent of the army cross; the Croix de Guerre, and the Order of the Purple Heart. As a minister's son he was brought up among the people of small communities. He knew the life of the farms. He was trained legally. He has all the qualifications for high public service.

Republican voters recognized these qualities when they nominated him to be their candidate for governor on a ticket of exceptional merit. Indeed, the Republican primaries in Illinois, coming as they did when the people of the country were waiting to see what the new Republican party would disclose itself to be, was a much needed stimulus. Republican voters everywhere took heart. They began to believe that the Cleveland convention could do what, again to justify their confidence, it did. If the Illinois Republicans had failed the party on primary day the national prospects might be very different now.

Gov. Horner seeks reëlection. He had to make a good fight to get the renomination. His election four years ago was accepted with relief. His opponents now do not condemn his administration unreservedly. They do not bring charges against his honesty and they will credit him with having concern for state welfare in many particulars.

Gov. Horner's misfortune was the New Deal. Its demands on him were peremptory and he chose to comply. Then, when his political fortunes became clouded, he practiced some of the familiar tricks of politics. THE TRIBUNE has no ill will for the governor. In essential qualifications we regard Brooks as the better man and deserving of support for that reason even if it were not for the particular issue which is determinative.

The Roosevelt administration is above everything else. Gov. Horner stands or falls with it. He has indorsed and supported it. No voter regardful of his country's future can cast his vote for any part of the present government of the United States.

The election of Wayland Brooks will not only give Illinois a good governor, it will also help retire the New Dealers from public life.

LIFE'S CHANCES.

I gaze across the street so wide;
I start, I dart, I squirm, I glide,
I take my chances—O, so slim—
I trust to eye and nerve and limb.
I scoot to right, I gallop through,
I'm here—I'm there—I'm lost to view,
My life, I know, hangs on the toss,
Another plunge—and I'm across!
O, give me pity if you can;
I am a poor pedestrian.—Montreal Star.

KNOWS HIS LAND.

A mountain man, who rarely, if ever, visited a town of any size, drove into Statesville with his son, traveling in a decrepit car.

Climbing out of the car on one of the main streets, the old man appeared fascinated by the pavement. He scraped his feet on the hard surface, and, turning to his son, remarked:

"Well, I don't blame 'em for building a town here. The ground is too darn good to plow anyway."—Exchange.

AND NOW—THE GOD JANUS.
[Register-Mail, Galesburg, Ill.]

One of President Roosevelt's favorite oratorical devices, that of quoting from the classics or alluding to mythology and drawing therefrom sly parallels to opposing political parties or individuals, was again evidenced in his Denver speech. This time the allusion was to a mythological god, the two-faced, two-mouthed Janus. The parallel was about as mythological as the god, in so far as it applied to his political rival, in our opinion.

From where we sit in the bleachers, however, it looks like the President swung at a bad pitch, fouled it off, and hit his own party "leadership," to use a less classic but more American figure of speech.

If he desired to create the impression that the opposing "party leadership" is two-faced and two-mouthed, he might better have devoted more of his time to scanning the record of his own "party leadership" to make sure there could be no backfire of application there. In this instance, at least, it might have been more effective than an attempt to parade his culture for the benefit of us midwestern yokels. Now let's look.

Could there be any parallel to the two-faced, two-mouthed god Janus when the New Deal "leadership" asserted with great vehemence that it proposed to reduce the cost of government by 25 per cent—and then proceeded to boost the cost until in 1936 it is said to be 72 per cent greater than the last year of the Hoover administration? Could there be any parallel when New Deal "leadership" pledged 100 per cent adherence to the Democratic platform for 1932, which declared for a sound and stable currency preserved at all hazards—and then devalued the dollar by 41 cents? Could there be any parallel when the "leadership" declared for a balanced budget—and then for three years accumulated average deficits of over 4 billion a year? Could there be any parallel when the "leadership" asked congress for vast executive powers for emergency use only—and within nine months was asking that these dictatorial powers be made permanent? Could there be any parallel when the "leadership" said that it would be the first to confess error—and yet claims a perfect batting average despite the fact that in the Supreme court league it got only two hits out of nine times up?

As long as allusion is a favorite device, how about that one about glass houses?

How to Keep Well
By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

IN QUEST OF SLEEP.

AMONG the many letters received by this department a goodly number deal with insomnia. Some will relate that sleep refuses to come until about 4 a. m. following a restless, exhausting night. The rising bell rings inexorably, which means that these individuals have had but three or four hours of undisturbed slumber.

We can go without food far longer than without sleep. Observations on animals show that the reserve forces of their bodies are used up completely after five days of continuous wakefulness, even though an ample supply of food is always at hand. Deprived of nutriment, they can go on for twenty days or more, if kindly Morpheus comes to the rescue.

It is generally agreed that the first two hours—the so-called beauty period—is the soundest and therefore the most refreshing. The level of alertness rises gradually as repose is prolonged. In fact, during the last hour there may be a sort of subconscious awareness of what is going on within the room.

Many years ago a German investigator performed a series of experiments in an effort to determine the intensity of sound needed to arouse a person fully. A ball was caused to fall from varying heights, striking upon a hard metallic surface with a resounding clang. At the end of the first hour it was necessary that the ball fall through 800 units of space, whereas after 2½ hours only 50 units were required.

There is no better rule for wooing the "sandman" than to follow the admonition of the New Testament to "take no thought for the morrow." After observing insomniacs for many years one is led to the conclusion that if we could eliminate apprehension and worry entirely the normal amount of sleep would come to most of us. But few have acquired the knack of relaxing completely. Test yourself and see how difficult it is—until practice makes perfect. This means complete surrender of the control of muscles of the entire body, including the neck, the face, the tongue, etc.

In discussing this question with a friend who had complained of lying awake at night, I asked him to check his ability to "let go." He reported later that a critical self-examination disclosed the fact that he was contracting the muscles of the eyelids tightly and holding the body in a fixed position. Of course he could not drop off; he was on an active tension although lying quietly in bed with the eyes closed.

But some will say, "I can't stop thinking, mulling over the events of the day—what he said, what I said, what she said, what I should have said, or why I didn't think of that." If thoughts race and cannot be tamed there is nothing better than a good book and a good light; the head and shoulders propped up in bed. The thread of the narrative will obliterate the current of thought by substituting a new set of ideas.

Imagine a gap in a stone wall through which sheep are passing. Watch this gateway and see the animals go through one after another. Release the hold on all muscles while observing each animal closely. The woolly procession moves slowly and with diminishing speed, becomes slower and slower until—Why, there's the alarm clock! This is merely a process of self-hypnotism that may help.

Irritation, of course, anywhere in the body that brings with it pain, itching, or cramps in the muscles will provide a constant stimulus to the brain. Relief will come often if one will take a warm [not hot] bath, dry the skin gently with a soft towel, then use a moderate amount of talcum.

Cold is an excitant, as is too much warmth. This means that the bed clothes must be adjusted to the temperature of the outside air and of the room. I have several friends who have conquered bad cases of insomnia by adopting an exercise program which includes a thirty minute walk taken leisurely before retiring. A noisy, boisterous, exciting evening must be shunned consistently.

Sometimes disease and high blood pressure prove to be relentless enemies of tranquility. In a few cases soothing drugs may be prescribed—not regularly, but occasionally. In such a situation the services of a skilled physician should be sought.

PERSPIRATION.

E. H. writes: Does excess weight cause one to perspire more freely than normal?

REPLY.

Ordinarily, perspiration is caused by exertion, although it may originate from a toxic source. A person who is overweight will exert himself more than one who is thin. As a rule fat people feel the heat more acutely than thin people. It is also true that thin individuals are more sensitive to cold.

IT IS NOW CURABLE.

V. D. writes: What chance is there for a person who has had lymphatic leukemia for 15 months?

REPLY.

The chronic form of leukemia usually runs a protracted course. Cases of 3 to 13 years' duration have been reported. With all the research now in progress let us hope that the cause and cure will be discovered soon. But a few years ago pernicious anemia was a fatal disease. Today it is curable.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GETTING OUR FEET BACK ON THE GROUND—AND HOW!

From Across the Sea

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Reports of a powerful fleet secretly built by the soviet union at carefully guarded shipyards in the far north recur from time to time to arouse public interest and stir discussion, though experts are inclined to laugh at them.

Despite the experts' laughter, fear of the soviet fleet is one of the reasons given for Germany's insistence on more sea power, and Moscow engaged not long since in talks with London for a naval treaty between the two powers.

The difficulty of obtaining any accurate information about Russian naval vessels and the impossibility of learning anything definite of building plans has helped the rumors. Study of such accurate data as are available, however, shows that there is little chance of the soviet union's having any great surprise in store for the navies of the world.

Aside from the actual ships and their condition, naval experts agree that the organization aboard soviet men of war makes efficiency like that of the British and American navies nonexistent. Every ship carries a political staf headed by a military commissar, who all too often is entirely ignorant of naval affairs. He is independent of the captain and has power to override his orders on all but purely technical matters. All disciplinary action must be approved by the commissar and his staf; and if they see fit to complain to Moscow of the captain he stands little chance of winning the argument.

Naval men have agreed for the most part that shipyards in the far north of Russia, while they might be kept secret from the rest of the world, would have no other advantage and would have the somewhat serious disadvantage of being practically useless as shipyards. Reports that submarines are being built inland in pieces and shipped to the coast for assembly may be perfectly true, it is said, but these are probably small submarines, and if a really large fleet of them is built it probably will be impossible to keep its existence secret.

Some sixty submarines are known to be owned by the soviet union, although only twenty-three were reported in the official answers to questions by the British admiralty for its annual report on world fleets. Most of them are said to be stationed at Vladivostok, in the Pacific, with a smaller supporting force of destroyers and other smaller surface craft.

As for larger warships, the state of those whose existence is known is considered proof that if any others exist they are not a formidable force to be reckoned with in world sea power.

Of the navy's four battleships—aged 23,000 ton craft mounting 12 inch guns—the Mikhail Frunze is said to have been condemned, although it may be undergoing rebuilding. Another, the Pariskaia Kommuna, cruised from the Baltic to the Black sea six years ago, and the admitted reason for its not returning is that it is too unseaworthy to face the return voyage.

One of the five comparatively modern cruisers, the 6,600 ton Profintern, also steamed from the Baltic to the Black sea at the same time, but had to halt at Brest and again at Naples for repairs.

The conclusion generally drawn is that soviet shipyards are still incapable of doing efficient construction or repair work on large warships.

Much reliance is placed in mines. Nearly all the craft are fitted for laying mines and experiments are said to have been made in the use of airplanes for minelaying.

THE GOOSE STEP.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—For a front page editorial I suggest that you develop one, in your able manner, on the following subject:

"America has only begun to march," is quoted as part of President Roosevelt's speech to Young Democrats at Kansas City. Was he prophetic?

Does he actually mean this? I hope not.

As I understand the situation today in Russia, Germany and Italy, the people march when, how, and if the government tells them to. They are told when and where to work, at what to work, what wages to draw—and consequently how to live. Apparently these three nations are face to face with food shortages. These centralized governments dictate the entire lives of their citizens, even attempting to control the size of families.

If subsequent attempts to regiment industry and usurp private ownership through government competition and taxation are successful, and if all functions of government are controled from one point, Americans will march. Sooner or later they will march in the same manner as the people in the countries named above.

I have been free to choose the kind of work I wanted to do and the place where I worked. I expect to keep the privilege, and I want my children to have the same choice.

STATE MEDICINE.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Please accept my sincere congratulations on Mr. Steele's excellent article on the panel system of medicine in Great Britain which appeared in your CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

AUSTIN A. HAYDEN, M. D.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The medical profession of Illinois, in particular, and your lay clientele everywhere, are deeply indebted to John S. Steele and your Sunday paper for the courageous and carefully documented exposure of the evils of state medicine.

Mr. Steele's conclusions are in complete accord with every previous unbiased investigation. These conclusions are known, believed and fought for by all the thinking people in the medical field. The doctors especially are alert and striving earnestly to prevent the conversion of a high and honorable profession into a commercial trade for selfish exploitation by cunning politicians and social doctrinaires.

The whole campaign for state medicine and health insurance is an unnecessary retreat to a burocratic paternalism; an attempt by monocotyledonous minds to secure a place in the sun, although it may only shine on the ruins of our social and civic progress.

CHARLES B. REED, M. D.,
Councilor at Large, Illinois State Medical Society.

THE RELIEF VOTE.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—One argument the Roosevelt party boys use on relief voters is that if Roosevelt is retired their relief will stop.

The argument is peculiarly effective on those folks getting relief but not entitled to relief. It would be interesting to know how many of the Roosevelt party boys, spending full time in campaign work, are themselves getting relief, and are frantically fighting to have you and me support them.

Landon's pledge that people entitled to relief will continue to be cared for is enough for any worthy relief voters. In fact, by cutting out spoils politics, worthy relief cases can be properly cared for.

Thank God for Landon's courage in asking us to turn the spenders out. The stuck pig yells first. Relief grafters are in a turmoil. They should be.

WEST SIDER.

GARDEN UPROOTED.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Once more the vulture of hate against beauty is at work on the Wooded Island in Jackson park. This time it hovers over the old garden and says all the old-fashioned flowers must be rooted out, never to be seen or enjoyed in the future. Even now they are being dug out.

So the hundreds of flower lovers who have for weeks walked and lingered by the hour, enjoying the glorious colors of chrysanthemums, lilies, cosmos, zinnias, and marigolds, will not enjoy this pleasure again.

The dead trees and shrubbery set out last spring still remain; also the fence, for those who like it, to enjoy.

Does all this cost the city any money?

IDA PLASNICK DOWNES.

BOILED DOWN.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—It occurs to me that all any voter needs to do to decide how he should vote Nov. 3 is to ask himself one question.

That question is: Now that we all know that conditions are on the upgrade and that our problem is to cut down government costs and expenditures, who would be better able to do that; the man who is mostly responsible for their upbuilding and continuity, or a new manager, free of the interests that associated itself with the building up of the costly structure?

The latter is the answer, and that man is Landon.

HOW, INDEED?

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 13.—How can a man, against whose speeches the deadly parallel has so often been drawn, whose promises have so frequently conflicted with his deeds, whose actions constantly reveal opposing objectives—how can such a man have the nerve to accuse any one of inconsistency in any terms, let alone those which the President employed in his Denver speech?

WPA PRESSURE TO GET VOTES CHARGED BY G.O.P.

Two Swear to Tax for Political Club.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Coercion of federal workers by New Deal pay roll politicians into support of President Roosevelt on threat of losing their jobs and through promises of more pay was charged today by the Republican national committee.

That charge was backed with affidavits of two workers on the Resettlement administration's Greenhills suburban resettlement project at Cincinnati. The workers, Carl Sleeth and John M. O'Hara, said they were forced to join the Hilltop Democratic club and contribute $1 each to the Democratic campaign fund.

Accuse Col. Moulding.

According to the affidavits Col. S. W. Moulding of the Washington office of the WPA held out the hope of better jobs and pay if workers would support the New Deal and threatened discharge of anti-Roosevelt workers. The affidavits, which are identical, declare:

"He [Col. Moulding] assured those that were present that they could consider themselves fortunate in having the opportunity to become charter members of the organization with the chance of being elected officers, and that the boys who were present would be taken care of after election by increased pay, for, he said, after all, it was Democratic money that was being spent.

Watches at Knox Meeting.

"Col. S. W. Moulding Sr. further said in the course of his remarks that he had attended the political meeting in the Emery auditorium in Cincinnati addressed by Col. Frank Knox on Sept. 30 for the sole purpose of observing whether any WPA workers were in the audience, and he said that he did recognize a number of WPA employés from the Greenhills project who applauded the speech of Col. Knox, and that he would send the names of these 'whom he recognized in WPA headquarters and that 'of course the axe would have to fall on them'."

CHARGES HORNER FAILS IN AID FOR STATE NORMALS

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Charging that the present state administration has been hostile to the normal schools of Illinois, William R. Bach, Bloomington lawyer and member of the state normal school board, today defied Gov. Henry Horner and demanded that he publicly correct certain "untruthful" public statements made here in a speech Oct. 15.

As evidence of the hostility of the administration, Mr. Bach pointed to the continual struggle of the normal board to obtain an appropriation to properly operate the Teachers' college of Illinois.

"Horner's state architects have failed to proceed with the building program of the normal school board," Mr. Bach said. "For four years the erection of the needed building at Macomb, Ill., has been held up. Only recently has there been any activity in Charleston. At nearby State Normal we are compelled to turn children away because of lack of capacity. The library is housed in a building that is a firetrap without escapes."

The Bloomington attorney also asks the governor to explain his veto of the state certification law passed by the general assembly of Illinois, and affirms that the reason for the veto "was purely childish," Horner "wishing to discipline John A. Wieland, the new superintendent of public instruction, who took a great interest in the law." Mr. Bach denied a previous statement of the governor that he [Horner] had allowed the Bloomington man to stay on the Normal board.

Mismanagement Laid to Project Chief.

Decatur, Ill., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Thirty-five members of the Decatur WPA district drama project fired by their new boss, H. C. Howard of Peoria, turned on him today with charges of mismanagement in his administration of the Peoria office. Complaints were made to Harry Hopkins in Washington, Representative D. C. Dobbins in Champaign, and Charles E. Miner, deputy state administrator in Chicago.

L. C. Schaffer, head of the Decatur office, was discharged along with the dramatists, but went over Howard's head to the state office in Chicago and reported that the Peoria official's orders have been countermanded from there.

Girl of 18 in Charge.

In retaliation for the charges of Decatur WPA workers and officials, Howard put Elizabeth Ringeisen, 18 year old office stenographer in charge of the office, gave her the keys to the district record files, and refused the former executives access to their files.

In a written memorandum to Miss Ringeisen and nine music and drama heads, Howard told the one-time stenographer:

"Regardless of what may come up, you are to make the decision. Naturally I know if it is anything of a serious nature you will get in touch with me either by telephone or telegraph. If it is not of a serious nature you will, of course, advise me by letter."

"Spite work" was the label WPA artists put upon the naming of the stenographer to executive powers. They explained that their first impulse was to give up their jobs, but thought Howard was wanting that very thing, so decided to stay on the job.

After $4,000 Pay Roll.

DOCTOR MUST BE A DEMOCRAT TO GET WPA WORK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Even doctors have to be "right politically" to obtain professional work from the Works Progress administration in West Virginia and injured WPA workers get not the nearest doctor, but the nearest WPA doctors.

This was revealed in a letter from Mose M. Darst, administrative assistant to the West Virginia state WPA administrator, to George Oldha, director of state WPA district No. 2.

"I hand you here a list of doctors in Harrison county," the letter reads. "Kindly separate the Democrats from the Republicans, and also list them in order of priority, so that we may notify our safety foremen and compensation men as to who is eligible to participate in case of injury."

The list was prepared and sent to field engineers, supervisors, foremen and timekeepers.

What could be fairer than that? But——

A slip of paper was attached to the list which read:

Army Planes Slowed to Increase Safety.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

Selfridge Field, Mount Clement, Mich., Oct. 17.—Lieut. John H. Sterling of New York City today established a new record by flying one hundred miles for the Mitchell trophy at an average speed of 217.546 miles an hour. This amounted to only .746 mile an hour more than the previous record made in 1934, but under the extremely adverse flying conditions today it was a real feat.

The old record also was surpassed by Lieut. Harold L. Neely, Huntington, Tenn., whose average time was 217.039 miles an hour. Third place in today's field of ten went to Lieut. William J. Bell, Buffalo, N. Y., whose average speed was 216.162 miles an hour.

Capt. Leo H. Dawson, commander of the Ninety-fourth pursuit squadron and a native of Denver, Colo., had the slowest time, 211.93 miles an hour, less than six miles an hour behind the winner.

Use New Fighting Planes.

All the pilots today were flying the new two-place low-wing pursuit planes with which a part of the First Pursuit group has been equipped. These are the PB-2-A's built by the Consolidated company of San Diego. The engines were 700 horse power Curtis Conquerors, chemically cooled V-12 motors.

Because these ships were designed for high altitude fighting, throttle stops were attached to prevent the pilots from opening the engine beyond predetermined limits — safe enough for the low altitude racing. These limitations prevented the little ships from showing their real turn of speed, and contributed as much as the weather to the relatively slow time.

True Speed 318 M. P. H.

Lieut. Col. Ralph Royce, commander of the First Pursuit group, emphasized the fact that the speed recorded today did not represent a true performance of the airplane. After the race he stated that the PB-2-A's were capable of 318 miles an hour at their most efficient altitude. This is 21,000 feet.

In a series of speed dashes at a fifty foot altitude over a measured mile, Lieut. Elmer E. McKesson, Richmond, Va., flew one of the fighters at an average speed—one upwind lap and one lap down wind—of 251.748 miles an hour. This flight also was at considerably less than full throttle.

The race is an annual event for the trophy presented in 1922 by Brig. Gen. William E. Mitchell, then assistant chief of the air corps. The cup was given in honor of his brother, John, killed in France in the world war, when flying with the First Pursuit group. It is the only race in which military pilots may fly standard military equipment and is exclusively for First Pursuit group flyers.

12,000 Attend Meet.

The wet and rainy day with the raw wind prevented many thousands from attending the race and air show. Despite the weather there were 12,000 persons on the army post and many other thousands in surrounding field.

Seven of the Selfridge field pilots flew eighty miles over a short course for a trophy presented by the Boeing Aircraft company. All these men flew Boeing P-26 low wing single seat fighters, Wasp motors of 600 horsepower. These were the types of plane used in the 1934 and 1935 Mitchell trophy races, but the speeds today were considerably slower than in the previous years. Lieut. Eugene Brecht Jr., San Diego, Cal., won with an average of 203.373 miles an hour.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO OPEN CANCER TALKS THURSDAY

Discussion Will Follow Free Lectures.

The fifth annual series of public lectures on cancer sponsored by the cancer research committee of the Chicago Woman's club will open at 11 a. m. Thursday at the club, 72 East Eleventh street.

Designed to make the most recent scientific information on cancer available to all women, the lectures, given by outstanding authorities in the field of cancer, are free. Each lecture is followed by a discussion period, presided over by Mrs. James B. Herrick, chairman of the research committee, in which any woman may present her particular problem.

Dr. Cutler to Open Series.

Dr. Max Cutler, director of the tumor clinic at Michael Reese hospital, will give the opening lecture of the series. He will speak on present lines of research in the cause and cure of cancer. Other speakers, scheduled for consecutive Thursday mornings, and their subjects are:

Oct. 29—Dr. Harold E. Robertson, professor of pathology at the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn.: "Scientific Aspects of Cancer."

Nov. 5—Dr. Frank L. Rector, field representative of the American Society for the Control of Cancer: "Cancer, a Public Health Problem"; and Miss Edna Foley, superintendent of the Visiting Nurse association of Chicago; "Care of Cancer Patients in Chicago."

Will Explain Cancer Education.

Nov. 12—Dr. William W. Bauer, director of the bureau of health and public instruction, American Medical association: "Importance of Popular Education in Cancer."

Since its foundation in 1928 the cancer research committee has worked toward popular education along this line. In 1929, with the establishment of a cancer research institute as its goal, the committee raised $10,000, but found its $100,000 goal shunted aside in depression years. Interest from the fund now is used to finance research problems, projects in the field of irradiation being carried on at present at the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois.

SETTLEMENT OF SUIT TO EJECT FALL HELD NEAR

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 17.—(AP)—An out of court settlement appeared today as the possible end of a long drawn and bitter sequel to Albert B. Fall's conviction of accepting a bribe when secretary of interior under President Harding.

From negotiations started by attorneys here may come a decision as to whether Fall, aged and ill, may hold right of residence in the beautiful ranch home at Tres Ritos, N. M., which figured prominently in his bribery trial.

Fall has been fighting an eviction suit brought by the Petroleum Securities corporation, a unit in the oil empire built by the late E. L. Doheny, from whom, the United States Supreme court found, Fall accepted a $100,000 bribe.

Fall contended the money was a loan. He used much of it for improvements on his ranch home. Later, after Fall had served a year in prison and Doheny died, the corporation foreclosed a mortgage on the ranch and sold it to the Palomas Land and Cattle company. The eviction suit followed.

The war ministry admitted Socialist troops had beat a "strategic retreat" near Navalcarnero.

Mud-caked and bearded youths, lashed by a hail of insurgent bombs and bullets, doggedly manned their posts at Las Navas del Marques, Robledo de Chavela, and Brunete.

Heavy Censorship On.

"Their courage," government sources said, "is invincible!"

[The dispatch was heavily censored, presumably indicating the situation in Madrid is critical. The message was delayed 2⅓ hours and a total of 11¼ cable words were deleted.]

The problem of handling war refugees, fleeing from the battle torn rural regions in the path of the Fascist advance, spurred government officials to emergency steps. The gates of Madrid were ordered closed to refugees.

Carlos Rubiera, civil governor of Madrid, announced residents of towns in the fighting zones have been ordered not to leave home unless authorized by the military.

Menace Loyalist Rear.

"Hitherto refugees have been given food and lodging, even if they came to Madrid on their own responsibility," Rubiera said. "Hereafter authorities in supreme command will be the sole arbiters on the question of evacuation."

The retreat toward Navalcarnero, almost within shelling distance of Madrid, left other government troops near Olias del Rey, in the south on the Toledo-Madrid highway, in dangerous straits. It placed insurgents in command of the Valmojado-Yuncos secondary highway, with the way clear to strike against the government troops at Olias del Rey from the rear.

Madrid Admits Retreat.

The war ministry acknowledged that the defending forces had abandoned Valmojado, returning to reform the defense lines 20 miles southwest of Madrid.

Three Fascist fighting planes, the war ministry asserted, were shot down during the day's fighting.

With the dull boom of cannon hourly growing nearer Madrid, Premier Francisco Largo Caballero held a four hour cabinet meeting to map plans for a "last ditch" defense of the capital.

Battle Over Air Waves.

RABAT, French Morocco, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Spanish and Portuguese radio stations fought a furious battle over the air waves tonight, affirming and denying that Spanish Fascist troops had entered the northwestern city of Oviedo, relieving the besieged insurgent garrison there.

After the station of the Portuguese Nationalist union had broadcast congratulations to the Spanish Fascists, the Madrid government radio savagely attacked the insurgent announcement as a "lie."

"Fascists," said a government speaker, "we have just heard your broadcast from Cadiz concerning what is happening in Oviedo. Listen; this is for you—we don't believe those lies. You will all die before our rifles."

The Jaca insurgent station joined in the argument, while the Cadiz station tried to smother the Madrid broadcast.

"All Spain knows the good news that our troops entered Oviedo," said a Jaca broadcaster. "The Marxists cannot resist us any more."

MOSCOW, Oct. 17.—The rapidly mounting anger of soviet Russia at what is considered inexcusable dilly-dallying by the European powers over the aid being extended by Germany, Italy and Portugal to the Spanish rebels appeared tonight to be approaching the boiling point.

Private conversation of officials, indignant editorials in the press and a flood of almost identical resolutions from factory and other citizen organizations urging the soviet to end the farce of nonintervention and send munitions to the Madrid government all seem to indicate that the Russian government is on the point of carrying out its threat to withdraw from the London agreement.

Russian officials, questioned about reports published abroad that a Norwegian ship loaded with Russian munitions is now en route to Spain, said they knew nothing about it. Officials of the Norwegian legation here also said they had heard nothing about it.

Refuse to Deny Reports.

When it was suggested to the soviet officials that they are not denying the report, one said:

"There probably will be no denial, even if we have documentary proof that the report is entirely false. It would be humiliating to us. Germany and Italy disdain to answer protests; why should we demean ourselves? Portugal even walked out of the [nonintervention] committee meeting at London after being accused of openly violating the nonintervention agreement."

Press Hits London Action.

Even with Russia declining to confirm or deny the reports of the Norwegian ship, foreign observers generally believe this country has sent no munitions to Spain.

The refusal of Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the nonintervention committee, to convoke the group for a discussion of soviet demands was attacked by all important Russian organs today as contrary to common sense and as playing into the hands of violators of the agreement.

The newspaper Pravda said Lord Plymouth's attitude reflected the policy of a number of states aiming at maximum procrastination so as to facilitate the rebels' taking of Madrid.

Claims Capture of Soviet Arms.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Reports from Spain today quote Col. Martin Alonzo, commanding Fascist forces near Oviedo, as having said the major part of the arms captured from government forces were manufactured in the soviet union in 1936.

LOCARNO DEAD; BRITAIN SPEEDS UP REARMAMENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 17.—With a new Locarno treaty to guarantee western European boundaries apparently impossible, the British cabinet today appointed a subcommittee to speed up the huge rearmament program, especially for the air force, and to consider putting aircraft and other industries on a war-time footing if necessary.

The purchase of American planes is believed also under consideration.

Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, asked Belgium for a further explanation of King Leopold's recent declaration that Belgium is returning to a policy of neutrality.

Among other elements which make a new pact seem impossible are: The news that Germany again is expanding its air force rapidly after it was believed it had reached the peak, and the Nazi refusal to participate in a Locarno conference unless Russia is excluded from any new pact.

Reports Half of Russia's Harvest Ruined by Drouth

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—[U. P.]—The newspaper Nacht Ausgabe today carried a report from Moscow that drouth had destroyed nearly half of the harvest in the cultivated area of the soviet union. The paper reported that the summer wheat and fodder suffered especially, although winter wheat held up better. The report said there was nothing left for farmers after the state's share was deducted and provisions were made for next year's sowing.

SPANISH REBELS FIRE AT LEFTISTS ON FRENCH SOIL

BORDEAUX, France, Oct. 17.—(AP)—A delayed dispatch from the Spanish border tonight said bullets from the Spanish side of the Bidassoa river whistled through the French town of Behobie during a fight last night between Spanish refugees on the French side and Spanish sentinels on the opposite bank of the river.

The leftist refugees taunted the sentinels with shouts and sang the "Internationale," the dispatch said.

The sentinels opened fire and hundreds of bullets fell on the French town, 15 shots striking the French customs house. A French customs officer suffered a slight head wound.

Noted French Aviator Jailed by Spanish Rebels

BAYONNE, France, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Reports received here tonight said Pelletier De Oisy, noted French long distance flyer, was jailed by Spanish insurgents who found him aboard a captured Spanish government steamship. De Oisy, a commander in the French air corps reserve, was said by authorities to have ben on his way to Bilbao on an official mission.

Spanish Consul Missing; Fear He Has Been Kidnaped

PERPIGNAN, France, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Francois Botey, Spanish vice consul in the French border town of Foix, was missing today. Friends feared he had been kidnaped and killed by Spanish extremists.

JEW NAMED HEIR IN WILL; GERMAN COURT BREAKS IT

Aryan Woman Leaves Her Estate to Friend.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—A Leipzig court ruled today that the last will of a German Aryan naming a Jew as heir is "immoral and invalid even if the will is drawn up correctly according to the letter of the law."

The decision was handed down by the court when a father and sister contested a will made by a German woman before her death in December, 1935. The will left all her possessions to a Jewish friend. The court said the woman's action seemed "all the more reprehensible" since she made her will after Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler proclaimed the anti-Jewish laws in Nuremberg.

"Family Ties Must Stick."

"It is unbearable to see a German appoint a Jew as heir because family ties must not be torn by entrusting a non-Aryan with rights which only belong to the family," said the official magazine Deutsche Justiz.

In Berlin a prosecuting attorney is demanding the annulment of the marriage of a Polish-Jewish tailor and his Christian wife despite the fact that the couple does not desire a divorce. The marriage took place in Czechoslovakia in 1935. The tailor and his German bride could not marry in Poland because mixed marriages are forbidden there.

The prosecutor charged there is a legal flaw in the marriage, while a legal expert of Prague university insisted it is legal according to Czechoslovakian law. A decision was postponed. The case revealed that authorities are investigating the legality of all Jewish-Christian marriages.

Butchers Jailed as Profiteers.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Sharp warnings against profiteering in food were issued by the ministry of justice today after five slaughter houses in the Ruhr district closed on police orders. A dozen butchers went to jail for selling meat at higher than proclaimed prices.

Through a nation-wide propaganda campaign, the public was told to curb its appetite. Farmers and food dealers—who have been arrested and fined—were given notice distribution methods would be disciplined strictly. Appeals to citizens to discipline their eating habits stressed the kind of food rather than the amount.

"With our own production we can take care of 100 per cent of our bread and flour needs," said Minister of Agriculture Walther Darre, "and also 100 per cent of our potato, sugar and milk demand. Of vegetables and meat, however, we produce only 90 to 94 per cent, of eggs and dairy products 80 to 85 per cent, and of fats only 50 to 55 per cent."

BALKANS GET SET FOR WAR; BRIDGE TO LINK ARMIES

New Span Over Danube Aids Little Entente.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Oct. 17.—The realistic way in which the Balkans are contemplating another general conflict is best gauged by arrangements concluded here this week between the governments of Jugo-Slavia and Rumania about the financing of the new bridge over the Danube at Turnu Severinu.

The bridge, directly linking Rumania's and Jugo-Slavia's railway systems, will bring Russia nearer to the Balkans and facilitate the coöperation of the armies of the little entente nations of Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and Czechoslovakia—they have 450,000 men under arms now among them—against their possible enemies in another war.

War Strategy to Change.

Excellent rail facilities will, after the opening of the new bridge, connect the horseshoe-shaped stretch of territory of the three little entente powers which encircle Austria and Hungary.

War stategy in the Balkans will be changed and the existing map profoundly affected.

The bridge also is expected to change the commercial map of the Balkans as it will provide a short cut route from the Black sea to the Adriatic, Aegean and Mediterranean seas.

The bridge will be located on the spot where the Romans erected a bridge 1,800 years ago. Since that time the Danube has divided rather than united the Balkan peoples and the disquieting international situation this year was needed to accelerate the decision to build a bridge at once.

Iron Out Financial Schemes.

Construction of the bridge also goes hand in hand with recent arrangements made by Stoyadinovich during his visit to Bucharest for exploitation of Rumanian oil fields by Jugo-Slavia for military requirements.

All this is a commentary on the uneasiness felt in this part of the world about the impending conflict. With the eventual opening up of the new span Jugo-Slavia will have two highly important links with Rumania and the rest of Europe north of the Danube. The first link is the great Belgrade rail and foot bridge across the Danube which was opened to trafic last November.

Brings Capitals Closer Together.

This bridge shortens the rail distance from Belgrade to Bucharest, capital of her ally in the little entente and the Balkan pact, by ten hours and brings the Black sea coast of Rumania into direct rail communication for the first time with Adriatic coast ports.

No less significant is the fact that the new bridge brings the Balkans nearer Russia and offers a trans-Balkan land route from Odessa to the Adriatic which marks a new development in European road and rail routes.

WEALTHY WIDOW IS FOUND SLAIN IN W. VIRGINIA

Mrs. F. B. Enslow Is Killed in Her Home.

Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Supposedly slain by a robber, the body of Mrs. Frank Bliss Enslow, 63, widow, was found today in the bedroom of her home.

Mrs. Enslow was the second wife of Frank F. Enslow, one of the capitalists who helped build the city of Huntington. He was prominent for years in the oil and gas business.

Woman Beaten, Stabbed.

Mrs. Enslow had been beaten on the head. Coroner F. X. Schuller said there were two wounds on the forehead, possibly made with an ice pick.

The body was discovered by a housekeeper, Elizabeth Bricker, after a colored chauffeur found a pocketbook belonging to Mrs. Enslow outside the house. Two rings later were found on the ground near the pocketbook.

Police Lieut. L. J. Swann favored the robbery theory after he learned several valuable rings and a wrist watch belonging to Mrs. Enslow were missing. Some of the rings were those the woman ordinarily wore when she retired for the night.

Enters Through Window.

The slayer was believed to have entered the house by a small window in Mrs. Enslow's room from which the screen had been removed. He was believed to have fled through a guest room window from which the screen had been kicked out. Bloodhounds are being used in a hunt for suspects.

Charles Baldwin, Mrs. Enslow's son by a former marriage, was the only member of the family in the house at the time of the slaying. Others there were the housekeeper and the chauffeur.

Smith College Will Erect $250,000 Alumnae Building

Northampton, Mass., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Ground will be broken next spring for a quarter million dollar Smith college alumnæ building, it was announced today by Mrs. Hollis T. Gleason of Cohasset, president of the alumnæ association. The building is to be completed in June, 1938.

SMITH COLLEGE ALUMNÆ MEET HERE NOV. 6-7

Leaders and Officials Plan Intimate Reports.

Campus memories will be revived when Smith college graduates assemble here on Nov. 6 and 7 for the fourth regional meeting of the Smith College Alumnæ association.

These daughters of Smith and their friends will hear Dr. William Allan Neilson, president of the Women's institution at Northampton, Mass.; Dean Marjorie H. Nicolson, and other members of the faculty and members of the student government association and of the alumnæ.

Really a National Event.

"The word 'regional' is scarcely appropriate, since the attendance of alumnæ from all parts of the country will make it a national event," explained Miss Ellen Holt of Lake Forest, general chairman, yesterday.

"Through first hand, friendly contact with representatives of the administration, trustees, faculty, and undergraduates, rumors will be laid to rest, accurate and inspiring knowledge of the present day college will be gained, and the far-away alumna will again become a well informed and potentially active member of the college family."

The high light of the two day program, Nov. 6 and 7, will be a dinner for alumnae and guests the evening of Friday, Nov. 6, at the Blackstone hotel, presided over by Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow of Englewood, N. J., widow of Ambassador Morrow and mother of Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, who was graduated from Smith in the class of 1928. President Neilson and Prof. Oliver W. Larkin of the department of art at Smith will be the speakers.

Plans for Formal Sessions.

Mrs. Edwin O. Griffenhagen, president of the Chicago Smith College club, hostess for the meeting, will preside at the first session, which will be a breakfast, at 11:30 a. m., Nov. 6, in the Blackstone. Speakers will include Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Hollis T. Gleason, president of the alumnae association, and Miss Jean MacLachlan, Smith senior and president of the student government association.

That afternoon there will be a reception in the Oriental galleries of the Art institute with Mrs. Joseph L. Valentine as hostess, and after this a tea for secondary school students and their parents at the Chicago College club, 196 East Delaware place.

Before the dinner that evening Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed of Lake Forest, another Smith alumna, will entertain at tea at the John G. Shedd aquarium.

After a visit to the University of Chicago on Saturday there will be a tea at the home of Mrs. Herbert E. Bradley, 5344 Hyde Park boulevard. Mrs. Bradley, a well known African explorer and author, is an alumna of Smith.

THEFT OF AUTOGRAPH LINCOLN AND MATHER LETTERS IS CHARGED

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Theft of valuable letters, one written by Abraham Lincoln and two by the early Mathers, those stern enemies of sin in colonial New England, was charged today to John V. Battiste, 36, college trained industrial engineer.

The complainant is Dr. Mather Cleveland, socially prominent physician in the exclusive Riverdale section of the Bronx.

Battiste, who is Dr. Cleveland's neighbor, is accused of having stolen the papers from Dr. Cleveland's home some time in August.

They were recovered yesterday from a Madison avenue stamp and autograph dealer, who said he paid $30 for them, and Battiste's arrest followed. Battiste denied the theft.

Lemke Quits Oklahoma Drive; Turns on Kansas

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 17—(AP)—W. F. Lemke, son of William Lemke, Union party nominee for President, today announced abandonment of a proposed "write-in" campaign for his father in Oklahoma. "Voters would have to take court action to get their votes counted, in the opinion of the attorney general," said the younger Lemke. "After conferences with our supporters in this state we have decided to abandon the campaign in Oklahoma and concentrate on a similar drive in Kansas."

U. S. COLLECTION OF SOVIET BILLS ALARMS CITIZENS

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Suits now before the courts, by which the federal government is seeking to acquire some $15,000,000 on the basis of the agreement reached between President Roosevelt and Maxim Litvinoff prior to the recognition of soviet Russia, are viewed with alarm by American citizens who holds claims totaling $400,000,000 against Russia, and with disapproval by legal authorities. Lawyers see in them a complete reversal of the traditional American policy of regarding private property inviolable against confiscation.

When President Roosevelt, without consulting congress, threw overboard the policy established by President Wilson and maintained by Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, and recognized soviet Russia, an apparently innocuous provision was made in the exchange of letters between Commissar Litvinoff and Mr. Roosevelt on Nov. 16, 1933.

Assigns Sums to U. S.

The Russians agreed to assign to the United States government "all amounts admitted to be due or that may be found to be due the soviet union as the successor of prior governments of Russia or otherwise from American nationals. . . ."

What this actually did was to put the United States government in the position of recognizing decrees by which the bolsheviks confiscated private property in the United States and elsewhere, and thus mark the first important confirmation, outside of Russia, of the Red policy toward private property.

This was sufficient to make leading American experts on international law squirm in their chairs, but how about those of our citizens who had claims amounting to $400,000,000 against the soviet?

No Move to Collect $400,000,000.

The agreement between Litvinoff and President Roosevelt was supposed to be part of a general program for the ascertainment and satisfaction of claims and counter-claims between the two countries. Yet so far nothing whatever has been done to collect the $400,000,000 owed Americans by Russia, and legal experts point out that if the American government is successful in its efforts to collect the $15,000,000 assigned to it by Russia, nothing can be expected in the future.

The United States, having done what no other country in the world has done—recognized the bolshevist decrees of confiscation—thus will have deprived its own citizens of all legal means of pressing their claims.

Press Own Citizens for Cash.

Legal experts wonder why the United States considers it necessary to press action against its own citizens for the assets that were confiscated by the bolsheviks and turned over to Washington for collection under the Roosevelt-Litvinoff agreement.

The Supreme court thwarted collection of about 3 million dollars by the government last January, ruling that the federal courts had no jurisdiction over the funds, now in the hands of state courts here.

CITY ITALIANS PAY TRIBUTE TO RED CROSS TODAY

Mayor Kelly yesterday proclaimed today as Italian day in Chicago in tribute to the Italian-American Red Cross, for which various benefit performances will be held today by Chicagoans of Italian birth or descent.

An advance observance of the day was held at the Lake Shore Athletic club last night, where Chicagoans of Italian origin gathered to welcome back to Chicago Dr. Eugene Cesario Chesrow surgeon, who returned last week from Ethiopia. Dr. Chesrow, who lives at 3240 West Washington boulevard, was head of an Italian-American Red Cross unit in the Italo-Ethiopian war. He left for the war zone early in December, 1935.

A benefit motion picture, depicting the ring day celebration at the 132d infantry armory on May 24, was shown at the McVickers theater yesterday and will be continued today, from 11 a. m. until midnight. Proceeds will go toward establishing schools throughout the city where young Chicagoans of Italian descent may learn the Italian language.

POLICE SLAYING IS BLAMED ON PAROLE LAXITY

Report on Ex-Convict's Crimes Ignored.

A year ago a police sergeant notified parole authorities that a PAROLED CONVICT was committing robberies with a gun. Nothing was done. Eight months later a policeman was murdered. The paroled convict and a pal, another parolee, are in the Cook county jail, under sentence to die for that murder in the electric chair next Wednesday.

But the policeman is dead.

The two killers under sentence of death are Andrew Bogacki, 25 years old, and Frank Korczykowski, 26. On Aug. 1 they were convicted by a jury in the Criminal court for the murder of Policeman Jerome McCauley. Notice was filed yesterday with the Illinois Supreme court at Springfield that writs of supersedeas will be asked to stay their executions.

Fire at Pursuing Policemen.

Policeman McCauley was shot to death last May 29 as he and Policeman Edward Brieske in a squad car were pursuing an automobile containing three men who had just committed two robberies. Two of the men were Korczykowski and Bogacki. The driver was Paul Jenkot, 24 years old.

Jenkot did not fire at the policemen and this was taken into consideration by the jury, which voted a 199 year prison sentence instead of death for him. Formal sentences in accordance with the jury verdicts were imposed by Judge John C. Lewe on Aug. 17. Jenkot is not appealing his sentence.

After the three men were captured they were placed in the county jail. On July 30 they made a desperate break for freedom. As they were being brought into the courtroom they overpowered their guards, stabbed two deputy sherifs, slugged two other men and raced through five floors of the Criminal Courts building before they were recaptured.

Has Typical Parole History.

Bogacki is the parolee whose criminal history is cited by police and others as a typical example of the failure of the system of supervision given paroled convicts. Had the parole authorities heeded the warning of Sergt. Louis Pfannkuche of the Racine avenue station, the life of Policeman McCauley would not have been sacrificed, police said.

"I advised the parole board on Sept. 27, 1935, that I had information Bogacki was out committing robberies with a gun," Sergt. Pfannkuche said yesterday. "We had him in custody for three days, but we couldn't get any identifications, so we followed police procedure, charged him with disorderly conduct, and he was discharged in court.

Three Join Forces.

"The parole authorities did nothing. Bogacki walked out of court and joined Korczykowski and Jenkot. I had arrested all three of them and knew them well. Jenkot once shot me through the left thigh, and I was lucky I was not killed or crippled."

This shooting occurred Sept. 12, 1928, when Sergt. Pfannkuche captured Jenkot in a burglary. Jenkot was never tried for the shooting, but was sentenced to one to twenty years for the burglary and was paroled in August, 1935.

As for Korczykowski, Pfannkuche said he had arrested him and Bogacki in 1927 and they were identified in many robberies. Korczykowski was paroled June 26, 1935, after serving six years of a robbery term. Bogacki was twice paroled as a thief, the second time being on June 21, 1934.

George T. Scully, state parole supervisor, admitted his office had a report of Bogacki's arrest by Sergt. Pfannkuche on Sept. 27, 1935, but there was no record in his files of anything having been done about this report.

TAVERN OWNER ROBBED.

MARY NOLAN SETTLES MANNIX SUIT, BUT KEEPS TERMS SECRET

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Mary Nolan, stage and screen actress, quietly settled a $500,000 suit today that had Hollywood in an uproar. The ex-girl friend of Frank Tinney, stage comedian, filed a stipulation in Manhattan Supreme court withdrawing her damage action against Edward J. Mannix, a vice president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

She had charged Mannix beat her so she had to undergo twenty serious operations. Her lawyer refused to discuss the terms of settlement.

ZINTAK FIGHTS WITHDRAWAL OF ESCROW FUNDS

Judge Francis B. Allegretti in Superior court yesterday modified the injunction restraining withdrawal of $131,165 of escrow funds of the Superior court clerk's office on deposit at five loop banks. This was to permit the withdrawal of ten of the funds amounting to approximately $4,000 in which the court litigation has been brought to a close.

The action was taken over the protests of Attorney Stephen Love, counsel for Frank V. Zintak, who was ousted as clerk of the Superior court when an audit disclosed a shortage of $26,500 in his accounts. Love reiterated his contention that Zintak is still the legal clerk of the court despite his ouster. Love asserted that Zintak alone has control of the funds.

Assistant State's Attorney William Kearney urged modification of the injunction and declared that Zintak's ouster was legal. Zintak, who paid back the money to the county three weeks ago, is scheduled to go to trial Nov. 2 on a charge of embezzling $26,500 from the escrow funds of his office.

Measure Drafted to End Tavern Hostess Abuses

Assistant Corporation Counsel Martin H. Foss yesterday completed the draft of a proposed amendment to the tavern ordinance to prohibit the employment of hostesses. The amendment will be considered by a subcommittee on license, headed by Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], which will meet shortly. The proposed measure would make it unlawful for women to solicit drinks for themselves or other persons in taverns. Agitation for such a restriction was started recently upon disclosures that young girls are hired as hostesses in many taverns.

MISS M'PHERSON WED IN CHURCH TO T. S. TYLER

Ellouise Pope and Jean Wegener Are Brides.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Judging by the portrait of Mrs. Mahlon D. Ogden which G. P. A. Healy painted of her when she was young, Mrs. Ogden's great-granddaughter, Miss Frances Ogden McPherson, looked very much like her maternal ancestress when she was married to Thomas Shepard Tyler in Christ church at Winnetka yesterday. Miss McPherson wore the same ivory brocaded satin gown that Frances Elizabeth Sheldon wore when she was married to Mahlon D. Ogden in 1856.

The gown is a lovely one with a full skirt, a bustle, and a short train over which fell the long tulle veil worn by yesterday's bride. The bodice is tight, buttoned up the front from waist to neck, and the sleeves are of elbow length. Rose point lace trims the gown.

In addition to the long tulle veil the bride wore a short rose point lace veil that has been worn by every bride in the family since Miss Sheldon 80 years ago.

The Mahlon Ogdens' daughter, Anna, who is Mrs. Frederick T. West and grandmother of yesterday's bride, wore it in 1888; Frances West wore it when she was married to Donald F. McPherson in 1913; and Eleanor West wore it when she became Mrs. Perry M. Shepard in 1920.

Sally Anne McPherson and Deborah Shepard, who were flower girls yesterday, will wear the veil, and perhaps the gown, some day, but it will not be for some years.

Reception in Parents' Home.

The Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard read the service which made Miss McPherson a bride at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and a reception followed at the Winnetka residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald F. McPherson. Mr. and Mrs. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. McPherson, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Martin Shaw, parents of the bridegroom, received in the living room, which was decorated with chrysanthemums in the autumnal coloring.

Miss Jane Shiverick of Cleveland was maid of honor, and Mrs. William Steinwedel, the bridegroom's sister, was matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Louise Forgan, Miss Elizabeth Ballard, Mrs. Hugh McBirney Johnston, and Mrs. Sidney G. Johnson.

Mr. Tyler and his bride will live at 20 East Goethe street in Chicago.

Miss Jean Wegener a Bride.

Two other brides yesterday were Miss Jean Wegener and Miss Ellouise Anne Pope. Miss Wegener was married at 4 o'clock in the East Walton street apartment of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Wegener, to Lowell J. W. Lammers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lammers.

Miss Pope, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pope of Evanston, became the bride of H. Hoyt Thompson in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pope Jr., cousins of the bride, in Glencoe.

Dr. Horace J. Bridges officiated at the Lammers-Wegener wedding. The bride and bridegroom repeated their vows before a screen of greens in the living room. She wore a lovely gown of ivory satin and a simple halo and veil of tulle, and carried a bouquet of white orchids and white roses.

Her 12 year old niece, Anne Stuart Campbell, the maid of honor, wore a full skirted frock of French blue moire made with puffed sleeves and she carried cream colored roses. Mrs. Henry Rumsey Jr. of Beloit, Wis., and Mrs. Harding Wilbur, the bridesmaids, wore similar dresses in an American Beauty shade and carried cream roses. Only relatives and close friends were present at the ceremony, but a larger reception followed. Mr. Lammers and his bride will live on the near north side.

Miss Ellouise Anne Pope.

Guests at the Thompson-Pope wedding were limited to relatives and close friends also, but a larger reception followed. The wedding was read before an altar that was constructed in the opening between the living room and a large porch. Every one was able to have a good look at the bride and her attendants, for they descended a long staircase in full view of the assembled company before entering the living room.

The bride wore ivory satin, a Brussels lace veil, and a Tudor cap. Her flowers were orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Jane McIntosh, the maid of honor, wore dahlia red velvet, empire style, and the bridesmaids wore identical gowns in fuchsia velvet. Mrs. Harry H. Thompson, mother of the bridegroom, wore black velvet, and the bride's mother was in emerald green.

Mr. Thompson and his bride departed for California on their honeymoon. After spending a month on a ranch there they will return to Evanston to make their home on Judson avenue.

WED 50 YEARS AND DAUGHTER 25 YEARS; DINE

Herman Wolff, 71 years old, and his wife, Johanna, who is 69, and whom he married 50 years ago yesterday, went through the marriage ceremony last night in the same church in which they took their vows in 1886.

Standing beside the couple in the Holy Cross Evangelical church, 31st and Racine avenue, was their daughter, Minnie, and her husband, Reinhold F. Rahn, who were married in that church 25 years ago yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolff have lived at 3056 Lock street for the last 45 years. After the ceremony they went to 3076 Lock stret, where their daughter Minnie and her husband have lived for 25 years, for a wedding supper. Two other daughters, 11 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren attended.

BRIDEWELL FOR ANNOYER.

Judge Eugene McGarry of the Municipal court yesterday found George Grantz, 28 years old, 47 North Long avenue, guilty of annoying a woman patron in a loop theater and sent him to the Bridewell to work out a $200 fine.

COMMUNITY FUND HELPS DIMINISH CHILDHOOD CRIME

ChurchAgencySupervises Straying Boys.

The social service department of the Chicago Church federation is one of the 154 private welfare agencies for which the Community Fund of Chicago is making its current $3,400,000 appeal.

This agency is concerned chiefly with juvenile delinquency. One of its chief problems is: Should the boy of 15 who steals a bucket of coal or siphons a gallon of gasoline out of a car be given a criminal record?

"Perhaps," said Rothe Hilger, social worker in the Boys' court at 1121 South State street, "he is doing it because he must have that coal for his home or because his parents force him to do it."

How Cases Are Handled.

If the boy is young, if he is a first offender, if he seems unaware of the seriousness of what he has done, his case often will be continued several months, and the judge will say: "I'm going to assign you to Mr. Hilger for supervision."

"Our task," says Mr. Hilger, "is not merely to keep the boy from stealing while he is under supervision, but to eliminate the conditions which caused him to steal in the first place. Probably attention will be directed primarily toward the family."

And thus the symptom of crime may be eradicated at its root, as the family is directed to various social agencies or to employment, if possible, while at the same time the interests of the young offender are directed into organized channels of work or play.

Supervises 150 Boys.

From 20 to 30 boys are assigned to Mr. Hilger's care each month. At present he has more than 150 boys living in widely distributed parts of the city under his supervision.

Of the total number of delinquent boys assigned to his care, 79 per cent are first offenders. Only 4 per cent have been affiliated with any social or welfare institution. All except 6.7 per cent are freed after their period of probation under Mr. Hilger's supervision.

PLANS TO TEST ASHES FOR TRACE OF LEAD POISON

Corean Held in New York Mystery Case.

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—The ashes of Lawrence W. Churchill, 73 year old New York lawyer, who died suddenly in Florida last January, will be analyzed for traces of acetate of lead, as a result of the mysterious poisoning of two relatives at the Churchill home here last week. That was announced in White Plains today.

Chang Soo Lee, 36, a Corean chef, butler and chauffeur for the dead man's 64 year old widow, Mrs. Ida L. Churchill, will be charged with homicide if the examination shows Mr. Churchill died of poison. Apoplexy was the supposed cause of death. The victims of the recent poisoning are in the White Plains hospital. The Corean is held in $5,000 bail on charges of assault with intent to kill.

Basis of Poison Charge.

It is said that those taken ill got acetate of lead in food and tooth powder.

District Attorney Walter Ferris of Westchester county said he would ask the authorities of St. Petersburg, Fla., where Mr. Churchill's body was cremated, to exhume the ashes for chemical analysis. A large amount of acetate of lead might show under chemical analysis, he was told.

Mrs. Louise Reeves of Indianapolis, 50, a niece of Mrs. Churchill, and her husband, George Reeves, a retired merchant, both are suffering from lead poisoning.

"Mrs. Reeves has very little chance for recovery," Attorney Ferris said afterward. "Death may come at any moment, or she may live for weeks. The poison affects both the heart and brain. She does not realize what has happened, does not understand that she has been poisoned, and does not know that Chang has been arrested."

The prosecutor said that Mr. Reeves was expected to recover.

What is said to be the most valuable miniature in the world, a self-portrait of Hans Holbein the younger, four centuries old and valued in 1929 at $100,000, was brought to Chicago yesterday.

The portrait, executed in oils on a block of wood four or five inches in diameter, was bought last month by Abris Silberman, New York art dealer, from a member of the Holbein family. Silberman, here with the portrait, intimated that a well known Chicago art collector is negotiating for it.

Dr. Paul Ganz of Basle, Switzerland, world authority on Holbeins, pronounced it "the most excellent of its kind." There are 25 or 30 Holbein originals in America.

HUEY LONG ALLY LAUNCHES FIGHT ON COMMUNISM

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Announcement that the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, former associate of Huey P. Long in the share-the-wealth movement, would launch a $1,500,000 "nationalist front against communism" from New York Tuesday was made today by Smith's personal representative, Harry Costello.

Costello said the new anti-communism organization was the result of an intensive 11 week tour of the country by Smith during which "more than 400 financial leaders in 22 major cities pledged a war chest of $1,500,000 for a nationalist front against communism."

"He has changed his idea of his own rôle before the public," Costello said of the Rev. Mr. Smith. "While Smith will attack the New Deal very violently, he will clearly indicate that this presidential campaign is only one incident of his fight."

ANGLICAN BISHOP CONCLAVE BACKS A WORLD LEAGUE

Peace Resolution Called "Cup of Tea."

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The Pan-American conference of Anglican and Episcopal bishops in a closing session yesterday in St. Luke's procathedral, Evanston, adopted a peace resolution endorsing in principle the league of nations. The resolution was adopted with one dissenting vote, that of the Rt. Rev. Campbell Gray, of Michigan City.

At the request of the delegation of Canadian bishops, a clause in the resolution expressing hope that the United States would define terms on which this country would coöperate with other nations in the substitution of law for war, was deleted.

No "Inherent Weakness."

"We would emphasize that the inadequacy of the present peace machinery is not due to any inherent weakness of a noble conception," the resolution declared, "but to the sin of man. The Christmas promise of peace is only to men of good will."

The resolution was submitted by a committee headed by Archbishop Edward Hutson of the West Indies.

Disappointment with the report was voiced by Bishop Walter Mitchell, of Arizona, who declared the document was "only a cup of tea" offered by the church when the "world is on fire."

"Tea" Called "Pretty Strong."

Bishop Joseph Francis expressed the opinion that the resolution "is a pretty strong cup of tea," while Bishop Irving Peake Johnson, of Colorado, asked Bishop Mitchell what he wanted—"a bomb"?

This morning the bishops and archbishops will fill various Episcopal pulpits about the city and suburbs and the conference will close tonight with a massmeeting at the Auditorium theater. Massed choirs of men and boys will sing and the veteran missionary bishop of Alaska, the Rt. Rev. Peter Trimble Rowe, will be the preacher.

Review of the Week: Chicago: The Nation: The World:

Spanish Revolt.

Men and machines dug trenches around Madrid and threw up barbed wire barricades in the streets during the thirteenth week of the Spanish revolt. The western front of the government's defenses by Thursday had dwindled from 40 to within 20 miles of the capital. Rebel officials at Burgos announced that they had rejected an offer from "several Madrid leaders" to surrender if concessions were made.

The rebels' great gains west of Madrid began a week ago Thursday with the capture of San Martin, 40 miles distant. The government drove untrained soldiers into counter attacks on San Martin but the war wise, motorized rebel troops trapped them, outfought them and forced them to retreat to Brunete, 19½ miles west of Madrid. Then as the week ended Franco sent a three column attack against the capital, one along the road from San Martin, one along the road from Maqueda, and the third along the road from Toledo. [See main news section.]

Last Sunday the rebels took the Alberche river power dam at Cebreros, near San Martin, and on Tuesday claimed to have cut off four-fifths of Madrid's electricity.

The dynamite-throwing Asturian miners who a week ago battled into Oviedo on the north coast after three months' siege took most of the city. Rebel soldiers fortified themselves for a last stand. A Fascist rescue column was stopped near Oviedo early in the week, but yesterday insurgent headquarters said, succeeded in reaching the city and lifting the siege.

The arrival in Madrid on Wednesday of the first of four shiploads of food and clothing sent by Russia helped reduce the growing food shortage in the Spanish capital. It also appeared to refute the rebels' claim that they had severed Madrid's one remaining railroad to the coast.

Russia meanwhile made its second protest to the London nonintervention committee against German, Italian and Portugese military aid to the rebels in violation of agreed neutrality. Its first was rejected by the committee nine days ago with the objection that Russia offered no remedy. In reply, Russia proposed that British and French warships blockade Portuguese ports against arms shipments to the rebels. Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the committee, rejected such a blockade as beyond the committee's power.

Lord Plymouth said that the accused governments had been asked to make replies to Russia's charges and that new evidence necessitating an immediate committee meeting was lacking. On Friday Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden received a British Labor party demand for action to stop rebel assistance. Eden said the committee would meet this week.

Dictator Josef Stalin of Russia on Thursday broke his silence on Spain, declaring that "freedom and liberation of Spain is a concern of the world." The next day he said that Russia was doing everything within its power for Madrid. While Russian labor increased its demands that Russia arm the Spanish loyalists to equal the rebel war machine, reports from Norway said that a Norwegian ship had sailed on Friday from a Russian port with a munitions cargo for Madrid.

Belgium Balks.

Belgium's traditional neutrality guaranteed by five powers failed it when Germany took the easiest way to attack France in the world war. The German army invaded Belgium on Aug. 4, 1914, after the late King Albert had refused Germany's demand for unresisted passage to France. Belgium's Meuse river plains and Paris-Berlin highway provided an open route to flank France's fortifications on its German frontier.

The situation still exists. France's Maginot line of fortifications from Belgium to the Rhine river and natural fortifications along the Rhine to Switzerland form a barricade which would be easier to circle on the north if Germany should attack France. [See map.]

Hoping to safeguard itself in the future, Belgium abandoned isolated neutrality after the world war and went in for collective security as inspired by the league of nations. Besides a mutual assistance treaty with France, Belgium signed the Locarno treaty of 1925, joining with France, Great Britain, Germany and Italy in pledging assistance in maintaining present German boundaries.

Three conditions, however, have nullified the league's collective security: [1] Ethiopia was not secured against Italy's conquest; [2] France and Belgium were not secured against Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland last March, and [3] France no longer has the strongest war machine on the continent to secure Belgium.

Thus, King Leopold III., on Wednesday announced that Belgium should return to the prewar neutrality and isolation of his grand-uncle, King Leopold II. The 35 year old king, who succeeded his father, Albert, in 1934, told his ministers that small countries could no longer rely on collective security, but must arm themselves and keep out of their neighbor's conflicts. He proposed that Belgium extend its military service and reorganize its defenses.

France immediately asked King Leopold what effect his neutrality would have on the French alliance, the Locarno treaty and its revision, and Belgium's league membership. France's main fear was that Belgium would influence other small nations to renounce mutual assistance while still asking protection.

A French military official said that a neutral Belgium was as good as an allied Belgium because "if the Germans should invade Belgium she would have to fight anyway." French conservatives said that the French-Russian military assistance treaty and France's communist trend were largely responsible for Leopold's decision. France would be required to help Russia against a German attack and Belgium would probably be a battlefield.

Belgium told Britain that it did not intend to quit the league or renounce international obligations. British observers believed that a stronger Belgium militarily would help keep peace. The opinion was that, whether Belgium was a neutral or an ally, Britain would have to fight its battles. One drawback to strict Belgian neutrality, however, would be lack of coöperation in an air defense system, vital to Britain.

On Wednesday, before Leopold spoke, the British cabinet decided that a treaty replacing the Locarno, scrapped by Germany's Rhineland violation, was practically impossible. German-Russian hostility has obstructed a proposed conference aimed at collective security in western and thence eastern Europe. Now Leopold's decision removes Belgium's coöperation.

Air Minister Pierre Cot of France announced Friday that factories producing and equipping government war planes would be immediately nationalized under Premier Leon Blum's recent legislation for government control of war industries. [See Foreign Notes, main news section and Business Review.]

Simpson vs. Simpson.

"Simpson, W., vs. Simpson, E. A." So read the divorce petition filed last Wednesday in Ipswich assizes, a rural English court which generally hears workers' and farmers' disputes. While no British newspaper published the fact, that suit made news around the world. The woman was Mrs. Wallis Simpson, Baltimore aristocrat, who has been the habitual companion of King Edward VIII. of Great Britain since 1934, when he was the prince of Wales. The man was her husband, Ernest A. Simpson, American-born Briton, ex-officer of his majesty's Coldstream guards and head of a London shipping agency.

Londoners, to whom Mrs. Simpson is "the most talked of woman in the world," learned only by hearsay that his majesty's "unofficial hostess" was suing her husband for divorce on the grounds of adultery. Lest they offend the dignity of the crown, the privacy of the king, or merely the zeal of British censors, London newspapers have said almost nothing lately of King Edward's constant appearances in public with Mrs. Simpson. These reached their numerical height this summer when the king took Mrs. Simpson and other guests not including Mr. Simpson on his Mediterranean cruise. Upon their return to London in September Mrs. Simpson accompanied him to Balmoral castle, Scottish royal seat. Edward last Sunday moved into Buckingham palace.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson moved out of their Bryanston residence and the next day Mrs. Simpson filed suit. Simpson announced he would not defend himself. British law recognizes adultery as the only grounds for divorce and Mrs. Simpson will be forced to name a co-respondent when the court, which opens Oct. 27, hears the case.

The first speculation was whether Mrs. Simpson might become queen of Great Britain. King Edward, by law, is free to marry a commoner. But marriage to Mrs. Simpson seemed improbable in the face of public antagonism. Next speculation was that Edward might abdicate to wed his friend. The possibility is remote.

Mrs. Simpson, now 42 years old [the same age as the king], met him soon after her marriage to Simpson in 1928, the second for both. [See Graphic section and main news section.]

The Landon Campaign.

Shortly after his return to Topeka Friday from his latest hard hitting campaign tour in the middle west, Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican nominee for President, announced he would leave almost immediately on a new and unexpected campaign trip to California. This trip and the previously scheduled tour of the east will give his campaign a whirlwind finish. He was scheduled to leave for the west coast tonight. [See main news section.]

Gov. Landon's major address in California will be made in Los Angeles next Tuesday night. On the way to the coast and return he will make many appearances in towns and cities of the west. California, until recently, has been generally conceded as a Democratic state. Gov. Landon makes no such concession. "We are going to carry it," he said.

The governor, seemingly untired by his strenuous tour of Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois during the last eight days, is looking forward with enthusiasm to the final phase of the campaign. The results of last week's tour were so successful that the nominee is more confident than ever of election on Nov. 3. Republican strategists now refuse to concede any state except those of the "solid south."

After his Los Angeles speech Gov. Landon will start the final swing of his campaign. He will make major addresses in St. Louis, Indianapolis, Philadelphia and New York. The governor will make less formal talks in Oklahoma City, Charleston, W. Va., Springfield and Joplin, Mo.

At Detroit Tuesday night the governor made what observers said was the greatest speech of his campaign to date. He called upon his opponent, President Roosevelt, to tell the American people—before election day—what, if anything, he proposes to do toward continuing the drive for an all powerful executive in Washington and the changing of the constitutional form of government in this country.

The great underlying issue of the campaign, the governor said, "is the threat of the present administration to our American form of government."

During the morning the governor was taken on a two mile parade through Detroit streets, filled with cheering men and women. During the day he conferred with Henry Ford, automobile magnate, and other Detroit industrial leaders. Mr. Ford later issued a statement in which he strongly indorsed Gov. Landon for the presidency.

As on previous campaign trips, crowds gathered at every stopping place of the Landon special train. A huge crowd heard his major speech in Cleveland.

Speaking in the same hall in which he was nominated for the presidency last June Gov. Landon outlined specific proposals for a "common sense, workable solution" of the relief problem. He denounced the "waste, extravagance, and politics" in the New Deal administration of relief.

Roosevelt Campaign.

President Roosevelt's campaign tour of the west reached a climax Wednesday night in Chicago. Following his arrival in the afternoon he was escorted to the Chicago Stadium—where he was nominated for the presidency in 1932—by a parade of union labor and Democratic ward organizations. The marchers, whose presence had been ordered by their leaders, numbered more than 100,000. At the Stadium the President addressed a crowd of more than 25,000 persons.

He devoted his speech to a glowing review of New Deal policies which, he asserted, had saved the country from bankruptcy or worse.

"Behind the growing recovery of today," he said, "is a story of deliberate government acceptance of responsibility to save business—to save the American system of private enterprise and economic democracy—a record unequaled by any government in history.

"Some people say that all this recovery just happened. But in a complicated modern world recoveries from depressions do not just happen. The years from 1929 to 1933, when we waited for recovery just to happen, proves the point." [See Business Review.]

From Chicago Mr. Roosevelt invaded the same territory in Michigan and Ohio through which Gov. Landon had been traveling the same week. Near Grand Rapids the Roosevelt and Landon special trains passed each other. Two major addresses were delivered later in the week by the Democratic candidate. On Thursday night he spoke in Detroit and on Friday in Cleveland.

His Detroit speech contained a warning to automobile manufacturers "and many other manufacturers" that they must increase the annual pay of their workers. As in Chicago, Mr. Roosevelt reviewed economic gains for which his administration claims the credit.

"It is my belief," he said, "that the manufacturers of automobiles and the manufacturers of many other commodities must, by planning, do far more than they have done to date to increase the yearly earnings of those who work for them."

The Cleveland speech was, in many respects, a repetition of Mr. Roosevelt's Chicago address. The theme in almost all of the speeches on this tour, formal and informal, was that the New Deal had brought recovery from the depression.

The President will wind up his campaign by a tour of New York state, finishing with a major address the Saturday night before election in New York City.

Political Notes.

For the first time returns from all forty-eight states were listed in the weekly tabulation of the Literary Digest presidential poll, made public Friday. The total vote showed 1,004,086 for Landon, 728,008 for Roosevelt, and 61,981 for William Lemke, third party candidate. Although the lead of the Republican candidate dropped slightly, he still held a substantial majority of almost 3 to 2.

Illinois was claimed by leaders of both parties. George F. Harding, Republican national committeeman, predicted the state would go to the Landon-Knox ticket by 400,000. Pat A. Nash, Democratic national committeeman, asserted that President Roosevelt will carry Cook county and downstate and win Illinois by 250,000.

Former President Herbert Hoover, speaking Friday at Philadelphia in behalf of the Landon campaign, accused the New Deal administration of "juggling" fiscal reports of the government to make "expenditures look less than they are." The former President strongly criticized what he called the "double bookkeeping" methods of the New Deal. He asserted that much of the huge expenditure credited by the administration to relief had been used in a reckless increase of ordinary routine expenses of government.

Congressman William Lemke, Union party presidential candidate, took his campaign into eastern states. At Erie, Pa., Mr. Lemke attacked the New Deal farm program and trade policies, which he called "disastrous to the whole nation." He said the New Deal crop reduction scheme was "vandalism." The Lemke-O'Brien ticket on Thursday was assured a place on the ballot in Michigan.

Early in the week Dr. Francis E. Townsend, head of the Old Age Revolving Pension organization, requested his followers in states in which the Lemke-O'Brien ticket will not appear on the ballot to vote for Gov. Landon. The action was expected to greatly increase support for the Kansas governor in California.

The fire department of Columbus, Neb., was called to put out a fire raging through farm buildings owned by J. C. Ernest. On arrival the firemen learned there was no water supply. They called Frank Scholz, a well digger. Within a short time Scholz had dug a well which provided enough water to save some of the buildings.

A farm truck on which John Oglebee was taking a calf to market collided with an automobile driven by L. G. Reese in Savannah, Ga. Oglebee admitted the accident was his fault. He offered Reese his damaged truck and the calf. Reese accepted.

After delivering a load of goods at the home of Peter Hill in Valparaiso, Ind., A. J. Worstell started to drive away in his truck. A wire clothes line, attached to the Hill home, became entangled in a wheel of the truck. Before Worstell could stop, the whole side of the house was torn loose.

Police in Berlin, Germany, captured a burglar. Tattooed around his neck were the words: "This head belongs to the hangman."

H. Guidotti, a dairy milker in San Francisco, filed suit for damages against his employer. He said he had been kicked by a cow while standing behind the animal. The suit was dismissed when an official of the California industrial commission testified that a cow cannot kick backwards. A cow can kick only sideways and frontward, he said.

At New Brunswick, N. J., Peter Marlboro admitted in court that he had turned a farmer's cow out of a barn so that he could sleep in her stall. He was sentenced to 180 days in the workhouse.

While running across a field near Battle Creek, Mich., a hunting dog and a rabbit collided. Both animals went sprawling.

The City

Time Ballot.

Shall Chicago [1] retain its present eastern standard time the year around, [2] have central standard time in winter and daylight saving time in summer, or [3] have central standard time the year around? Political questions to be decided in the Nov. 3 elections took precedence last week over Chicago's time question up for referendum in the same election. Nevertheless selection of time was a paramount issue last fall and is still important to Chicagoans.

The city council passed an ordinance last October abolishing the system of semi-annual change for permanent eastern standard time in response to public sentiment and in the belief that more daylight on winter afternoons would aid health and reduce trafic accidents. The ordinance became effective last March 1.

The Chicago Federation of Labor, which opposed summer daylight saving time for the 17 years of its existence, proposed a referendum. The council appropriated $1,000 for the circulation of petitions. The Democratic organization in Chicago presented petitions during the summer to the board of elections and the question was placed on the ballot.

According to the election board, the voter can mark his choice on each of the three questions, or any one or two of them. Thus, if he favors eastern time, for example, he can merely mark "Yes" on that proposition, or, he can mark "Yes" on that proposition, and "No" on both of the other propositions. The latter course is most desirable, since each of the marks will be counted, but the ballot will not be disqualified if only one of the questions is marked.

Proponents of permanent daylight saving time believe that three months' experience with eastern standard time during short days last spring and this fall will result in overwhelming approval.

The Dodd Case.

Attorney Walter F. Dodd, authority on constitutional law and former Yale university professor, on Friday completed his introduction of evidence before Judge Walter P. Steffen in Superior court that his wife is unfit to assume custody of their two children. Mrs. Sue Hutchinson Dodd of Winnetka, former club woman and lecturer, is suing her husband for separate maintenance. She demands that Dodd surrender the children, Walter H., 10 years old, and Laura Alice, 7. She has not seen them since May, 1935, when she went to a Wisconsin sanitarium for a few weeks and Dodd sent the children to his sister in Atlanta, Ga.

Dodd's contest of the suit is based on his wife's mentality. Dr. H. Douglas Singer, head of the department of mental diseases at the University of Illinois college of medicine, testified that he examined Mrs. Dodd and found that she had delusions of persecution which might endanger her children. Previously Dr. John Favill and Dr. Esther T. Frankel, psychiatrists, had testified for Mrs. Dodd that she is sane.

Frederick Reed, principal of Greeley school in Winnetka, was one of two who testified that Mrs. Dodd had threatened to kill her children. Mrs. Dodd has charged that progressive educational practices at the school had caused most of her trouble and that its psychologists had disrupted her home with criticism of her as a parent.

Miss Clara Belle Baker, principal of the National Kindergarten college in Evanston, which the Dodd children previously attended, testified that Mrs. Dodd in 1932 threatened to burn down the school building and kill several of the faculty because she was convinced teachers had shown her neighbors records that were derogatory to Walter. Mrs. Dodd's attorney brought out that Mrs. Dodd's zeal for her children may have been due to worry over Walter's "asthma, pigeon toes, and poor eyesight."

City Notes.

When Thomas F. Dooley, a Chicago printer, and Mrs. Evelyn Taggart, a divorcée, decided to marry in Crown Point after 9 o'clock recently, they reopened the marriage mill war and feud between Mayor Vincent Youkey and Deputy County Clerk Harold Heyer of Lake county. Fortified with a bottle of liquor, the couple met Clerk Heyer and the party went to the courthouse. Heyer waved aside two policemen who stopped them outside with a warning of the new ordinance. He issued Dooley and Mrs. Taggart a marriage license for $7.50. The regular fee is $2. They were then arrested as they emerged from the courthouse and jailed for the night. Mayor Youkey was undecided next morning whether to charge them with violation of the new ordinance or intoxication. He chose the latter, although he announced that action might be started against Heyer. Upon release the couple obtained a new marriage license and left town.

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission reported a decrease of 11,000 cases during September. The commission had forecast an increase of 15,000 relief cases from 146,000 to 161,000 in September. The unexpected drop was attributed mainly to the belated hiring of nearly 7,000 people by the WPA. A real estate tax for relief purposes was approved by 40 residents of Proviso township at a recent town meeting. A misunderstanding as to the time of the meeting caused 87 residents to hold one later. They voted 87 to 0 against the tax. Township officials now wonder which meeting was legal.

The city council passed an ordinance in special session restoring to city jurisdiction some of the streets and alleys previously dedicated to the Jane Addams housing projects. These thoroughfares were not needed in the construction of the $6,000,000 WPA project. They are roughly bounded by Racine avenue, Loomis and Arthington streets and Roosevelt road.

An aldermanic subcommittee ordered the city law department to prepare an ordinance outlawing "tavern hostesses." Police Commissioner Allman told the committee that the ordinance should include a clear definition of a hostess. At present, he said, women cannot be arrested for soliciting men to buy drinks unless they are known prostitutes. Assistant Corporation Counsel Martin Foss defined a hostess as "a female barfly who sidles up to strange male customers and practices her siren arts."

George Herbert Jones, organizer and president of the Inland Steel company, gave securities valued at more than a million dollars to the Wesley Memorial hospital. The money will be used to build the first unit of a proposed $5,000,000 hospital group across from Northwestern university's McKinlock campus.

A record of 18 jail sentences for trafic law violations was set Tuesday by Judge Joseph A. Graber in the Safety court. There were 118 new defendants as well as 42 continued cases scheduled for the day's hearing. Nine offenders got 10 day sentences. Eight were sentenced to 5 days each, and one received a 21 day sentence.

Washington

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. on Monday announced an agreement between the United States, Great Britain and France for the "free" movement of gold subject to cancelation on 24 hours' notice. The secretary described the agreement as a "new gold standard." He refused to reveal whether there was any agreement on a ratio between dollar, pound, or franc.

Financial experts considered the agreement rubbery, inasmuch as Morgenthau has the power to pay more or less than $35 per fine ounce for gold, the artificial price established in 1933, and President Roosevelt retains the authority to further devalue the American dollar. Formerly gold was exported from the United States only on licenses issued by the secretary of the treasury. Most of the business in exporting and importing gold was done by private banking firms.

Under the new agreement purchases can be made only by the stabilization funds of the three party countries. Under the arrangement, French and British stabilization funds may purchase gold from the United States, either earmarking it for their account or making the actual transfer to their own vaults. Secretary Morgenthau expressed the hope that other nations soon would join in the gold bloc agreement. [See Business review.]

Frank A. Tichenor, publisher of Aero Digest, made public in New York a copy of a letter linking the name of Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, with a scheme to reorganize the nation's air lines in connection with the cancelation of air mail contracts by the Roosevelt administration in February, 1934.

The letter, signed with the initials "G. W. S.", standing for Grenville W. Stratton, acknowledged agent of Elliott Roosevelt, was addressed to Herbert A. Reed, former associate of Anthony H. G. Fokker, Dutch airplane manufacturer. The letter said, in part:

"Politics seem to have gotten into this to such a terrible degree that it is almost impossible to predict what the outcome will be, but you may rest assured that both E. and I are working with you on the matter."

A week ago it was disclosed that Fokker had given the senate munitions committee an affidavit in which he told of a contract between himself and Elliott Roosevelt in connection with a proposed sale of military airplanes to soviet Russia. The contract later was canceled.

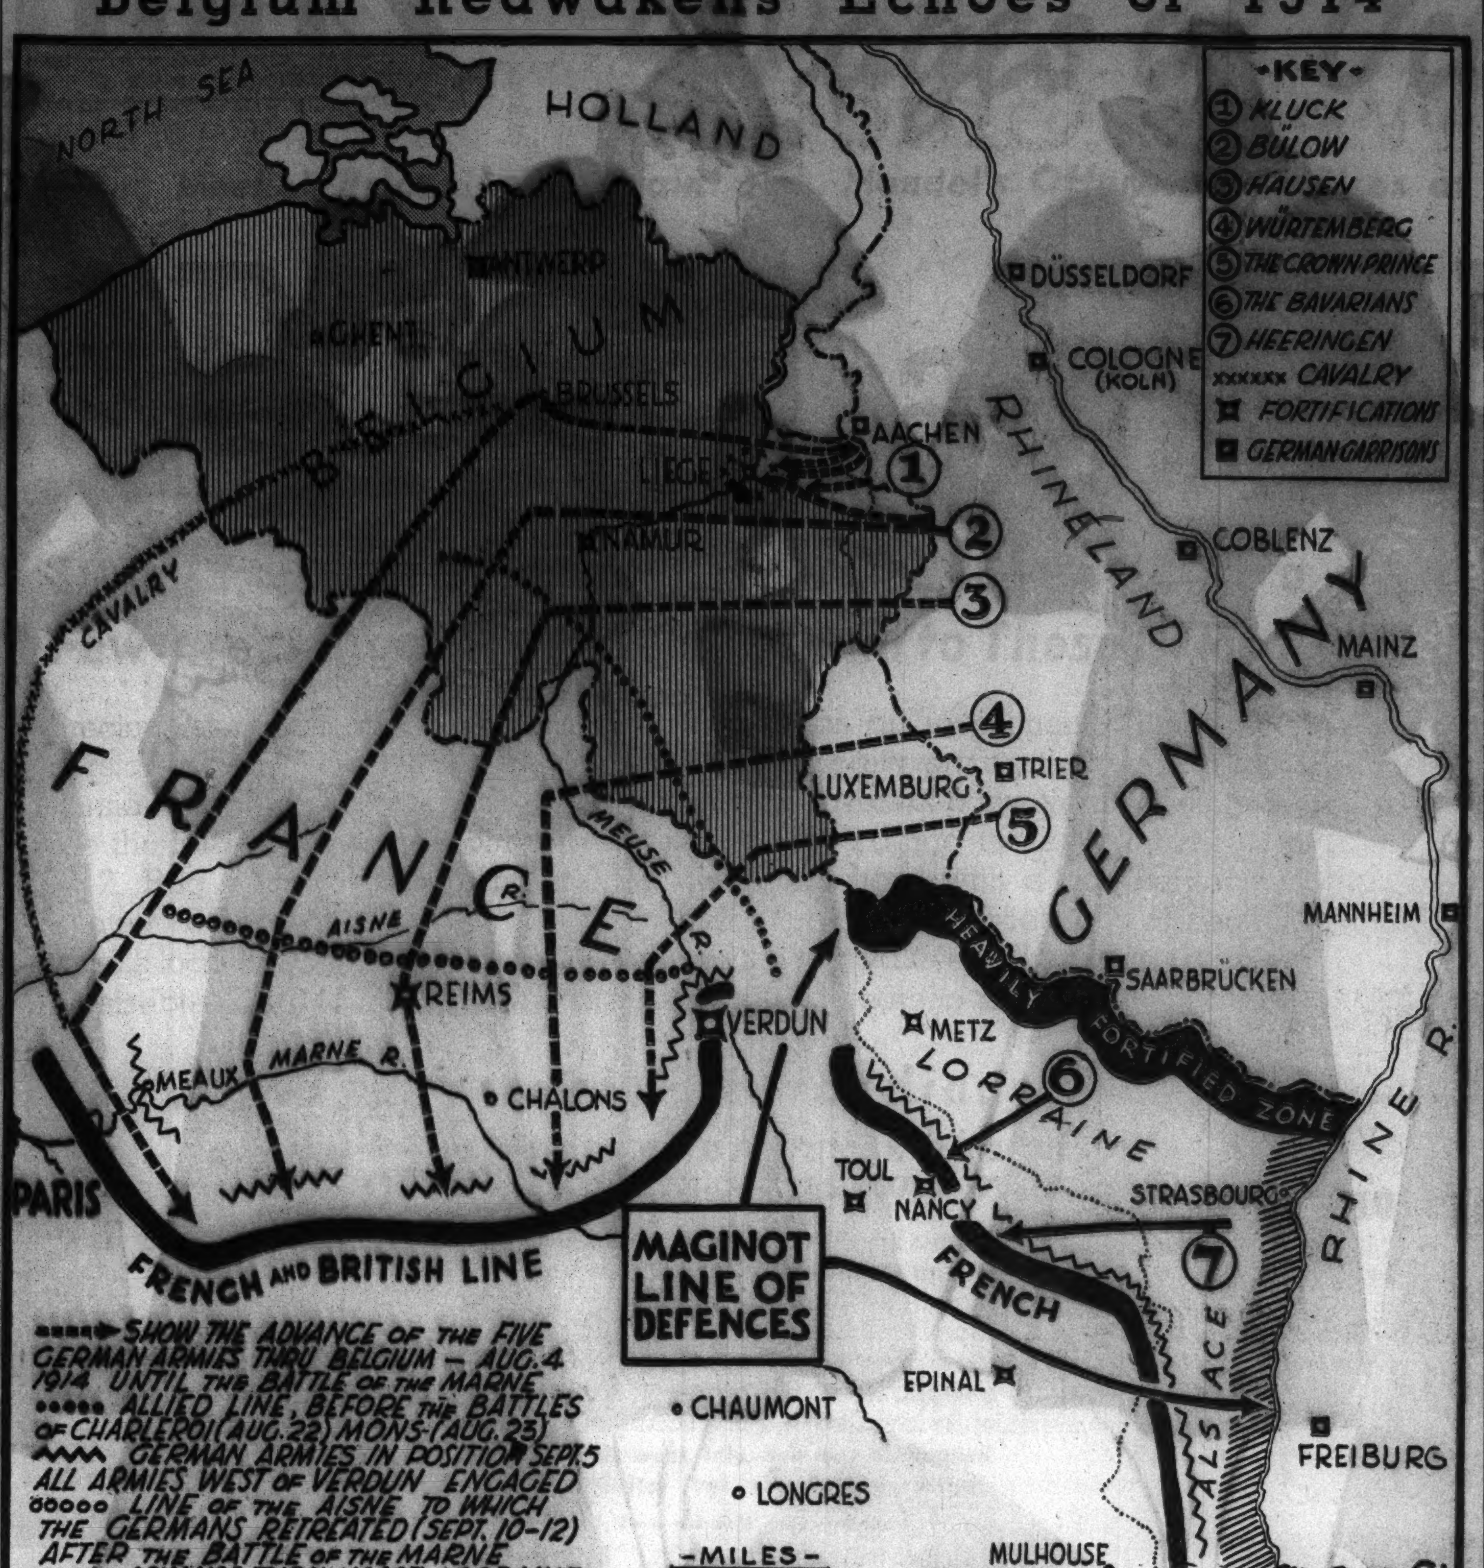
In a book published Wednesday, Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, predicted that widespread unemployment can be expected to continue in the United States for years to come. Hopkins asserted that this "army of unemployed" will be "flexible, increasing and decreasing with seasons, with changes in production habits and industrial geography, but chiefly, until we have vanquished it, changing with cyclical unemployment." Mr. Hopkins argued that a "work program" is the only possible solution "for those who cannot be absorbed by a long time or large scale public works program."

Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance corporation on Tuesday advocated modification of the surplus tax act. He asserted that recovery has so progressed since enactment of the new tax law that it could be amended to "encourage expenditures for modernization of all character." Mr. Jones disputed charges that the administration is antagonistic to business.

The United States Supreme court on Monday granted petitions for review involving half a dozen New Deal statutes, including the Wheeler-Rayburn public utility act, which banned holding companies. At the same time the court refused to reconsider its decisions of last spring, which held unconstitutional the New Deal's municipal bankruptcy act and New York state's minimum wage law. The court declined to review a case involving the application of the Wagner labor relations act, but there was no question of constitutionality in this case.

The magazine Wallace's Farmer and Iowa Homestead, of which Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace is "editor on leave," and four other farm journals were granted a review by the Supreme court of their conviction in lower courts of violating the Sherman anti-trust act, for which they were assessed damages of $37,000. Secretary Wallace was active head of the Wallace Publishing company, one of the defendants, during the existence of the alleged conspiracy to fix advertising rates.

Belgium Reawakens Echoes of 1914



Since Germany invaded Belgium in 1914 and made it a battlefield of the world war, Belgium has sought to safeguard itself against repetition of its crushing defeat in a war essentially between other powers. The latest step is King Leopold's decision that Belgium should no longer rely on collective security and mutual assistance treaties, but isolate itself as a neutral country with stronger defenses. The map shows why, if France and Germany were at war again, Belgium would again face its 1914 plight. Then Germany chose the plains of Belgium as the easiest way to invade France and to flank its fortifications on the German frontier. France since the war has built up the great "Maginot line" of fortifications which would make hazardous a German attack on southeastern France. The routes of the German army across Belgium in 1914 still are Germany's best bet in a war against France. See story on preceding page.

Crime

Lying on a stretcher in the Ogle county court at Oregon, Ill., Guy Tallmadge, 56, former embalmer of Rockford, Ill., went on trial Friday on a charge of murder. The state accuses him of having killed his wife, Bessie, 51, last May 19 on a lonely road near Oregon. Prosecutors and defense counsel spent four days in questioning veniremen before a jury of twelve men was accepted and sworn in.

During these days Tallmadge became ill in the courtroom several times. Late Thursday Judge Harry Edwards of Dixon, Ill., presiding, ordered the defendant examined by a physician. He was reported to be suffering from nervous excitement and high blood pressure.

In court was the state's star witness, Mrs. Frances Birch, 32, red haired and comely. The state will contend that Tallmadge killed his wife because he had fallen in love with Mrs. Birch, a widow. Shortly after the murder Tallmadge told authorities his wife had been killed by a bandit, who escaped. Later he confessed the slaying and named Mrs. Birch as the reason. The widow admitted that Tallmadge had given her a diamond ring a few days before Mrs. Tallmadge was slain. The trial jury was qualified to inflict the death pelalty. [See main news section.]

Police and federal agents were searching throughout the middle west for three desperate gunmen who broke out of the Greenfield, Ind., jail last Sunday after slugging Sherif Clarence Watson on the head with an iron bar. The fugitives, who were being held for the murder of an Indianapolis policeman, are known as the "new Dillinger gang." They got that name by boasting they would avoid mistakes made by the late John Dillinger [also an Indianan] and would surpass his exploits.

The three gunmen are Clarence Lee Shaffer Jr., John Barton, alias Alfred Brady, and James Dahlhover. Barton, an ex-convict, is the leader of the gang. Barton and Shaffer were arrested last spring in Chicago with loot from several jewelry holdups. The gunmen, after beating Sherif Watson into insensibility, seized guns in his office. They commandeered the automobile of Edgar D. Ridlen of Greenfield and drove off in the direction of Indianapolis. Police believed they had found a hideout either there or in Chicago.

Massachusetts authorities continued their investigation of the murder of Grayce Asquith, blonde photographer's model of Weymouth, Mass. Human legs, wrapped in burlap, found eight days ago in Boston harbor, were identified as those of the missing woman. Held as a material witness was Oscar Bartolini, 50, a chef of Quincy, Mass. Police said they had found burlap sacking in his home.

Mrs. Ruth Moran, 21, mother of one child and expecting another, said, tearfully, "I'm guilty but I didn't mean it," when she was arraigned Tuesday in Kenosha, Wis., on a charge of slaying her 42 year old lover, Herbert Winter, Kenosha automobile salesman and family man.

On Thursday, however, Mrs. Moran changed her mind and asked to withdraw the guilty plea. The woman gave police two versions of the murder. First she said she killed Winter because he threatened to tell a new sweetheart of their intimate relations. Later she said she used a pistol to hold up Winter and force him to sign over his car so she and her new sweetheart could flee to California. In both stories she insisted she did not intend to shoot. She led police to his body in a clump of bushes near Kenosha. Until recently Mrs. Moran was employed as a maid in a Highland Park, Ill., home.

Police of Westchester, N. Y., on Friday arrested Chang Soo Lee, Chinese servant in the home of the late L. W. Churchill, widely known Westchester lawyer. Lee was charged with administering a deadly poison to two guests who came to live with the aged Mrs. Churchill following the death of her husband. An investigation also was begun into the death of Mr. Churchill last June in St. Petersburg, Fla. The poison victims, now in a hospital at White Plains, N. Y., are Mrs. Louise Reeves, a niece of Mrs. Churchill, and her husband, George. According to authorities, the Chinese admitted that he had purchased large quantities of poison during the last year. He said he had bought it to poison squirrels.

Clinton B. Clevenger, uncle and executor of the estate of the slain Helen Clevenger, New York university co-ed, filed suit Thursday in Asheville, N. C., for $50,000 damages against the Battery Park hotel in that city, where the 18 year old girl was killed on July 16. Martin Moore, colored, was convicted of the crime and sentenced to death. He is in the state penitentiary awaiting a review of the case by the state Supreme court. In the damage suit against the hotel, Clevenger charged the defendants were negligent in the management of the hotel.

Federal Judge Elwood Hamilton at Louisville, Ky., refused a motion for a new trial for Thomas H. Robinson Jr., now serving a life sentence for the $50,000 ransom kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, Louisville society matron. Attorneys for Robinson argued that he was insane when he pleaded guilty.

Applications for clemency by 42 convicted murderers now serving sentences in various Illinois prisons were reviewed by the state board of pardons and paroles. Eleven of the convicts whose cases were considered were sent to prison from Cook county. These included Harold J. Croarkin, convicted of the moronic killing of a boy in 1926, and Samuel Dorr, convicted in 1931 of the murder of William J. O'Brien, husband of Dorr's sweetheart. A representative of the Cook county state's attorney's office opposed the release of Croarkin and objected to clemency in other cases. Also present to oppose leniency in several cases was a representative of the Chicago crime commission. The board took all of the cases under advisement.

Mrs. F. B. Enslow, wealthy widow, was found beaten to death yesterday in her home in Huntington, W. Va., apparently the victim of a robber. She was the second wife of Frank Enslow, one of the builders of Huntington. [See main news section.]

The recent exoneration by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York of District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan of Brooklyn, charged by a special grand jury with laxity in prosecuting the Drukman murder case, was strongly criticised in New York by the Society for the Prevention of Crime, a civic corporation.

Science

The Folsom Man.

Several years ago the first evidence of a prehistoric American civilization was found near Folsom, N. M. Later, Maj. Roy Coffin unearthed near Fort Collins, Colo., a "tool shop" used by the "Folsom man." It contained flint weapons fashioned with great skill. Recently, a field party of university of Nebraska archæologists, headed by Dr. E. H. Barbour, excavated evidence of a nomadic race of men that roamed the Nebraska badlands 15,000 to 30,000 years ago. Five "cultural horizons" were identified in the layers of deposits found.

The bones of one of the largest mastodons [prehistoric elephant] ever found in the United States were unearthed in a field near Rochester, Ind., by Dr. Barton Brown, curator of fossils at the New York museum, and his assistants. The Mastodon's ribs were 4 feet long, and its vertebræ were more than 2 feet in diameter. Dr. Brown estimated that the animal lived 10,000 years ago.

Radium Milking.

Dr. Frank E. Simpson, adjunct clinical professor of dermatology, Northwestern university, and his assistant, Dr. J. E. Breed, demonstrated before delegates to the international medical assembly how radium was "milked" to obtain radon, a gas which is useful in treating cancer. The radon, given off by the metallic radium, was dissolved in water. The solution was then sealed in tiny glass tubes. Radon, they said, is as powerful as radium, although its power of emanation disappears in 30 days. Radium loses only one-half its weight in 1,800 years.

Pine Tree Fats.

Dr. Charles H. Herty, director of the pulp and paper laboratory of Savannah, Ga., announced discovery of pine tree fats which are the same as animal fats. His cheap method of extraction promises two new industries, he stated. Ridding the wood pulp of fats makes it suitable for manufacture of finest grade bond paper, hitherto impossible. The tree fat is useful for soap manufacture and for mining flotation processes. With it are several fatty acids and waxes. One of the acids, oleic, is a potent body ingredient sought by physicians. Another is linoleic, used for paints. Cholesterol, one of the waxes, can be converted into vitamin D. Dr. Herty announced his discovery after two years' research in which he sought a method to make book and bond paper, and clothing from the south's huge pine forests.

New Forecasting.

Accurate long-range weather forecasting was declared possible by Dr. Charles G. Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian institution, and Sir Gilbert Walker, British meteorologist, in their annual reports to the institute. Dr. Abbott worked out a weather cycle of 23 years based on periodic fluctuations in the radiation output of the sun. He believes in a close relationship between variations in solar radiations and earth temperatures. He recommended that 7 more solar observing stations be added to the system of 3 now operated by the Smithsonian institution. Sir Gilbert founded his opinion on a study of statistical correlations between seasonal weather changes and atmospheric conditions.

CUT ALL 3 SHORT.

Ernest Lindemann, 76, asserts he is the oldest active barber in New York and as such competent to give fellow barbers advice. He believes in cutting conversation short—along with the hair and beard. He said: "If you want to hold your customers, keep quiet. The customer doesn't come in to get a college education—he comes in to rest and think." Lindemann has been a barber for 61 years.

Labor

The first formal bid by the American Federation of Labor to make peace with the ten rebel unions headed by John L. Lewis in the Committee for Industrial Organization—CIO—was made last week. The executive council of the federation offered to name a committee to talk peace terms with the Lewis group, now under suspension from the federation.

The break in union ranks occurred when the Lewis controled unions refused to give up their drive to bring all workers in each mass production industry into one union. The drive was opposed by the federation, which upholds the craft union principle of labor organization. Labor leaders expressed only faint hope that the peace move would be successful.

More than 50,000 persons, most of them Illinois coal miners, assembled at Mount Olive, Ill., last Sunday for the dedication of a monument in memory of "Mother" Mary Jones, militant leader of the miners for sixty years. She died in 1930. She was considered a heroine, having taken part in scores of mine union battles.

Violence marked a strike in Brooklyn, N. Y., of garage workers. Two thousand garage employés walked out Wednesday. They demanded wage adjustment and shorter working hours. The violence developed when 300 so-called "flying squadrons" of union men visited garages and pulled out workers. Fist fights were general.

The prospect of a Pacific coast maritime strike of seven unions with a membership of 37,000 workers developed Thursday. At San Francisco executives of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific voted unanimously to adopt a resolution calling for a strike referendum of marine unions, giving a joint negotiations committee power to call a coast-wide walkout after Oct. 28. The present contract between the unions and shipping firms ends on that date. Negotiations for a new contract have made little progress.

Police at Salinas, Cal., again routed with tear gas disorderly pickets barricaded in a shed. The strikers, who quit work in the lettuce fields many weeks ago demanding more pay, had been hurling rocks at passing lettuce trucks. When police arrived they barricaded themselves in the shed. Following the tear gas attack, the strikers attempted to parade through the streets of Salinas, but the parade was broken up by police.

"Naughty" Bette.

GLORY IN HOCK.

Mike Donaldson's courage in the world war won him the congressional medal of honor and other decorations. Gen. Pershing called him the "outstanding hero of the war." Donaldson told friends in New York that he no longer has the medals. They are held by the fashionable Mayflower hotel in Washington, D. C., against a $1,000 hotel bill and Donaldson is broke.

CIRCUS BIRD: THE STORK.

Sam W. Gumpertz, circus magnate, revealed at Houston, Tex., that the last summer has been the best circus season of any since 1929. "As long as the birth rate remains normal and there are plenty of kids the circus will be all right," said Mr. Gumpertz.

Flying

Two army air corps pilots shattered the Mitchell trophy race record of 216.8 miles an hour yesterday in the annual race at Selfridge field, Mt. Clemens, Mich. The winner was First Lieut. John M. Sterling of New York, whose average speed was 217.546 miles an hour, in spite of low visibility and a 35 mile an hour adverse wind.

Finishing in second place was Lieut. Harold L. Neely of Huntington, Tenn., whose speed was 217.039 miles an hour. The ten planes in the race were small, all-metal, low wing monoplanes, powered by 700 horsepower Curtiss motors. These fighting ships, the latest design for military aircraft have a stop speed at sea level of approximately 260 miles an hour. [See main news section.]

The Mitchell trophy race is the only speed contest in which military flyers are allowed to fly military planes. Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, who has since died, started the race in 1922 when he presented the trophy in memory of his brother, John,

A daring British woman flyer, Jean Batten, 26, of New Zealand, landed her plane at Auckland, N. Z., Friday to complete the first solo flight by a woman from England. Against the warning of air officials and veteran flyers, Miss Batten took off Thursday from Sydney, Australia, on the last leg of her journey, a 1,100 mile hop over the perilous Tasman sea.

Before leaving Sydney Miss Batten said: "If I go down in the sea no one must fly out to look for me. I have chosen to make this flight and I am confident I can make it, but I don't wish to imperil the lives of others and cause trouble and expense to the country."

A week ago Miss Batten broke the solo flight record from England to Australia, where she was held up for several days by bad weather conditions.

Mrs. Peter Holland, a grandmother, is credited with being Chicago's oldest woman flying enthusiast. She celebrated her 77th birthday Wednesday in Chicago by taking her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Young, and five grandchildren on a chartered United Air Lines plane for a cruise over the city. In 1933 Mrs. Young flew to Germany aboard the Graf Zeppelin without telling members of her family of her plans.

Another attempt by Kurt Bjorkvall of Sweden to fly from New York to Stockholm was made possible last week. Eric Akerlund, Swedish newspaper owner, on Monday offered a new plane to the flyer, who recently failed in the first attempted flight from America to Sweden. Bjorkvall landed in the sea off the Irish coast and was rescued by a French trawler. His plane was lost.

Newspaper men aboard the China Clipper, huge flying boat of Pan-American Airways, reached Manila yesterday on a "preview" flight preparatory to the inauguration of regular passenger service between California and the Philippine Islands. A second "preview" flight began Wednesday by the Philippine Clipper, a sister ship. Among the guest passengers was Senator William G. McAdoo of California. The China Clipper was delayed at Guam by the typhoon which struck the Philippine archipelago. [See Typhoon.]

Foreign Notes

The Arab high committee, which called the general strike accompanying the Arabian revolt against the Jews in Palestine, ordered a halt, and last Monday Arabians opened their markets for the first time in 175 days. The Arabian leaders did not declare their viewpoint in halting disorders which have taken more than 400 Arabian, Jewish and British lives since April 19. Lieut. Gen. J. G. Dill, new commander of the British troops in Palestine, said at Jerusalem that the Arabian order to end the strike was "almost entirely due to the resolute and energetic action" of the British army, navy and air forces which "enabled many severe blows to be inflicted upon the rebels." It appeared that the Arabs believed it useless to sacrifice their own economic strength further while British army reinforcements poured in to establish martial law. They have attained none of the objectives of the strike—suspension of Jewish immigration, ban on sale of Arab land to Jews and an Arab national government. Jewish press reports said that Arabs have bargained for Italian support of their nationalist aspirations. Fawzi Bey Kawkazi of Syria, self-appointed rebel commander, told Arabians to end terroristic activities for the present, but to be prepared to resume fighting. Meanwhile, some sniping and sabotage continued.

Great Britain gave Japan two causes for irritation. A Tokio newspaper reported that the British government has urged the signers of the nine power treaty guaranteeing China's territorial integrity to join Britain in a protest against Japan's demands on China. Dr. H. H. Kung, Chinese finance minister, at Shanghai confirmed a $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 export loan from Britain to China. A Japanese military spokesman said that "no nation friendly with Japan" would negotiate a loan during the attempted settlement of recent anti-Japanese attacks in China.

Border trouble with soviet Russia was renewed when four Japanese soldiers were slain and five wounded in a clash with Russian frontier patrols last Monday. Friction on the Siberia-Manchukuo frontier had lessened in the last six months after repeated protests and counter protests. This was the procedure last week. Russia protested Japan's protest and charged that in two incidents Japanese soldiers invaded soviet territory and were driven out.

In Tokio Lieut. Gen. Juichi Terauchi and Admiral Osomi Nagano, respectively Japanese ministers of war and navy, put more pressure on Premier Koki Hirota in demands for a new governmental general staf to formulate national policies.

This would give militarists more influence in civil affairs. Hirota said that there were more urgent matters.

Despite Premier Leon Blum's efforts to have them cancel their meetings, French communists last Sunday rallied in seven cities of Alsace-Lorraine. In Strasbourg on the German border police drove off rightists looking for a fight such as the one two weeks ago in Paris. As a result Maurice Thorez, secretary general of French communists, spoke to 20,000 and brought Germany's protests that he had insulted Realmleader Hitler. Chief among the charges against Thorez made to the Paris foreign office were that the speakers' platform had displayed a cartoon of Hitler with a bloody knife in his mouth, and that Thorez expressed preference for "an honorable Negro to a dishonorable Hitler." The German press screamed and joined the French conservative press in declaring that Russia, through Thorez and company, is trying to provoke conflict between France and Germany. [See Foreign.] Meanwhile Blum's mouthpiece newspaper charged that Col. Francois de la Rocque, Fascist leader, had cached at least 1,000 German and American rifles, machine guns, etc., for rebellion against the Socialist government.

Strikes continued to plague Blum's government. Paris bargemen, armament workers, and chocolate makers, Chartres sugar beet workers and sailors in several ports were on strike. The sailors and chocolate workers accepted settlements.

While Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria tightened his dictatorial control of military power assumed a week ago, observers saw the action as marking a transition from Italian to German influence in Austria. Suppression of the heimwehr [home guard], private army of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, was seen as ending the Fascist prince's power. Von Starhemberg was apparently financed by Premier Mussolini until the Ethiopian war. Some observers believe Austria's reconciliation treaty with Germany last July will begin the shift of alliance and that the fall of Von Starhemberg will conclude it.

Communists and Fascists clashed for the second successive Sunday in London's east end. Sir Oswald Mosley's Black Shirts were involved in a mob attack on the Jewish quarter and on communist demonstrators. Many were injured and much property destroyed. Despite increased police patrols, Jews are now afraid to be out at night because of assaults by Fascists. Sir Oswald returned from a conference with Nazi officials in Berlin and defied the communist party to break up his organization by demands for prohibitory legislation.

Typhoon.

A typhoon, the worst in the history of the Philippines, brought death and destruction to the northern provinces of Luzon Island. Late in the week the casualty list revealed 546 persons were dead and 1,045 more were missing.

For a time relief workers feared the outbreak of pestilence in Cabanatuan, provincial capital 100 miles north of Manila, which was struck by the full force of the storm. More than 300 persons in this city of 15,000 lost their lives.

Red Cross workers and other relief agencies found streets littered with wreckage in which were found many bodies. Survivors were hungry and wretched. Few homes in the storm stricken area remained standing. The devastation caused by the roaring winds was increased by flood waters from several rivers.

Medicine

Nerves.

Calcium lactobionate-calcium bromide is a new drug believed by its discoverer, Dr. H. S. Isbell, sugar chemist of the bureau of standards, to be more effective than the ones now used in treatment of epilepsy, excessive thyroid activity, neurasthenia, and other nervous diseases. Its sedative powers afford complete rest for cases of excessive nervousness. Clinical tests made in Switzerland and Germany were reported highly effective.

Rejuvenation.

Treatment of prostate gland trouble whereby the potency of man was restored and surgery eliminated was described by Dr. L. F. Hawkinson, Brainerd, Minn. He exhibited the male sex harmone in synthetic crystalline form, which he extracted from hog and cattle gall stones. Injection of this substance as a solution in most benign cases reduced the size of the gland. One 76 year old man, impotent for 6 years, had his potency restored by the injections. Dr. Hawkinson's preliminary experiments on caponized roosters with the synthetic sex harmone, restored normal rooster characteristics, including a large comb and loud crowing.

Blue Leprosy.

Injection of a 1 per cent solution of methylene blue into the veins of lepers was reported as a new treatment by Dr. L. R. Monte to the Colonial Academy of Sciences in Paris, France. The dye, which incidentally colors the patient bright blue, is a mild antiseptic. Because of a special affinity for leprous skin, it collects there from the blood stream and retards the spread of the slow growing leprosy germs.

Blood Pressure.

Physicians of the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn., declared that high blood pressure was "to a large extent inherited." Doctors Alfred W. Adson and E. V. Allen explained their method of curing this affliction by cutting "sympathetic" nerves connecting the upper and lower parts of the body. Surgery, declared Dr. Adson, can cure the majority of high blood pressure cases if the patient is not more than 40 years old.

Water Boy.

When a 17 year old youth drank sixty quarts of water every 24 hours an all-time record was established, Dr. Elliott C. Cutler of the Harvard university medical school told the international medical assembly recently in St. Paul Minn. The boy was a victim of diabetes insipidus, which is caused by lesions at the base of the brain behind the eyes. A lack of sugar instead of an excess of sugar in the body characterizes this disease from ordinary diabetes. No cure is known.

Maids Barred.

Bartenders, gathered in New York for a convention of the International Barmen's association, took a firm stand against permitting women in bar rooms, either as customers or as barmaids. At a dinner Wednesday night several of the speakers, including Louis W. Wulff, president of the association, waxed indignant over the subject of women in bars.

Religion

For the first time in the history of the Episcopal church, practically the entire episcopate—bishops and archbishops, the latter representing Canada and other British possessions in the western hemisphere assembled for a conference last week in Evanston. Also in session was the house of bishops of the American Episcopal church. Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Chicago diocese was host to the conference, held in the Evanston pro-Cathedral.

On Thursday night more than 1,200 clergy and laity of the church attended a dinner in the Sherman hotel. The occasion was a formal welcome to the visiting prelates. Last night the conference closed with a mass meeting in the Auditorium theater. [See main news section.]

The Rt. Rev. James De Wolf Perry, presiding bishop of the American Episcopal church, was unable to attend, being detained at his home in Providence, R. I., by illness.

Several clergymen were elected bishops by the house of bishops. Among them was the venerable Winfred H. Ziegler, rural archdeacon of the Chicago diocese. He was elected missionary bishop of Wyoming.

Opening the biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church in America at Columbus, O., Wednesday, F. H. Knubel of New York, president, attacked what he termed "this mania which causes men to get things and to do things the easiest way."

He said that widespread unemployment had added to the false popularity of greater leisure for every one.

"Even the educational world has been led astray," he said, "and is falsely delighting itself over the seeming success in making education easy for the child."

Dr. Knubel asserted that the church must preach emphatically "that vigor belongs to spirituality, to changed lives and that indolence belongs to sin."

Meeting in Kansas City, Mo., Tuesday, delegates to the convention of the Disciples of Christ church were told by Prof. E. C. Cameron, sociologist from Butler university, that an "appalling" decline in the number of country churches is threatening the existence of the entire denomination. The Disciples of Christ, he said, once had 11,907 congregations.

H. G. WELLS AT 70.

Speaking at a literary banquet given in his honor in London, H. G. Wells, author and playwright, said that he hates being 70. "I don't in the least want to put away my toys," he said. Wells recently wrote his own obituary, forecasting his death at the age of 97. He was 70 on Sept. 21. At that time he laughingly told reporters that the "rumor" of his birthday was "untrue."

Precious as diamonds . . . and equally valuable as an investment. Because of Persian government control and a rise in commodity prices, these extra large Persian rugs are advancing rapidly to the price levels of a few years ago. They are the larger rugs most homes today require, averaging twice the size of a 9x12. Rug gems of an ancient world. Colorful Kashans with a rich heritage of beauty. Sumptuous Sarouks that justly merit their title of "Iron Rugs of Persia." People look to Mandel's for the BEST in Oriental rug values. They're here . . . at irresistible savings. Only 10% down . . . up to 2 years to pay.

Announcement Extraordinary!

TRADE IN YOUR PRESENT ORIENTAL RUG FOR A NEW ORIENTAL RUG THAT FITS YOUR FLOOR

For the first time Mandel's offers you this unique (and very helpful) "trade-in" service on quality Oriental rugs. Because many homes have under-sized Orientals, and because we believe thousands of homes need larger-size Orientals, we make this offer. Oriental rugs purchased within the past few years, and still in good condition, will be carefully valued by our appraiser and credit allowed on the purchase of new Orientals. Allowance will be as liberal as possible.

This "trade-in" offer is for this week only, and may be applied against the purchase of Oriental rugs, size 9x12 or larger.

N. U. PASSES DEFEAT OHIO STATE, 14 TO 13

NOTRE DAME WINS, 27-0; PURDUE BEATS MAROONS, 35-7

IRISH SPURT AGAINST TIRING BADGER ELEVEN

Score Three Times in Second Half.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 17.—Notre Dame, with no excessive show of pride or prejudice, today accorded Wisconsin's Badgers the same dose of poison administered at Madison last year. The count then and today was Notre Dame, 27; Wisconsin, 0.

Notre Dame did not immediately maltreat the Badgers in whom they are said to hold fraternal interest. The score at the end of the half was only 6 to 0, the ratio being due to a touchdown in the first quarter by Bob Wilke. Wilke deserved the honor of making this first and victory touchdown for he had contributed 18 and 20 yard runs and had passed to Andy Puplis for a 15 yard gain before he himself galloped 16 yards to the goal line.

Third Quarter Busy.

The third quarter was the heavy trafic session. Vic Wojcihovski and Larry Danbom made touchdowns and what perhaps was the most startling play of the game, a pass, Jake Kovalcik to Len Skoglund, which traveled 54 yards in the air and paved the way for the final touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter also was accomplished in this period. Chuck Borowski scored the last one on a three yard plunge.

Notre Dame used every player who had dressed for the contest, six different teams and a few spares being employed to wear down the stubborn Badgers who had fetched along only 36 players.

The first down statistics are far from being consistent with the score. Notre Dame made 14 first downs, only one more than Wisconsin's total. On rushing the ratio was 8 to 7. Each team made four first downs from forward passes.

Only 25,000 Turn Out.

Notre Dame had a great advantage in total yards from scrimmage, but Wisconsin made a lot of yards. The ratio here was 363 yards by Notre Dame to 222 for Wisconsin. Notre Dame made 194 yards from rushing and 124 from passing, while the Badgers made 116 yards from rushing and 60 from forward passing.

The contest was witnessed by 25,000. Sudden cold and threats of rain were blamed for a ten thousand fall off in the anticipated turnout.

In the very first moments of the game the Badgers revealed they certainly were hopped up for the fray, but their zeal must have been painful to their constituents, for this early demonstration took the form of five offside penalties, three of them in a row the first three times Notre Dame scrimmaged and the other two coming before Notre Dame lost the ball.

Plenty of Action.

The distress that would have followed this unusual display of eagerness had the Irish scored, was eased immeasurably two plays after the fifth offside in the series, for Danbom's effort to accomplish a place kick from the 34 yard line was wide and it was Wisconsin's ball on its 20 yard line.

For a spell the Badgers took charge, with Weiss reeling off 21

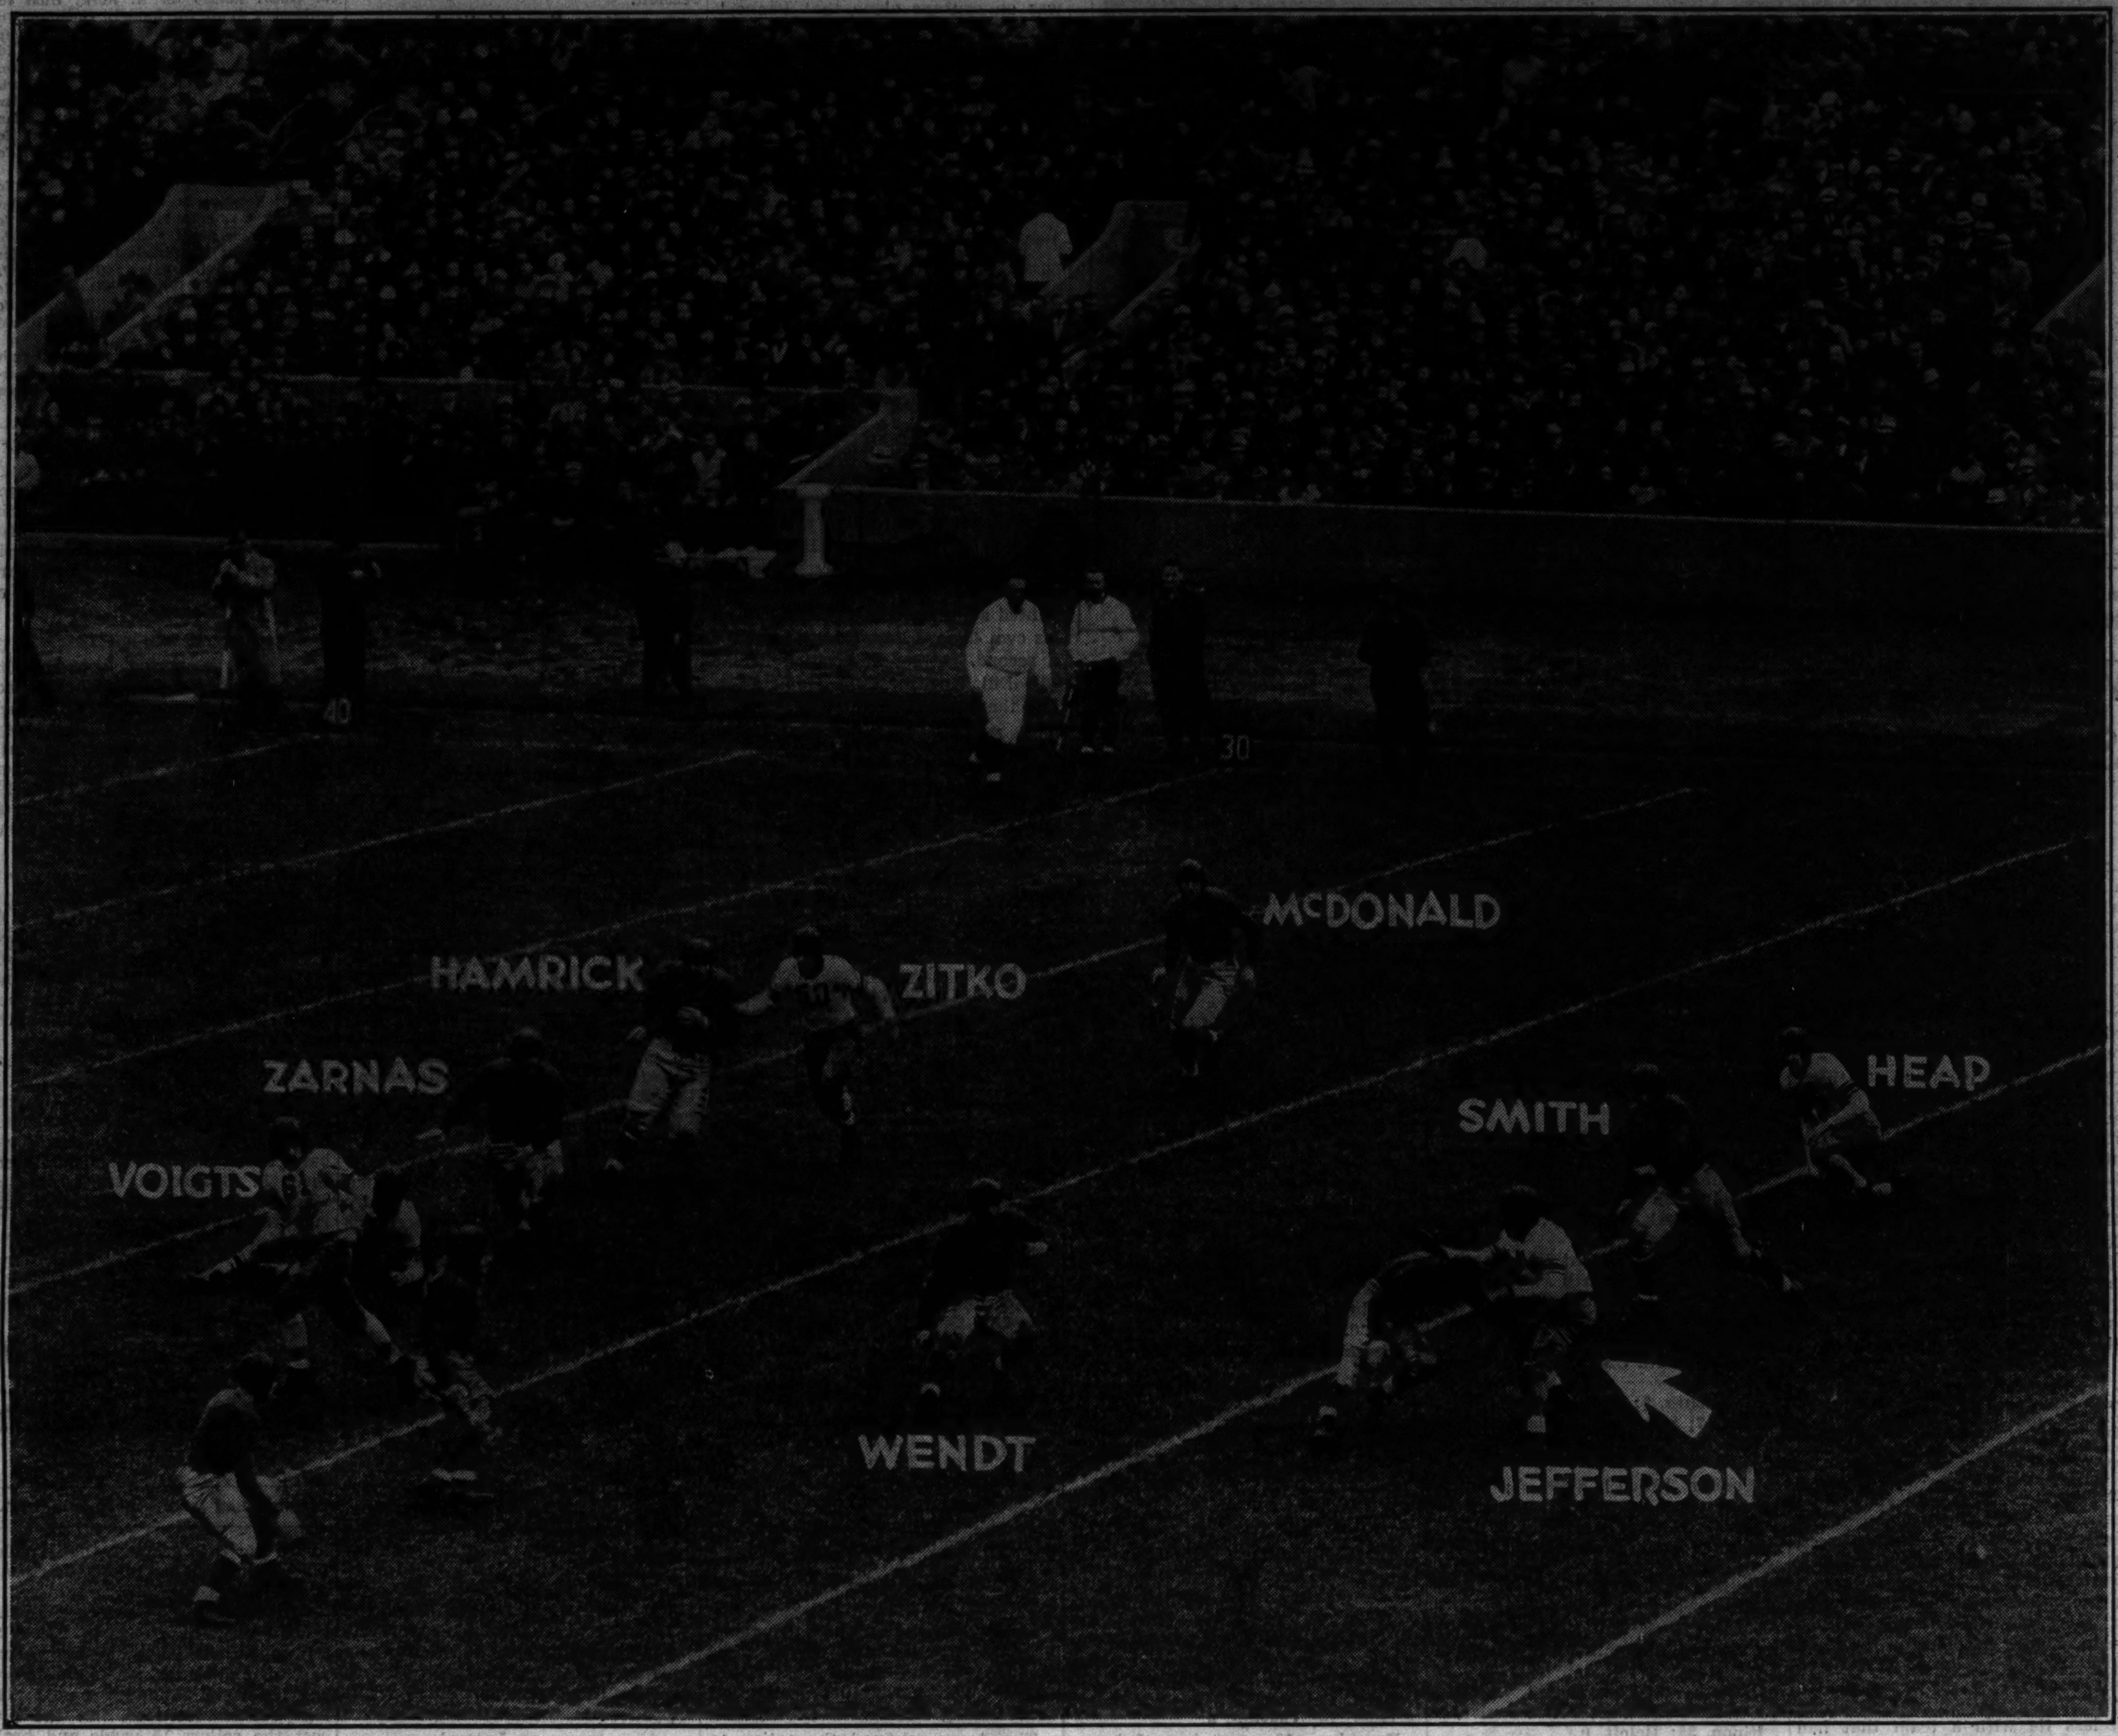
WATCH THAT FELLOW, BUCKEYES! HE'LL BEAT YOU YET!



Jefferson of Northwestern returning the kickoff at the start of the second half of yesterday's game with Ohio State at Dyche stadium. The Wildcat half back didn't get very far on this sprint but he was just saving up trouble for the Buckeyes. For it was Jefferson who threw the pass to Heap for Northwestern's fourth quarter touchdown that brought about the downfall of Ohio State. A crowd of 38,000 watched the Wildcats boost their chances for the Big Ten title with their 14 to 13 victory.

WILDCATS COME FROM BEHIND IN FOURTH PERIOD

Jefferson Tosses to Heap for Victory.

Northwestern's Wildcats, retaining the ferocity which swamped Iowa two weeks ago, defeated Ohio State, 14 to 13, at Dyche stadium yesterday before 38,000 spectators.

The two teams battled on almost an equality through sixty minutes of thrilling wide open football, the kind that delights a crowd, but Don Geyer's unerring right foot kicked two points after touchdown while Capt. Merle Wendt of Ohio State sent the ball slightly wide of the uprights on one of his two attempts.

That one point, looming larger as the game neared its close, kept the Wildcats in the running for the Western conference championship. Ohio State, losing what seemed to its partisans a hard luck encounter, suffered its first Big Ten defeat since 1934 when Illinois, also in an early game, gave the Buckeyes their only defeat of that season by a similar score.

Purple Rallies Twice.

In its victory the Purple twice came from behind. Slightly outplayed at the start or appearing so because of penalties for offside play by overzealous forwards, it rallied to hold at least even an Ohio State line that was entirely different in action, though not in personnel, from that which opposed Pittsburgh a week ago.

Statistics verify the impression of near equality. Northwestern had nine first downs and Ohio state eleven. While Northwestern led in yardage gained from scrimmage, Ohio State excelled in passing. Yet its total yardage from passes was only 14 yards more than Northwestern's, so keen and alert was the Purple defense. The total yardage gained was 279 yards for the Purple and 212 for Ohio State.

Passes, Fumbles Bring Scores.

With both lines charging each other to a standstill and with Fuller and Vanzo backing up the line for Northwestern, and Wolf and McDonald for Ohio to prevent consistent gains by rushing, passes and fumbles figured in the four touchdowns. Both teams always appeared dangerous to the frenzied fans with the fleet Jumping Joe Williams and Tippy Dye, Scarlet speedsters, always ready to go, and Ollie Adelman, Clarence Hinton, and Don Heap, carrying the Purple threat.

Into the very final minutes went the uncertainty with its attendant excitement. With two minutes to go, Northwestern found itself backed up to its 8 yard line. Penalized 5 yards for too many times out, Steve Toth was forced to kick from his own end zone. Here occurred one of the outstanding plays of the game, a play that did not result in a score but perhaps prevented one.

Toth Kicks 70 Yards.

Out in the open field was Joe Williams, Ohio State's safety man, set for a catch and possible return for a touchdown in a Dick Merriwell finish. Ohio's crack ends were sent to hurry the kicker, to make Williams' task less severe. In this situation Toth, instead of flinching, got away the most notable kick of the day. It sailed from his end zone far over Williams' head and went out of bounds on Ohio State's 27 yard mark. Clipping by Ohio moved the ball back to the 25 yard line.

Three passes failed, and the game was over for Ohio State. The final whistle sounded a few plays later with the ball in Northwestern's possession on Ohio's 20 yard line. In this reversal of threat, Adelman had made a 51 yard run along the side lines.

Buckeyes Take Lead.

Between halves dads of the Northwestern players among 2,000 other dads present were introduced to a crowd exulting over the Purple's 7 to 6 lead.

Ohio State won the toss and chose the north goal. It was clear, crisp weather with a strong westerly wind blowing across the field. The grid-

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 17.—The mighty men of Minnesota went on the march again today. In their path was an old enemy, Michigan, but the Gophers swept the obstacle out of their path and charged on to their 20th straight football triumph. When the marching had been completed before 48,600 spectators, the score was 26 to 0, not only according the victors but marking the 27th consecutive battle from which they have emerged undefeated. They have been tied four times during this remarkable run, all of the deadlocks turning up at the hands of Big Ten rivals during the 1933 campaign.

The Gophers had class in all its various forms. They were bruisers as well as runners with speed. They had deception which awed the Wolverines, especially in the art of lateral passing. They ripped the Michigan line to ribbons even though their second and third string performers were in action much of the time. And defensively they were so talented that they never experienced even one scare during the 60 minutes of actual play.

Wolverines Reach Midfield Once.

The Wolverines, possessors of three defeats in a row this season, were so completely under the mastery of their foes that their offense never carried them beyond the fifty yard mark. They reached that region only once and that happened because a Minnesota penalty put them squarely in midfield in possession of the ball in the fourth quarter. But they were halted there because the same relentless Gopher defense against passes was as effective as it had been when-

Illinois and Iowa Fight to Scoreless Tie

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 17.—The razzle-dazzle passes of Illinois and the supposed threat of Ozzie Simmons' sweeping runs added up to a scoreless deadlock this afternoon in Iowa's stadium while 39,000 homecoming spectators looked on, vainly hoping some one would break up the monotony of the battle between impotent linemen. Ineffectual blocking kept Iowa in check at all times and the same failure turned back the Illini when they seemed destined to score in the third period.

As one result of the parity of insufficient line play, there were 26 punts, a near record number for a game contested under excellent weather conditions.

Illini Hold Edge.

If victory could be awarded on basis of ground gained, passes completed, and the most scoring threats, Illinois should be given the palm. Except for one occasion early in the second period, the Hawkeyes never were in position to disturb the Illinois defenders. On the other hand, the Illini were turned back three times in the first half and began the second half with an assault which failed by a matter of inches of winning the game.

Statistics show that Illinois had a net gain of 209 yards to Iowa's 127; that Illinois completed 10 of its 20 forward passes, while Iowa completed two in five attempts; that Illinois accomplished 10 first downs to five, and that Illinois' average distance on punts was 43 yards to 32 yards for Iowa. These same facts also show that Illinois recovered all three of Iowa's fumbles and was also alert enough to grab one of its own two misplays.

Superseding all these figures and

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

For fifteen minutes yesterday afternoon a battered but courageous University of Chicago eleven restrained a powerful Purdue team in a virtual state of paralysis insofar as any offensive doings were concerned. Those 15 minutes constituted the first quarter.

Then the Purdue attack, with Cecil Isbell, Houston, Tex., full back, at its head, struck with a ruthless suddenness that stunned the gathering of 16,000 present at Stagg field to witness the concluding game of a 42 year old rivalry between the two schools. The second quarter saw Cecil pass to his brother Cody for one touchdown, and three minutes later found him dashing over the Maroon goal line after successive smashes of 13 and 14 yards.

Isbell Kicks for 4 Points.

Isbell, who will face his biggest test next Saturday, when Purdue invades Minnesota, was also responsible for two third-quarter scores, tossing laterals, first to John Drake, and then Fred Stalcup, just as he was about to be tackled, each effort resulting in a touchdown. The Texan furthered his reputation as one of the best backs in the country by connecting for four extra placement points.

The fifth Boilermaker score was registered by Tony Ippolito, Chicago sophomore, late in the final quarter. Preceding this, the Maroons had scored their only touchdown of the day on a pass from Lew Hamity to Morton Goodstein.

The game was a costly one to Purdue, which lost the services of Jim Vergane, 6 foot 5 inch 230 pound end from Michigan City, who received an injury to his right knee in the third quarter and had to be helped from the field. Coach Noble Kizer last night said that the injury probably will keep Vergane out of the Boiler-

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Badly whipped in the first half, Nebraska's Cornhuskers came back to score two touchodwns in the last two periods and gain a 13 to 9 victory over Indiana today in the first game ever played between the two schools. A crowd of 31,000 saw the battle.

The Hoosiers had dominated the play in every department during the first two quarters, but Sam Francis, Nebraska's Olympic shot putter, had watched the proceedings from the bench. He entered the game after the intermission. Few contests have changed complexion so quickly.

Huffman Leads Hoosiers.

Led by Vernon Huffman, quarter back, the Hoosier's compiled a touchdown and a field goal. The game was only nine minutes old when George Miller stepped back to the 15 yard line and, with Huffman holding the ball, kicked a field goal. Huffman had scooped up a low pass from center on the play and recovered quickly enough to set the ball for Miller's kick.

The Hoosiers battered the left side of the Husker line throughout the first half and had things so much their own way that they had been forced to punt only once.

Score After 80 Yard Drive.

Indiana's touchdown in the second quarter came as a climax to an eighty yard drive, a penalty having set the Hoosiers back to their 20 yard line. Huffman shot a pass to R. L. Kenderdine, good for twenty-one yards. Huffman picked up five yards on two line plunges and then passed to Nelson Beasley for twelve yards and a first down on the Husker 36 yard line. After two more line plays had been smothered Huffman flipped a pass to Nelson Beasley, who took the ball on

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 17.—(AP)—An unorthodox, but highly opportune "drop kick" of a fumbled ball by Capt. Larry Kelley, Yale right end, paved the way for the Elis to come from behind today and snatch triumph from the Navy, 12 to 7.

An astonished crowd of 43,000 in Baltimore's municipal stadium saw Kelley capitalize the biggest break of the game midway in the third quarter, soon after Navy had driven deep into Yale territory in an attempt to fortify its one point margin, gained through the brilliant work of young Bill Ingram.

Schmidt Fumbles Punt.

Sneed Schmidt, a heroic figure in Navy's losing battle with Army last year, was the goat as he fumbled a long punt by Yale's Tony Mott. Schmidt dropped the ball around his own 25 yard line just as Kelley came within tackling range. The Yale leader, whether by accident or design, booted the loose ball forcefully in the direction of the Navy goal.

Kelley scooped it up on the three yard mark, where it was declared downed in Eli possession. On the second crack at the line, Yale's star running back, Clint Frank, crossed the goal line for the second time during the game.

This sudden turn of events was the climax of a series of Navy misfortunes. Yale was lucky to win, taking the game as a whole, but the sailors lost it as a direct consequence of their own mistakes. The Midshipmen had five scoring chances to Yale's two.

Schmidt Figures in Second Misplay.

Schmidt, taken out of the game after the play that led to Yale's winning touchdown, returned in time to

GAMES TODAY.
Pittsburgh at Bears.
Cardinals at New York.
Detroit at Green Bay.
Philadelphia at Boston.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

First place in the National Professional league race will be at stake today as the Bears, with five freshmen in their starting lineup, meet the Pittsburgh Pirates, eastern division leaders, at Wrigley field, and Detroit, defending champion, receives its first real test at Green Bay.

Detroit and the Bears are undefeated while Pittsburgh and Green Bay have each lost one game, both bowing to the Bears. These four teams have not played a like number of games, due to schedule peculiarities, thus making it possible on a percentage basis for the outcome of today's contests to elevate the Pirates to the top of the heap; send the Packers into a tie with the Bears; leave the Bears and Lions in a tie, or send the Lions out ahead alone.

Tie Is Possibility.

The most likely result, however, is a tie between the Lions and Bears or the Bears remaining in first place alone, with five consecutive victories. The only certainty is Pittsburgh's retention of the lead in the eastern division, where the Cardinals meet the Giants at New York and Philadelphia invades Boston. Regardless of the outcome of the day's play, the Pirates will be division leaders at nightfall.

Green Bay, with a week's rest after its 31 to 2 triumph over the disappointing Redskins from Boston, is at an advantage over the Lions, who after a late start, will be engaging in their third game in eight days on the road.

Passing Battle Likely.

The Bear-Pirate battle promises to be a contest between the best passing attack in the league, as executed by Ed Matesic, the southpaw, and associated Pirates, and a Bear defense which long since has proved that there are a number of things it can do much better than stop an air raid.

Matesic and John Gildea, who share the passing, completed 18 out of 39 passes against the Bears two weeks ago. Matesic has an average of 52 per cent completions and threw the passes on which the Pirates scored their two touchdowns against Philadelphia Wednesday night. Another pass was dropped by an end, all alone in the end zone.

Coach George Halas has devised and discarded a number of aerial defenses since the experience at Pittsburgh, finally deciding to employ the time honored fundamentals of rushing the passer and keeping receivers from getting behind backs.

Thompson Replaces Musso.

Russell Thompson, 6 feet 5 inch, 248 pound rookie tackle from Nebraska, has been assigned to replace the veteran George Musso, and Danny Fortmann of Colgate, and Ed Michaels from Villanova, will start at the guards, with Joe Stydahar in his regular left tackle position.

In the back field Jack Manders will take Bronko Nagurski's place, and Ray Nolting, rookie half back sensation from the University of Cincinnati, will start instead of Gene Ronzani at right half. With Beattie Feathers and Ernie Masterson completing the quartet, the back field will be the fastest Halas can assemble. In addition to its forward pass defense possibilities a lineup containing these speedsters is the best safeguard against the Pirates' laterals.

Louisiana State Passes Beat Mississippi, 13-0

Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 17.—[U. P.]—Louisiana State, pointing toward another Southeastern conference championship, romped over Mississippi tonight, 13 to 0, before 20,000 spectators. The defending title holders unleashed a highly efficient aerial attack to score in the second and final periods and threatened the Ole Miss goal line on several occasions.

Illinois Polo Team Beats Missouri, 7-6

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—University of Illinois R. O. T. C. polo team defeated the University of Missouri today, 7 to 6, in an extra chukker on a goal by Gene Bauer of Chicago, No. 4 man. Bauer made four goals and [illegible]ndsley led Missouri [illegible]h three goals.

THEY WANT TO STAY IN FIRST PLACE

When the undefeated Chicago Bears meet the Pittsburgh Pirates at Wrigley field this afternoon this back field pair of Reds Pollock, half back (left), and Bernie Masterson, quarter back (right), is expected to play an important part in keeping the Chicagoans at least in a tie for first place. Pollock, who has been out with injuries, will get into the battle today.

So. California, Washington State Tie, 0-0

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 17.—Southern California was strong enough to total 12 first downs to Washington State's 6, but it could not threaten the Cougars' goal today. Thus 25,000 sat through a drizzly scoreless tie in Los Angeles Olympic stadium.

Neither team got closer than the 25 yard line. The Trojans went that far three times.

The game was costly to Southern California for Davey Davis, flashy quarter back, was injured early in the first quarter and with Davis out the Southern California offensive seemed to bog down. Davis had one or more ribs cracked, and was taken to a hospital.

Ed Goddard, 180 pound Washington State quarter back, whose punting, pass throwing and ball carrying stood out, was mowed down after catching a punt and forced to leave the game in the last period. Southern California gained 270 yards to the visitors' 193, the figures being as follows:

Yards gained by rushing—Southern California, 215; Washington State, 100.
Yards lost from scrimmage—Southern California, 17; Washington State, 17.
Yards gained on passes—Southern California, 55; Washington State, 93.

The Trojans completed four of 14 passes, but had three intercepted. Washington State tried 14 passes, completed two and had 12 incomplete.

Washington was so pleased at its scoreless tie with a team that had been a 4 to 1 favorite that the entire squad ran on to the field when play ended and mobbed the eleven defensive stalwarts with congratulations.

U. C. L. A. WINS, 17-6

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 17.—[U. P.]—An underrated eleven from the University of California at Los Angeles broke a 17 year inter-school losing streak today and defeated the Golden Bears of the University of California, 17 to 6. A crowd of 35,000 saw the game.

The U. C. L. A. touchdown play was a pass tossed by Harold Hershon to Bob Schroeder, veteran right end. The combination clicked for the first time in the first quarter, and it topped off a 45 yard march.

After Billie Williams and Hershon had cracked off a first down, Hershon took the ball on what started like a reverse. He ran far behind his line of scrimmage and turned toward the California goal.

By this time Schroeder was running past the Golden Bear secondaries. Hershon threw and Schroeder caught on the five yard line and galloped over the goal line. Williams kicked the extra point.

In the third period Williams placekicked a field goal from the 25 yard line for 3 points to give U. C. L. A. 10 points. Right after that California scored.

Funk Fumbles Pass.

Back to punt on a third down Funk fumbled a bad pass from center and lost 12 yards. Again he fumbled and the Bears smothered him on the five yard line to take the ball. In three plays Dave Anderson scored. The try for point failed.

Early in the fourth quarter Hershon faked a reverse, faded back and threw. Once more Schroeder outran the California secondaries for 24 yards scoring on the play by catching the ball and running 5 yards for a touchdown. Williams placekicked the extra point. Lineup:

PENN DEFEATS PRINCETON, 7-0, ON 57 YARD RUN

Snap Winning Streak of Tiger Eleven.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 17.—(AP)—A 57 yard touchdown run by Lew Elverson in the first period was protected by one of the scrappiest outfits ever to represent Pennsylvania today as Penn knocked Princeton out of the unbeaten and untied class, 7 to 0. It was on courage alone that Pennsylvania handed the Tigers their first defeat in twelve games and their second shutout in thirty games.

The Quakers stopped five Princeton touchdown threats inside their own 10 yard line—once in each the second and third periods, and thrice in the fourth quarter.

Penn Busy at Start.

Pennsylvania showed it meant business right from the start. An eleven yard pass, Elverson to Schuenemann and a 15 yard penalty for roughness enabled Penn to travel 44 yards to Princeton's 15 yard line. But the Tigers held and forced Fran Murray to attempt a field goal, which was blocked by Center Steve Cullinan and fallen on by Princeton's captain and guard, Bill Montgomery.

Chick Kaufman punted out feebly on Princeton's yard line and a few plays passed when Full Back Dean Hill intercepted an Elverson pass on Princeton's 14 yard line. Kaufman punted and Elverson took the ball on his own 43 yard line. He hesitated for a second, getting in position behind big Bill Kurlish, Penn's full back, and then in a flash they were off.

Brilliant Blocking Helps.

For twenty yards they took a straight course, Kurlish bumping Tigers out of the way, and then they cut across the field. Nearing Princeton's 20, Montgomery was closing in fast. Kurlish, matching strides with his ball-carrying mate, took out the Princeton captain, and Elverson crossed the line standing up. He held the ball as Fran Murray kicked the extra point from placement. Lineup:

ARMY, 32; HARVARD, 0.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Paced by Monk Meyer, half back, Army's football warriors slid through to a 32 to 0 triumph over Harvard. The Cadets, showing a nicely calculated running attack that even bad weather conditions failed to hamper, had the edge over their Crimson rivals all through the battle, which, despite the decisive score, held many thrills for the onlookers.

Meyer did not play the entire game, but while he was on the field he managed to score two of his team's five touchdowns, besides getting off several long runs.

The Army confined the action to Harvard's territory for the greater part of the battle, and only once, midway in the final quarter, did the Crimson have possession of the ball inside their foes' 30 yard line. Lineups:

HOLY CROSS WINS, 13-7.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Pushing over two touchdowns in an early display of power and then withstanding the late onslaught of Manhattan, Holy Cross turned back the Jaspers, 13 to 7, today.

Jittery at the outset in their first appearance away from home in four years, the Jaspers yielded a touchdown in the first five minutes, Charlie Brucato making the score on a reverse from the 6 yard line after a Holy Cross match from midfield.

Then again in the second period, Manhattan's goal line was crossed, this time on a brilliant individual effort by Holy Cross' sophomore full back, Bill Osmanski, who raced 66 yards without having a hand laid upon him.

NORTH CAROLINA BEATS N. Y. U.

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Despite a thrilling last period rally by New York university the University of North Carolina managed to squeeze out a 14 to 13 victory over the Violet today in its first New York City invasion.

Unable to make sustained headway against the Tarheels until late in the third quarter, the Violet suddenly came to life and scored two touchdowns.

VILLANOVA WINS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Villanova remained in the undefeated ranks by gaining a 13 to 0 victory over Western Maryland here today before 5,000 spectators.

Harvey Buck's 16 yard flanker forward pass to Francis Nye late in the second period and Art Raimo's 31 yard run with less than twenty seconds left in the game, gave the Wildcats their touchdowns. Jordan Olivar missed the placement try after the first score but Bill Christopher kicked goal after Raimo got loose.

ever the Wolverines took to the air. The Michigan passers were always rushed and except in a few harmless instances the receivers never arrived at the designated spot.

The Gophers, who besides winning found out that there isn't much wrong with their apparently endless string of replacements, accepted their task without hurrying. They learned in the first few minutes that there was nothing to worry about. So they were content with one touchdown in the opening period. They tacked on another in the second quarter. In the third they were checked by a piece of Michigan alertness. But they compensated for this blank by carrying over two touchdowns in the final session.

Moore Runs 55 Yards.

Three of the touchdowns resulted from a hammering, deceptive attack that revealed the Gophers' superiority. The fourth crossing of the Michigan goal was slightly different, thus adding a giddy touch to a battle that until then had been lacking in the spectacular. But late in the fourth period the hair raiser so loved by a crowd made its appearance. Wilbur Moore took charge of a Michigan pass and with his line of march protected by mates who lined up like trafic cops at a parade, galloped 55 yards down the field.

The dazzling Andy Uram, although his appearances were limited, gave the weary Wolverines no end of trouble. Behind a line that paved the road and behind blockers who knew their tricks, Uram wriggled and ran his way for a total advance of 65 yards in eleven attempts. And right behind him as a Michigan tormentor was Bill Matheny, Uram's understudy, who pumped his speedy legs for 63 yards in ten tries.

Full Backs Murderous.

The Gopher full backs also were murderous against the Wolverine defense. Four of them were in the mêlée at one time or another. Vic Spadaccini, the No. 1 plunger, tore through for 43 yards in eleven thrusts. Whitman Rork was dynamite with 43 yards in six drives. Lawrence Buhler hung up 30 yards in eleven efforts. And a fellow named George Faust did a lot of damage from the same position.

Michigan's backs, struggling behind a line that couldn't keep the Gophers from seeping through, had practically no yardage to show for their struggle. C. Stark Ritchie topped them with 12 yards in five attempts but he didn't appear until the Gophers were satisfied they had done just about enough for one day. Bob Cooper made twelve attempts to go places and his net advance was only three yards. John Smithers and Cedric Sweet advanced three yards apiece on four and three tries, respectively.

Statistics Show Gopher Parade.

The statistics show the Gophers had even a larger edge than the score indicates. The victors advanced 358 yards from scrimmage and 41 on passes, against a grand total of 54½ for the Wolverines. The Gophers accomplished 20 first downs to four for Michigan. The Gophers threw 14 forward passes and completed six of them. Michigan attempted eight passes. Three were successful, but one of them gained only a yard and the other lost a yard. The Gophers intercepted one pass, and it was turned into Moore's 55 yard touchdown run.

The Gophers revealed their class as soon as the battle got under way. They took to passing immediately after the kick off. Mixing this with a running attack, they drove to Michigan's 16 yard line where a 15 yard penalty for holding lifted the Wolverines out of danger for the time being. To compensate for the penalty Uram sailed a long pass to Reed in the end zone, but the ball slipped from the receiver's hands.

Score on Lateral.

The march to the first touchdown started when Cooper punted to Uram, who came back to the Wolverines' 37 yard line. On the first play Alfonse waded through Michigan's right tackle for 9 yards. Spadaccini shattered Michigan's center for first down on the 20 yard line. A lateral pass, Alfonse to Spadaccini, added six yards. In two plays Spadaccini ripped through to the 8 yard mark for first down. Uram squirmed through the middle of the Michigan wall and, when apparently stopped, tossed a lateral to Alfonse who ran 5 yards over the goal line. There were no Wolverines even close. The extra point was lost when Wilkinson's placement missed the target.

Buhler Rips Wolverine Line.

After taking the next kickoff Michigan was again forced to punt and the Gophers scored without losing possession of the ball. Matheny ran back the punt from his own 45 yard line to Michigan's 22. Buhler, rushed in at full back, picked up seven yards in two charges as the period closed.

On the first play of the second quarter Buhler made a first down on the Wolverines' 11 yard line. Misfortune in the shape of a five yard penalty shoved the Wolverines back to the six yard stripe. The tricky Matheny then slipped through the line for two yards. Gmitro assaulted Michigan's right tackle and was brought down one yard from the goal. Buhler did the rest. He plunged to the one foot mark, then plunged again to carry it over for the second touchdown. Wilkinson registered successfully in his placement for the extra point.

Patanelli Intercepts Lateral.

Not long after the second touchdown the Gophers got under way again. In a march featured by plunges, laterals and a 27 yard sprint by Gmitro around Michigan's left, the Gophers advanced to Michigan's three yard line. Then the thrust toward the goal ended suddenly. A double Gopher lateral was snatched out of the air by Capt. Patanelli, giving Michigan the ball on its own 10 yard line. Before the period ended the Gophers made two more threats, the second failing when a long pass by Uram into the end zone was dropped by Warner.

Although the Gopher regulars came back into action in the third period a touchdown threat didn't develop until the quarter was almost over. This drive had its start in a Michigan pass intercepted by Uram on Minnesota's 37 yard line. Uram added to his burglary by nosing his way to an eight yard gain through Michigan's right tackle. Two plunges by W. Rork netted twenty-one yards. Matheny came back in Uram's place and went through center for six yards. He added five more and Rork plummeted to the 5 yard stripe as the quarter closed.

Matheny Scores on Lateral.

The fourth period opened with Buhler back in action in Rork's place and the newcomer ripped through for two yards on the first play. Buhler then tossed a lateral to Matheny who charged through an opening inside the Wolverines' left tackle for the third touchdown. Quarter Back Ring tried for the extra point, but didn't come close.

The last touchdown, the re[illegible]iller of them all, came wh[illegible] re wasn't much more time fo[illegible]n. In desperation Michigan was [illegible]rbing the atmosphere with passes, most of them wild. Michigan threw one too many. Ritchie sailed the ball down the field and Moore of the Gophers took it into his arms. He wormed his way past a few difficulties while interference was hastily forming. Then, when the Gopher assemly was complete, he scooted down the side lines, protected by a barrier that no Wolverine could break through. Spadaccini stuck right at Moore's side until the fifty-five yard run was completed.

Yale Defeats Navy, 12-7, on Fumbled Punt

After Ingram had covered 32 yards in two brilliant dashes to Yale's 17, midway in the fourth quarter, a bad pass from center by John Miller skidded from Schmidt's hands. The Navy back recovered, but the play cost the sailors 15 yards and broke up a drive that had the Elis back on their heels.

The Navy had a decided statistical margin in everything except luck. Navy led in first downs, 11 to 8, piled up 180 yards from scrimmage to Yale's 131, and showed a passing attack considerably superior to the Eli barrage.

CASE ROLLS OVER W. & J., 19 TO 0, IN MUDDY BATTLE

Cleveland, O., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Washington and Jefferson, previously undefeated this year, lost a muddy gridiron game to Case School of Applied Science today by a 19 to 0 score. Ray Mickovsky, Case full back, led a fierce rough rider attack. He scored in the first period after Case marched 83 yards down the field. Matt Franzen, half back, caught a pass from Herman Kalal, quarter back, in the next quarter for the second score.

Case converted a break into a touchdown in the third period. Half Back Don Croft of the Presidents, back to punt on fourth down, fumbled the soggy ball, giving Case possession on the W. & J. 3 yard line. Mickovsky went over through the line.

DUQUESNE SUB BEATS PITT, 7-0, ON 72 YARD RUN

Matsik Crosses Goal Line in Second Quarter.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 17.—[U. P.]—Duquesne sent a substitute half back on a 72 yard touchdown run which defeated Pittsburgh, 7 to 0, in one of today's biggest football upsets. A crowd of 20,000 sat hunched under umbrellas and newspapers to watch Duquesne make history by winning its first football game from its city rival. The field was soaked by a morning rain and the footing was treacherous.

A big fast line, led by Capt. Mike Basrak, outcharged the Panthers for the full 60 minutes and broke George Matsik, a substitute half back, into the open for the 72 yard touchdown run in the second quarter. Matsik, who keeps in condition during summers by working in the steel mills near his home at Ambridge, below Pittsburgh, was fresh in the game when he started his run.

It's Off Tackle Smash.

The play started out at Pitt's right tackle. The Pitt right end was eliminated by Matsik's interference. The right tackle and guard were blocked in toward center and Matsik broke past the scrimmage line. His interference picked him up again, carried him past the secondary and only Bob Larue, Pitt safety man, was between him and the goal line. Matsik eluded Larue and sped down the field.

Matsik edged toward the sidelines as three Panthers closed in on him. Larue tried for a tackle but missed and Matsik picked up speed, crossing the line standing up. Boyd Brumbaugh, 171 pound half back, who played a brilliant game, kicked the extra point.

TULANE, 28; COLGATE, 6.

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Colgate's razzle-dazzle style of attack held no terrors and no bewilderment for rugged Tulane today as the Green Wave engulfed the Red Raiders, 28 to 6, before 25,000 at the Polo grounds.

A smashing Tulane line took all the dazzle out of the Colgate offensive and a smashing back field punched through for large gains as it pleased. Only for a few moments at the beginning when Colgate scored its touchdown did the Maroon cause Tulane any worry In the second quarter Tulane marched 75 yards in eleven plays for one tally and advanced 41 yards in six plays almost immediately afterwards for the second one. The first play of the fourth period netted the third score, thus ending a 45 yard drive. The fourth and last touchdown was simplicity itself, three plays from the ten yard line supplying the motive power.

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Columbia defeated Virginia Military institute, 38 to 0, before 5,000 at Baker field today.

The veteran back field pair of Joe Vollmer and Johnny Hudasky set the scoring pace with two touchdowns apiece, while two sophomores, Johnny Siegal and Bob Taylor, brought in the other scores. Four of the Lions' touchdowns came by way of forward passes, while, on the defensive against the hitherto dangerous tosses of Billy Robertson, Columbia buckled down tightly, only one out of thirteen throws being completed.

BOSTON U. WINS.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Boston university, pushing over a lone touchdown before the field became a swamp defeated Washington university of St. Louis, 6 to 0, today. The game was played in a southeast gale and a downpour.

DARTMOUTH WINS, 34-0.

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Dartmouth defeated Brown today, scoring five touchdowns and a safety in a driving rain to win 34 to 0. A crowd of ten thousand dripped and shivered in the deluge, while Dartmouth's cheer leaders performed in bare feet.

Fumbles were frequent in the last half, Dartmouth losing the ball six times as substitute backs lost their grip on the ball. Dartmouth made fifteen first downs against one for the Brown.

CORNELL BEATS SYRACUSE.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Cornell's sophomore eleven, paced by George Peck, scored its touchdowns overland to defeat Syracuse, 20 to 7, before 12,000 on slippery Schoelkopf field today.

An air tight defense against the Orange passes fired by Ray Reckmack threw back three Syracuse thrusts in the closing quarter, brought the Ithacans their first major victory since Dartmouth was defeated, 21 to 6, two seasons ago and gave the Big Red team an 11 to 3 edge in a series begun in 1891.

Steers Lose, 21-18, After Holding 18-0 Lead.

Austin, Tex., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Baylor scored three touchdowns in the final 15 minutes today to defeat Texas, 21 to 18. Favorites to open its southwest conference season with a victory, Texas piled up 18 points in the first half.

Then Baylor started. The Bears drove to Texas' six yard line as the third period ended. Lloyd Russell raced around end for a touchdown as the final quarter opened and a pass netted the extra point. Russel intercepted a pass on his own 25 yard line and raced 36 yards to start the next touchdown march, climaxed when Brazell scored from the two yard line. Texas rushed in reserves, but the Bears rushed over their winning score, Russell tallying on a short pass.

A first quarter pass which netted 61 yards paved the way for Texas' first touchdown. In the second period the Steers scored twice, Jack Collins featuring with a 93 yard dash with an intercepted pass. Lineup:

S. M. U., 16; VANDERBILT, 0.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 17.—(AP)—The wreckage of Southern Methodist's 1935 Rose Bowl team—looking hotter than their illustrious predecessors—clamored for recognition again today with an aerial attack that routed Vanderbilt, 16 to 0, before 25,000. Twelve of twenty-two Methodist passes were completed for a pair of touchdowns. Vanderbilt's passing attack succeeded only five times in twenty-two for 53 yards.

Johnny Stidger started the first touchdown drive by intercepting a pass and running 21 yards to the Vanderbilt 39 yard line. He then shot a pass that Capt. Johnny Sprague carried 36 yards to a touchdown.

Bob Finley intercepted another pass on the Vanderbilt 38 yard line. A few minutes later and after passes moved the Mustangs to the 11 yard line, Sanders place kicked a field goal.

Stidger set off a drive that netted the second touchdown in the second period. Trapped behind his line on an attempted pass, he reversed his field and ran 26 yards to the Vanderbilt 34 yard line. The Mustangs advanced to the 12 yard line, from where Stidger scored on a lateral pass. Lineup:

DUKE, 19; GEORGIA TECH, 6.

Durham, N. C., Oct. 17.—[U. P.]—Duke today defeated Georgia Tech, 19 to 6, before a crowd of 35,000. In the first period Taliaferro, giant Duke right end, ran a blocked punt to the 1 yard line, from where Tipton scored. Duke began a second period touchdown drive from Tech's 40 yard line, and, after a first down, Hackney, fading back to pass, reversed his field and slipped through the entire Tech team to score. Duke kicked off with less than a minute of the second period to play, and Johnston, Duke half back, intercepted a pass on Tech's 20 yard line on the first play, Parker whipped a pass to Johnson, who dragged the ball down behind the goal line.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN BEATEN.

College Station, Tex., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Texas A. and M. used passes to overcome an 11 year jinx in scoring an 18 to 7 victory over Texas Christian today. The victory estbalished the Farmers as outstanding contenders for the Southwest conference championship, which they last won in 1927.

Dick Todd scored shortly after the starting whistle when he raced around end 13 yards after receiving a lateral. He previously broke away for a 51 yard run. In the fourth Todd raced 76 yards to T. C. U.'s 6 yard line, then skirted right end after receiving another lateral and went over the goal untouched. Johnny Morrow scored the other Aggie touchdown on a 40 yard pass.

DUELLO-ROSASCO ROLLER SKATING TEAM IN LEAD

Ten thousand jammed the Coliseum last night to witness the sixth night's skating in the Transcontinental Roller Derby. The champion team of Millie Duello and Johnny Rosasco, who won the New York race, swept into the lead, with Billy Lyons and Ivy King close onto their heels.

Schoolboy Creekmore and Libby Hoover and Wes Aronson and Clara Scholl also were close up. The balance of the field of 16 was close enough to the top to change the complexion of the race with an hour's skating.

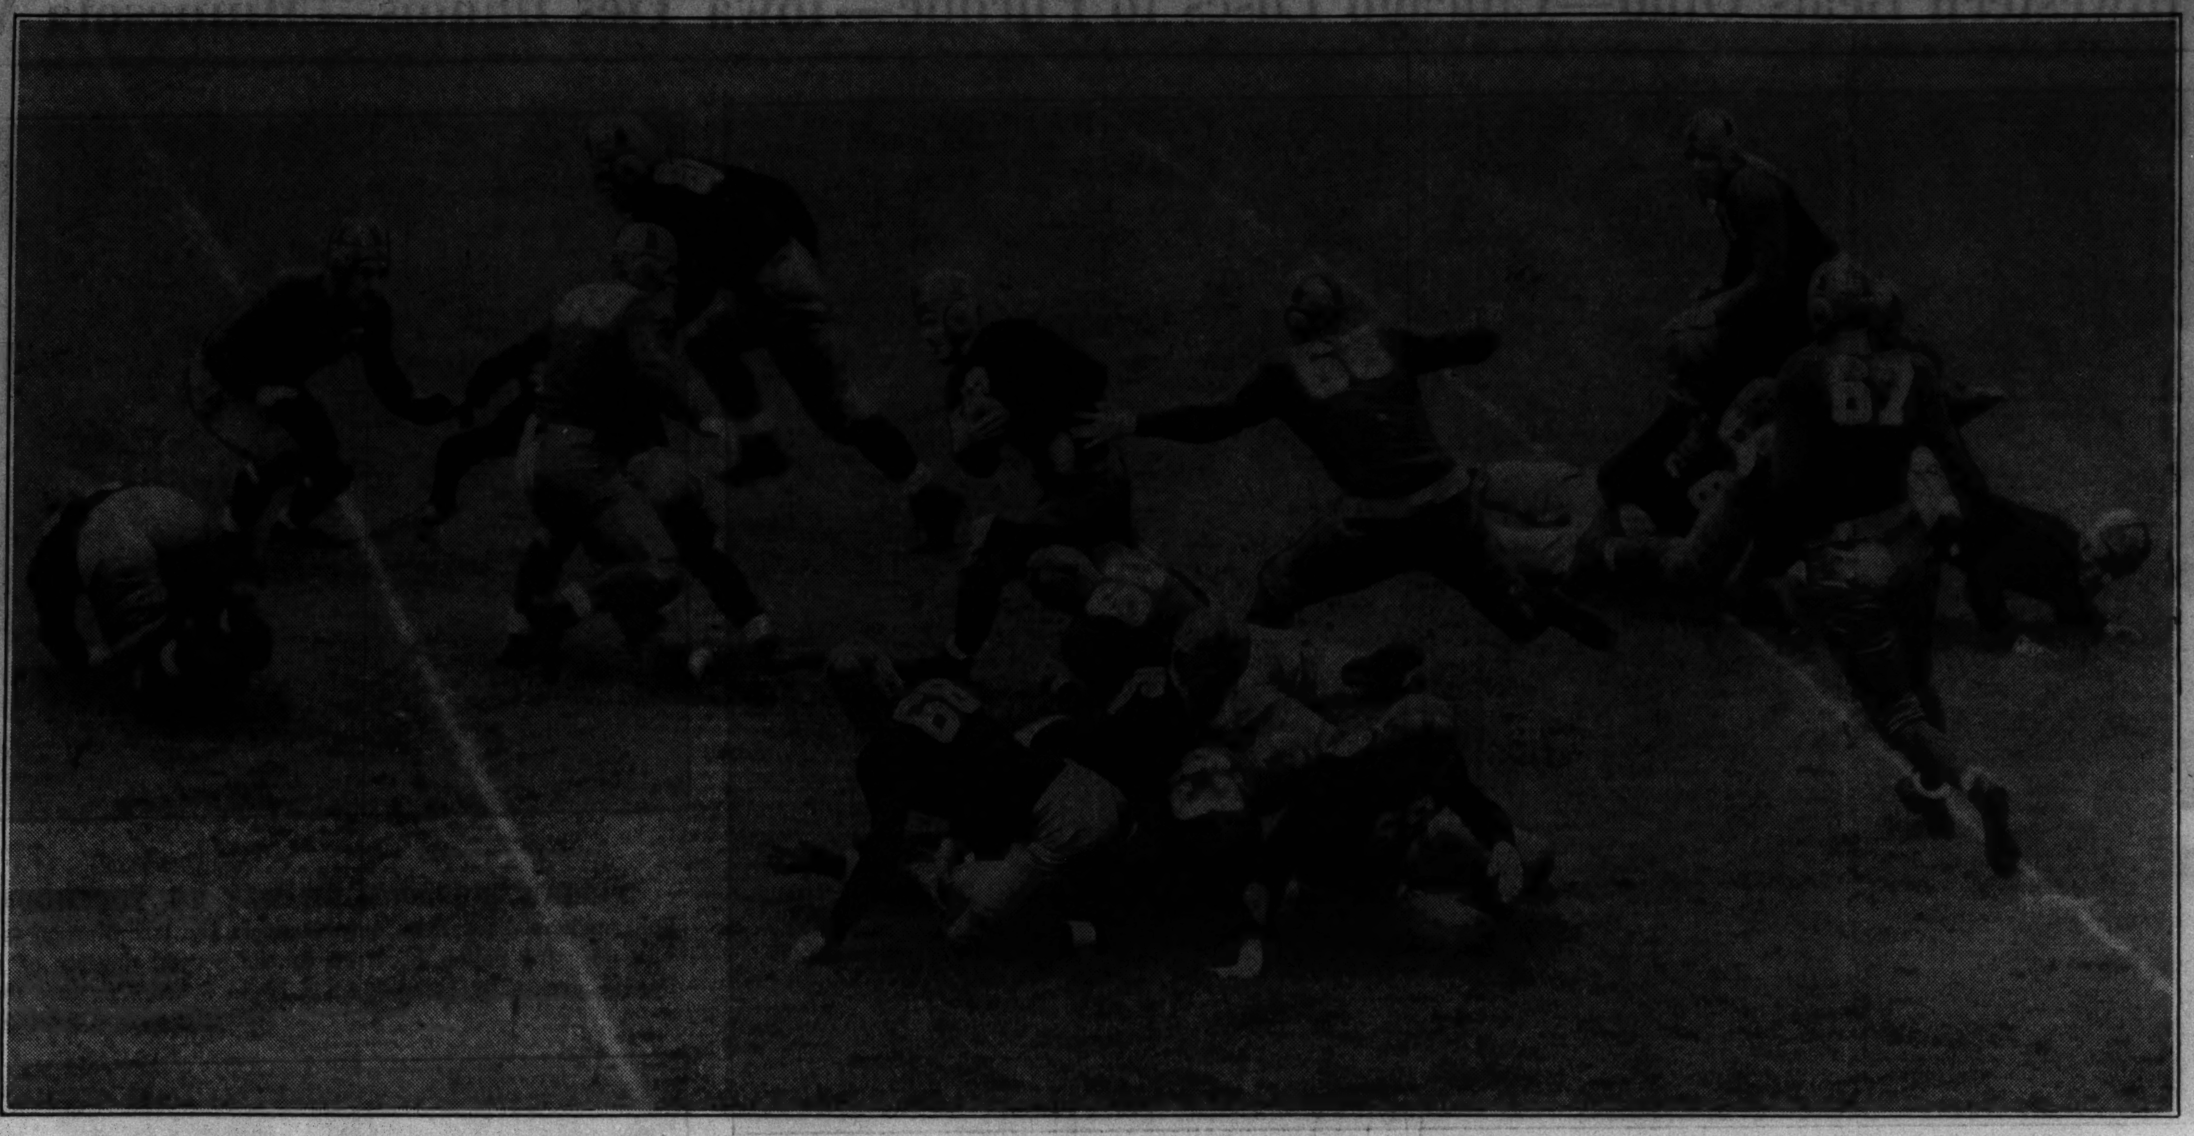
START OF A NOTRE DAME GALLOP; GOAL LINE NEXT STOP



Wilke of Notre Dame cuts through the Wisconsin line and starts for the goal, 16 yards away. This was the first touchdown of yesterday's battle at South Bend in which Notre Dame defeated Wisconsin, 27 to 0. Other Notre Dame players in the picture are Mundee (No. 68), Steinkemper (No. 69). Wisconsin players are: Davies (43), Clauss (59), Cole (60), Haukedahl (67), Jensen (68), and Jankowski (70).

Notre Dame promptly launched a drive which took the ball 80 yards without interruption for a touchdown. The drive started with Wilke dodging around right end for 18 yards, and Wojcihovski gave Wilke a rest as he made 3 yards. Wilke went to work again, this time with a 20 yard sprint.

Wilke Opens Scoring.

Wilke was stopped with a yard gain, then failed to complete a pass, but Wojcihovski ripped through right guard for nine yards and a first down on Wisconsin's 31 yard line. Wojcihovski added a couple of yards, after which Wilke passed to Puplis for 15 yards, and it was first down on Wisconsin's 16 yard line.

Wilke smashed through right guard, veered to his left and dived to a touchdown. Puplis' try for the extra point from placement failed.

The Badger offense gave its admirers a thrill after some punt exchanges early in the second quarter. The climax of this Wisconsin excitement was a 30 yard run by Jankowski. The advantage soon shifted to Notre Dame, however, for Tommerson's hurried kick, after he had dropped the pass from center, was blocked.

Notre Dame carried the ball to Wisconsin's four yard line on a sequence of maneuvers, the most effective of which was a pass, Kovalcik to Gleason, good for 24 yards, with Gleason and Tonelli contributing shorter jabs. On fourth down, however, Gleason was stopped on Wisconsin's two yard line and it was Wisconsin's ball. The Badgers worked back to the 25 yard line before the half ended with the ball in their possession.

The second blocked kick of the game bloomed into a touchdown in a jiffy. Early in the third quarter Mundee blocked a punt by Tommerson and deflected the ball out of bounds on the Badger 5 yard line. After Danbom had made two yards at right guard, Wojcihovski, on a fake reverse play, lunged through right tackle to a touchdown and Puplis added the point from placement.

Notre Dame's third touchdown followed a few minutes later. Danbom went over after an advance, the highlight of which was a pass, Wojcihovski to O'Neill, which was good for a 30 yard gain. Wilke added the extra point.

Borowski Goes Over.

Notre Dame's fourth touchdown was made on the first play of the fourth quarter, the fruit of that 54 yard pass near the end of the third quarter. The long heave put the ball on Wisconsin's five yard line, where Skoglund, the receiver, was downed by Bellile. Two plays put the ball on the three yard line as the quarter ended. At the start of the fourth period, Borowski hit center for a touchdown and Bruno drop kicked the extra point.

The remainder of the fourth quarter consisted of the open, long shot stuff that characterizes the final period of one-sided ball games.

the Nebraska 10 yard line and ran untouched into the end zone.

Taking the kickoff in the second half Nebraska surged down to the Indiana 25 yard line, but a fourth down pass failed. Indiana drew a momentary breathing space, but a low punt kept the Hoosiers in midfield. On a series of end around and hidden ball plays, the Huskers reached the Hoosier 16 yard line, where Indiana braced. Johnny Howell, Husker quarterback, dropped a pass into the arms of Les McDonald as he raced into the end zone for a touchdown. Francis place kicked the extra point.

Pass Scores for Huskers.

Nebraska went after its second touchdown starting on its own 34 yard line, where Francis intercepted a wildly thrown pass by Harry Cherry. The Hoosiers braced, however, and forced Nebraska to punt. Huffman's return effort, however, went out on the Nebraska 41 yard line. Then came a series of Husker spinners through center by Francis mixed with laterals to Cardwell which carried the ball to the Hoosier 9 yard line.

Francis got two yards at center, but was stopped on the next play. Howell then took the snap back and tossed a pass to Ron Douglas in the end zone for a touchdown. This time Francis' place kick was wide.

The statistics tell a clear story of the game. Each team had 15 first downs, Indiana compiling 226 yards from scrimmage in the first half, while the Huskers got 51. In the second half Nebraska got 178 net yards, making 13 of its first downs in the two last quarters, while Indiana was getting 67 net yards.

iron was fast. Capt. Wendt's opening kickoff was put in play on Purple's 35 yard line. Charles Gales, Ohio's best punter and tackle, was injured on the play and retired. Northwestern's opening attack was checked, and Ohio received the ball on its 26 yard line after a punt. Ohio penetrated into Northwestern's territory before being forced to punt, Wasylik's kick going for a touchback.

Once Hinton intercepted a Buckeye pass and with only McDonald to pass was brought down by that useful young man. Ohio State's first touchdown followed a Purple fumble which Inwood Smith recovered on Northwestern's 19 yard line. On second down Dye passed to Mike Kabealo on the 2 yard line, and the latter went over. Wendt's fatal failure to kick the extra point followed and Ohio led, 6 to 0.

Bucks Go Back Into Lead.

Early in the second period, Ohio State received the ball on its 10 yard line from Barney Jefferson's punt. On the first play, Bill Booth fumbled and John Kovatch recovered for Northwestern on the Buckeyes' 5 yard line. On the first play, Geyer dove through a hole at left guard for a touchdown. Geyer, with Heap holding, added the extra point and Northwestern led 7 to 6.

Geyer attempted a place kick from his 34 yard line which was blocked, but recovered by Heap as the half ended.

Ohio State kicked off to open the second half and soon thereafter had the ball on the Purple's 36 yard line when Bob Voigts, sophomore tackle intercepted a pass. Ralph Wolf, Ohio center, then intercepted a pass in Northwestern territory. He attempted a lateral pass to John Bettridge who was downed, but the ball was still on Purple 37 yard line.

Bettridge skimmed around his right end for a first down. On fourth down, Dye completed a pass to Williams on the Purple's 13 yard line. Geyer knocked down a pass to Wendt at the goal line. Bettridge failed to gain. Then Dye passed to Frank Cumiskey in the end zone for a touchdown. Wendt added the extra point and Ohio led 13 to 7.

Purple Takes to Air.

In the third period, Fred Vanzo, Northwestern's industrious blocking quarter back, recovered a lateral pass from Williams to Dye which went wild and the Purple marched downfield from its 39 yard line to Ohio's 16, where it lost the ball on downs. After an exchange of punts, Purple again had the ball on its 46 yard line.

On second down, Heap unleashed a long pass to Kovatch, who literally snatched the ball from two Scarlet defenders. After two plunges gained only 3 yards, Jefferson faked a run to his left and when about to be tackled passed to Heap on the 4 yard line at the extreme corner of the field. Heap brushed off Antenucci and scampered over the goal. Geyer, with Heap again holding, kicked the winning point. Northwestern, 14; Ohio State, 13.

From the following kickoff, Ohio drove and passed from its own 23 yard line to Northwestern's 20 before Heap intercepted a pass on his own 8 yard line. Toth's great punt which dispelled Ohio's last hope followed.

Jack Farwick Crashes Pins for 300 Game in Cuneo League

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

As an inkling that he was going to shoot a 300 game, Farwick crashed through with a 244 game at the Southwest alleys. After fellow members of the league had finished profuse congratulations Farwick really stepped out and achieved a 17 year ambition by throwing twelve consecutive strikes. The cheering started all over again, but Farwick was far from through.

Came the third game and still Farwick's ball could not miss the head pin. The scorers marked up another 244 count, and it wasn't long before the entire league was shouting praises for a lofty 788 series.

This Cuneo organization is a shop league, and, of course, its members do not make a business of bowling. Thus a few other scores made the recent session of the league remarkable. Take these scores for instance: John Dombroski, 676; Mike Rezek, 655; George Kamjac, 621; Walter Lakowske, 619; Al Fournier, 614; John Polich, 612; Frank Santo, 611; Jerry Lahoda, 609; Edward Giermack, 604.

Randolph League.

The Mineralites woke up in the Randolph league and knocked off a 3,108 series that was good for three victories over the Seagrams. Equally hot were the Birk Brothers, who buried the Cyrilla Cigars while rolling up 3,184. Big contributors to the Mineralite total were Fliger, 656; Steers, 660, and Bunning, 732. Birk Brothers' leaders were Geiser, 735; Traubenik, 654, and Lellinger, 653. The leading La Palina Cigars won three more games, as did the second place Mary Ann Breads.

Classic League.

Kraft Oke-Dokers vs. Prager Beer.
Oak Leaf Motors vs. Baby Ruth Candy.
Winkler Motor Service vs. Monarch Beer.
Charles H. Weber vs. Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer.

Standings:

	W.	L.	Ave.		W.	L.	Ave.

Baby Ruth	15	6	989	Kraft	10	11	949
Monarch	14	7	980	Webers	5	16	935
Winkler	11	10	955	Oak Leaf	3	18	925

Individual averages:

Adolph Carlson, 206; Lloyd Strouse, 205; Herb Lange, 204; Ben Bernicchi, Dom Devito, Bill Goldammer, 202; Ed Zajac, 200; Sykes Thoma, 199; Frank Farnan, Paul Krumske, Eli Maricich, 198; Joe Gratz, Herb Freitag, Barney Krause, 196; George Morrison, Les Fuller, Dick Winsberg, Leo Faetz, 195; Jerry Jouron, 194; Pete Petersen, 193; Harry Lippe, 192; Bill Flesch, Tom Chyzy, Joe Puccinelli, Al Rankin, Jack Bishop, 191; Bill Lenzen, Ed Krema, 190.

On North Side Alleys.

The Fritzi Scheffs tightened their hold on first place in the Gold Coast Major league by winning three games from the Belts. Harry Ledene Jr. led the winners with 636, and his father helped with a 257 game. Art Meier topped all individuals with 685, followed by Al Sharkey, 672; Blackie Vinguster, 642; Pete Petersen, 635; Lloyd Strouse, 623; Ben Weir, 620; Jerry Jouron, 620; Chris Petersen, 618; Howard Kimble, 615; Frank Wiggins, 614; Frank Belt, 614, and Eddie Zajac, 614.

North End League.

The Michelobs, Birk Brothers, and Budweisers, who scored clean sweeps, rolled into a tie for first place in the North End Traveling league. Each has won 12 and lost 6 games. The Michelobs, with the aid of a 702 series by Mike Anderson, carried off high honors with 3,203. The Birk Brothers were next with 3,158, and the Budweisers had 3,073. Trailing Anderson were Jule Lellinger, 682; Joe Heinreich and Les Fuller, 673, and Joe Sinke, 663. Sinke is topping the individual standing with a 209 average followed by Fuller with 208 and Alex Bartock with 207. Tomorrow night's schedule:

Stack & Ryan vs. Michelobs at North Town, 7 p. m.; Milfords vs. Schamberger Schlitz at Harry Kaads', 7 p. m.; Waggoner Stations vs. Richter's Sausage at Lincoln square, 7 p. m.; Birk Brothers vs. Fox De Luxe at Kaadland, 9 p. m.; Samuelsons vs. Budweisers at Gold Coast, 9 p. m.

WILBERFORCE'S PASS DEFEATS TUSKEGEE, 6-0

McGinnis Leads Attack Before 8,000.

Wilberforce university defeated Tuskegee, 6 to 0, yesterday in their annual football game at Soldiers' field before 8,000. A short pass, McGinnis to Dowell, from the 8 yard line in the third period, produced the touchdown. D. Rains missed the extra point.

Although Dowell received the pass that decided the game, it was another pass, McGinnis to Williams, good for 25 yards, which made the victory possible.

With the ball resting in midfield, McGinnis tossed a long spiral to Art Williams, Wilberforce senior, who continued down the field to the 8 yard line, where he was downed. Here McGinnis, the star of the game, dropped back and threw a short pass to Dowell. This victory gave Wilberforce a 4 to 3 edge in the series that has been played here since 1929. There was no game in 1932. Score:

Catholic Whips De Paul with Passes, 12 to 7

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—[Special.—Catholic university gained revenge for last year's defeat at the hands of De Paul, the only setback the Cardinals suffered in 1935, by whipping the Chicago eleven, 12 to 7, here today in a thrilling aerial battle. All three touchdowns were the result of passes.

Catholic stepped into the lead early in the first quarter on Adamaitis' flat pass to Walker in the end zone. Carroll's placement kick for the extra point was good but Catholic was offside. The Cards then used the same play in the second quarter for the winning touchdown.

The De Paul eleven came back with a touchdown midway through the third quarter, Pat Howlett tossing a nine yard pass to Juliam Heim in the Catholic end zone and then adding the extra point, and threatened to score again in the fourth quarter after recovering a Catholic fumble on the Cardinals' five yard line.

The opportunity faded, however, when Postaer's lateral to Mattei was broken up by Capt. Hermie Schmarr of Catholic and recovered by the Cardinals. Statistics showed 14 first downs for the winners, just double the De Paul total.

1936 Duck Law to Permit Open Water Shooting

BY BOB BECKER.

There is nothing in the duck regulations this year to prevent the mudhen hunters from getting into boats and shooting birds on their annual opening day "battle" on the lakes of northern Illinois. As far as we can figure out, the regulations permit open water shooting from boats. A hunter does not have to stay in natural vegetation along the shore of an inland lake.

Charles F. Thompson, director of conservation, has this to say about the open water shooting this fall:

"There is nothing in the restrictions which prevents open water shooting of either ducks or coots, provided the boats are not moving under power or being towed by a boat under power."

Incidentally, the government has removed the restriction on building blinds not more than 100 feet from the shore line. However, that means nothing to Illinois hunters, since there is a state law which prohibits duck blinds beyond the natural line of vegetation.

With the opening day of the mudhen and duck season scheduled to open Nov. 13, we advise all mudhen [or duck hunters] in Chicagoland who are planning on going to Grass lake, Pistakee, or any of those northern Illinois lakes to reserve their boats right away. We have a hunch that this opening day is going to see one of the largest outpourings of shooters in many years. Boats will be at a premium.

On Sunday nearly every hunter is able to find time to use his scattergun. This will mean an unusually large crowd after mudhens on Nov. 1, if we know anything about former coots "battles" in northern Illinois. The last time we attended the opening day bombardment in our sheet iron hunting outfit, which would turn No. 6 shot, the boys were hauling boats for miles in order to get out to Grass lake.

According to reports from along the Illinois river there are plenty of ducks already in the sloughs and marshes down there. And there will be many thousands of northern birds come down before Nov. 1. They have had snow and cold weather up north to start the birds moving southward.

most important, of course, was the failure of each team to score. The story of this game is an account of what might have happened and didn't.

Hawks Get to 5 Yard Line.

The high tide of Iowa's offense came in the second period. The Hawkeyes made only one first down thereafter and never advanced the required distance in the second half. But this threat, which reached Illinois' 5 yard line, had the Hawkeye homecoming graduates in a fine frenzy. The Illini successfully defended their goal line, however, and even added an insult by giving away five yards on a penalty for fourth time out which placed the ball in this position.

Bush Lamb and Oze Simmons, starting from Iowa's 40 yard line, paraded to Illinois' 22 yard stripe in three plays, the last a 29 yard jaunt by the colored boy, which was his major contribution of the game. Four more smashes gained a first down on the Illini 10 yard line and here Illinois, by sending in Tom Wilson for Frank Burns to back up the line, gave away five yards more.

It now was first down on the Illinois' 5 yard line and goal to go. After four more assaults, however, Iowa had lost three yards. The Hawks never threatened thereafter except for an intended lateral pass from Lamb to Simmons in midfield which sent Oze over the goal line in the third quarter. This was ruled illegal since it was actually a forward pass.

Iowa Defense Stiffens.

Iowa's goal line stand in the third quarter was its best claim to recognition this afternoon. The necessity was the result of Bob Lannon's fumble of the Illinois kickoff to start play after the intermission. The fumble was grabbed by Bob Castelo of the Illini on the Hawkeye 32 yard line.

On the third play from scrimmage Tony Mazeika, most effective of the Illinois half backs, took the ball from Lowell Spurgeon and ripped inside of Cornie Walker for fourteen yards. Mazeika used the same opening for six more yards and then Dave Strong, sophomore quarter back, passed to Spurgeon in the flat zone at the right for a first down on the Hawkeye 5 yard line.

A quick opening play by Spurgeon failed to gain. Spurgeon followed this with a sweep around Iowa's right end for three yards. Wilson's plunge then carried within a foot of the goal. It was fourth down. Strong thought to cross up the Iowa line with a quarter back sneak, but when the tangle was sorted Referee Joe Magidson ruled the attempt had failed.

Illini Advance Again.

Illinois later in the same third period again advanced to Iowa's 10 yard line. This assault was turned back when a reverse play ending in a lateral to Stasica lost ten yards and a fourth down forward pass was incomplete.

Iowa also had its difficulties in the opening quarter. With the advantage of the stiff north wind Illinois soon was deep in Hawkeye territory. Lamb's punt out to his own 27 yard line was called back and Illinois was penalized five yards for offside. On the next punt, however, Harry Lasater, Illinois sophomore guard, broke through and blocked the ball. It squirted to one side, where it was recovered by Illinois on the Iowa 4 yard line.

Two line smashes by Wilson and an attempted pass made no progress, so on fourth down Spurgeon replaced Bob Grieve in the back field. His try for a field goal, with Strong holding the ball on Iowa's 13 yard line, was low and wide.

Spurgeon also tried to kick the winning points in the second quarter after a five yard penalty on Iowa for roughing the kicker and an assortment of short plunges and passes had put the ball on the Iowa 19 yard line. This attempt against the wind was short and was caught in the end zone by Simmons for a touchback.

Simmons' race to the goal in the third period, ruined by the inadvertent forward pass, was so unexpected that the crowd scarcely had opportunity to cheer before the officials had brought back the ball. From his own 34 yard line, Lamb cut sharply inside of the Illini right tackle and raced to his opponents' 45 yard line. As he was tackled, he whipped the ball to Simmons racing along the east side line, but the throw obviously was forward and while the colored boy completed the play, he must have known it was illegal. The penalty loss of a down sent the Hawkeyes back to their starting point.

Illini Shackles Simmons.

Simmons was thoroughly shackled throughout by an alert Illinois secondary and a charging line. He scarcely had a chance to get under way before the Illini forwards had broken through the inadequate defenders and thrown him. Illinois also covered Simmons without exception on return of kicks.

For many of these kicks, Simmons had to go back and take them as they bounded along the ground. Apparently he had been instructed beforehand to keep in position because of the threat of Illinois' passes.

In the first half, Iowa used a 6-2-1-2 formation on defense, but shifted to a 6-2-2-1 in the second half. Illinois kept Strong back in safety and played a six man line except when the position of the ball called for El Sayre, Illinois center, to take his place in an effort to block a kick or defend near his goal. Sayre moved in between the guard and tackle on the side of the apparent threat of the Iowa backs.

Almost without exception the teams kicked on second and third down in the closing period. The last two plays of the game were plunges by Iowa from its own 25 yard line, indicative of desire to finish with a tie.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Kalamazoo college scored a 20-6 victory over the Alma Scots today. Finley intercepted a pass early in the game and ran 30 yards to the Alma 1 yard line and then crashed over. In the second period he passed to Hunt on the Alma 2 yard line and smashed over again. MARQUETTE WINS, 13-0, FROM KANSAS STATE

Guepe Twins Score in the Final Period.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Capt. Raymond Buivid and his twin mates, Al and Art Guepe, sailed the Marquette university football ship into calm seas today after 45 minutes of stormy weather stirred up by Kansas State college. Marquette won on two touchdowns in the last quarter, 13 to 0, before a crowd of 9,000.

Late in the third quarter Buivid lateraled to Art Guepe from his 26 yard line. Just as Art was about to be tackled, he tossed the ball to Al who scampered down the sidelines to the State 29 where Maurice Elder brought him down. Buivid pitched three passes to put the ball on the 4 yard line. Al Guepe pierced the line for the touchdown and Art converted from placement.

McMahon Blocks Punt.

The other touchdown came shortly after the next kickoff when Roy McMahon blocked a punt by Leo Ayers, substitute quarterback, on the Kansas State 30, and Buivid passed to Art Guepe, who scored from the 17 yard stripe. Art's try for the point was blocked.

Howard Cleveland, Kansas State substitute quarter back, caught a punt on his own 35 and went through the entire Marquette team before being downed on the 4 yard line. Elder carried the ball to the 3 inch line where the Hilltop line held him for two downs. On last down, a pass, Elder to Robert Kirk to Cleveland, was fumbled and Marquette recovered.

The Kansans played a keen defensive game for three quarters, and held Marquette on the 1 yard line for three downs in the second period. They were in Marquette territory several times, but lacked scoring punch.

State Outrushes Marquette.

While Marquette made ten first downs to seven for the visitors, the winners outgained, 164 yards to 127. State completed none of seven passes, while Marquette made ten good for 144 yards.

Elder carried the ball thirty-two times for 94 yards, Ayers seven for 46, and Cleveland eight for 26. Buivid toted it thirteen times for 38 yards, Art Guepe fourteen for 42 yards, and Al Guepe nineteen times for 52. Lineups:

MICHIGAN STATE WINS

East Lansing, Mich., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Michigan State kept its undefeated record intact as it handed Missouri a 13 to 0 defeat today before 10,000 spectators. The Tigers outrushed the Spartans but were guilty of nine serious fumbles which accounted for of State's touchdowns, and also both ruined their own scoring chances.

State's first touchdown came late in the second quarter after the Spartans had recovered a fumble on Missouri's 15 yard line. The Spartans smashed to the 5 yard line, then a pass, Sebo to Lenhardt, clicked for the touchdown.

Murray, Missouri safety man, fumbled Agett's kick on his 17 yard line in the third quarter after which Brandstatter, Spartan full back, broke through for the second touchdown. Sebo added the extra point from placement.

Missouri piled up seven first downs to five for the Spartans. Michigan State attempted 13 passes and completed three. Missouri tried 12 and completed two. Lineup:

Coast Yacht Begins Lake to Gulf Trip

The schooner yacht Seven Seas of the Aeolian Yacht club, Alameda, Cal., left the Michigan avenue bridge yesterday afternoon on the first leg of a passage down the Lakes to Gulf waterway.

Capt. William T. Murnan, owner-skipper of the craft, is in command. A deckhand and a radio operator, both Chicagoans, comprise his crew. The Seven Seas started its voyage from Seattle, Wash., three years ago. Capt. Murnan is a native of Chicago, but lived in Seattle for several years while he built without aid the 53 foot 35 ton schooner. After launching the yacht he sailed it south as far as South America, where he was shipwrecked, then through the Panama canal and to New York. Early this year he sailed through the Great Lakes. The Seven Seas has been tied up here for two months, first near the Columbia Yacht club, then near Tribune Tower on the river.

The Seven Seas will stay in Memphis several weeks, then continue down the Mississippi river to the Gulf of Mexico. Capt. Murnan said he may go around South America, coming through the Straits of Magellan, and up the Pacific ocean. Eventually he plans to sail around the world in his staysail rigged yacht.

TRIBUNE SOCCER TEAMS ARE GIVEN BREATHING SPELL

Only Two Contests Are on Schedule Today.

Today offers a breathing spell for soccer teams remaining in THE TRIBUNE amateur tournament. Only two games are scheduled because of the previously arranged Mayor Kelly trophy series this afternoon for members of the International league.

Heading THE TRIBUNE tournament program is the match between the Oak Park Acorns and the Ravenswood Hearts, class A division teams, which will meet at Winnemac park at 3 p. m. This first round game was deferred from last Sunday because of wet grounds.

Juniors to Meet.

The other game is a first round junior argument between Schwaben and the Magyars at 19th street and Keeler avenue, where play will begin at 1 p. m.

From now on the tournament will continue without interruption, the juniors being scheduled for their second round next Saturday and the class A and B elevens beginning second round competition next Sunday.

Two of the most dependable players on the Magyars are Alphon Vrneersch, captain and center half, and Steven Kristin, a 16 year old youth who can play a lot of inside right.

Mooseheart Breaks Even.

Mooseheart broke even in two junior games yesterday. Playing at 18th street and Keeler avenue, the second team from the Loyal Order of Moose institution lost to the Italian Sport club, 2 to 1, and the first team then defeated the Wanderers, 2 to 1, after 20 minutes of overtime.

Jacobs Wins 149 Races for Trainer Mark

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Hirsch Jacobs, who has led the trainers in number of winners saddled since 1933, set a new American record at Jamaica today when he scored a triple for his 147th, 148th, and 149th winners of the season. The former mark was 147, made in 1923 by C. B. [Cowboy] Irwin.

Night Sprite, in the colors of Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs, was the horse to set the new record. Wayne Wright rode him and got him home first by three lengths at 3 to 2.

For the early part of the race Miss Rainbow was the leader, but she could not resist the late move of Night Sprite through the stretch. At the end of the mile and seventy yards Miss Rainbow was second and Star Porter third. The last named pulled up lame.

Also Triple for Wright.

It was in the final race with the veteran Apprentice that Jacobs got his 149th winner. Apprentice was the favorite in a field of nine and was an easy winner after coming from behind Deserter's pace. The victory aboard Apprentice also completed a triple for Wayne Wright, as he had been up on all three of the Jacobs trained winners.

Jacobs, a young trainer from Brooklyn, attained the goal of 147 winners at which he has been shooting for four years when Belshazzar got home first in the opening race. It was the 147th winner Jacobs saddled with his own hands this year. He said:

"If all the horses trained by me this year were counted the total would be larger. But I am counting only those I actually saddle. Those that others saddle for me at outside tracks I am not counting."

Belshazzar carried the colors of Mrs. Jacobs and was ridden by Wright.

Was Pigeon Fancier.

In former years Jacobs was a pigeon fancier in Brooklyn and first came to general attention in 1933, when he saddled more winners than any other trainer. In 1934 and 1935 he attained the same distinction, but this has been his most successful year.

In his stable are a large number of selling platers, the property of various owners. Many of them are patched up cripples, and it is with this type of horse that Jacobs has had much of his success. The number of head in his barn ranges between 40 and 60, giving him one of the largest strings in America.

A cripple which he purchased for $1,000 early this year gave him new distinction. The horse was Action and he has won about thirty times his cost price this season by victories in several of the local handicaps, the most notable being the Manhattan handicap at Belmont.

South Dakota Comes Back to Beat Morningside, 26-12

Vermillion, S. D., Oct. 17.—(AP)—South Dakota university staged a great comeback today to defeat Morningside college of Sioux City, 26 to 12. Trailing 12 to 0 at the half, the Coyotes jumped into the lead in the first five minutes of the second half when Ryan swept around end 60 yards for a touchdown; Bartron tossed a long pass to Smith for 55 yards and another touchdown, and Ryan duplicated his earlier performance by galloping 60 yards for the last score.

Purdue Power Sinks Maroon Eleven, 35 to 7

makers' next two games. Half Backs John Drake and Fred Stalcup also received ankle and knee injuries.

Isbell was the leading ground gainer of the day, carrying the ball 13 times for a gain of 108 yards and an average of 8.3 yards. Sherman led the Maroon gainers with 42 yards in seven attempts. Purdue gained 332 yards from scrimmage against the Maroons' 99. The Boilermakers scored eighteen first downs against Chicago's eight. Purdue completed three of seven passes for a total gain of 29 yards through the air, while Chicago connected for 100 yards by completing eight out of 15.

Then the Avalanche.

The second quarter was barely under way when Purdue began the march which resulted in its first touchdown, a very thorough process which earned them a total of 93 yards. Drake and Isbell collaborated on a first down, and Isbell then accounted for another personally, bringing the ball to his own 35 yard mark. Stalcup then took the ball over right tackle for 14 yards and another first down. He lost three yards on the next play, but Drake cut through a hole in the Maroon line for 28 yards to the Maroons' 28 yard stripe. Drake got three at right guard, and Cecil Isbell went around his left end for nine more. Drake smashed through his right guard for seven more.

Here the Purdue offense went butterfingered, but recovered two successive fumbles. It was fourth down, with five to go, on the Chicago 10 yard line. Cecil Isbell then sprinted far out to his right and tossed a forward to his brother Cody for the touchdown. Cecil then made good his placement for the extra point.

Purdue Resumes Drive.

Purdue wasted little time in making the score 28 to 0 by the end of the third quarter, both touchdowns growing out of laterals from Cecil Isbell to Drake and then to Stalcup. The first was produced on a parade originating at the Maroons' 47 yard line. Isbell picked up four yards at left tackle, and Drake then went over right guard for a first down on Chicago's 36 yard line. Drake got nine more at center, and Isbell, after breaking through left tackle, was 12 yards in the clear when two Maroons rushed up and laid hands on him. He was just about to be downed when he flipped the ball laterally to Drake, who continued over the goal line for a touchdown. Isbell again made good the placement.

Same Play Is Repeated.

Following the kickoff and a Maroon punt, the operation was repeated. Taking the ball on their own 49 yard line, Cecil Isbell and Selby made a first down on the Chicago 37 yard stripe. Isbell then slipped through right tackle and dashed to the 8 yard mark before he was overhauled. Again he tossed a lateral, this time to Stalcup as he was about to be halted, and the latter scored with ease. Isbell then made his fourth straight placement to bring the score to 28 to 0.

The Maroons were given their scoring opportunity at the end of the third period, and capitalized on it early in the fourth. Bosworth blocked Ippolito's punt, the ball rolling out on the Purdue 12 yard mark. Seven new Boilermakers entered the game at the outset of the fourth period. After Frick had been stopped on an end around play, Samity faded back to his own 25 yard line and fired a touchdown pass to Goodstein. Fitzgerald drop kicked the extra point.

Medley Smashes Line.

After Medley had made a 30 yard return of a Chicago punt to the Maroon 45 yard line, Selby and Ippolito collaborated on a first down at the Chicago 32 yard stripe. Selby then scampered around the Maroon right end around play, Hamity faded back Medley then continued to smash the Chicago line until the former went over his left guard for the fifth Boilermaker touchdown. Juska came in to make the place kick for the extra point.

With less than a minute to go, the Maroons were in sight of a second touchdown, going from their own 33 yard line to the Purdue five yard mark, but the gun ended any further scoring hope. Chief ingredients of this uprising were Sherman's fourth down pass to Goodstein, good on the Boilermaker 39 yard mark, and another toss by Sherman which Lawson fielded on the Purdue five yard stripe.

TUSCOLA HIGH WINS.

Tuscola, Ill., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Tuscola defeated Gibson City High school today, 14 to 7.

SILVERETTE WINS BY FIVE LENGTHS AT SPORTSMAN'S

BY FRENCH LANE.

Racegoers whose memory took them back a year cashed in heavily on Garrett Watt's 6 year old mare Silverette when she galloped to an easy victory by five lengths in the Great Lakes handicap at Sportsman's park yesterday afternoon.

It seemed that most of those in the crowd of 8,500 which packed the tiny turf plant almost to the bulging point did retain a keen memory. They recalled those stirring handicap victories Silverette had scored over the same half mile track just a year ago.

Winner Is Second Choice.

So they backed the daughter of Vandergrift—Louvain with so much confidence that she became the second choice in the betting. When she galloped home so far in front with her head almost in the lap of Jocky Sammy Vail she paid off at $7 to win, $4.40 to place, and $3.20 to show.

The favorite in the race was Rock X., from Henry H. Cross' extensive Tranquility Farm stable with Jocky Basil James in the saddle. Rock X. forced the pace all the way but didn't care so much for the short turns. He lost ground on each of them during the seven furlong struggle.

Finally his strides shortened and in the final drive Cardarrone, winner of the Marquette handicap at Lincoln Fields just a week earlier, romped up from behind to beat him out of second money. He finished three lengths in front of Rock X. Countess Ann was fourth just a head back of Rock X.

Cardarrone paid $7.60 to place and $3.60 to show. Rock X.'s show price was $2.80.

Silverette Takes Rail.

Cardarrone beat Silverette away from the starting gate, but in a dozen strides the mare from the Watts' stable scampered into the lead. She dashed over next to the rail. There was no way of getting her off that rail. She hugged it from the early stage of the race until the finish.

She held a lead over Rock X of two and three lengths for the first six furlongs. Then when Rock X began to drop back Silverette increased her advantage until Jocky Vail took her up. Had she been allowed to step along the way she wanted to run she might have won by ten lengths.

Silverette hasn't done so well on the major tracks here this summer. She had won two races in 14 starts before yesterday's easy victory was rolled up. She does know how to run on a half mile track, however, and probably could make it interesting over such a course for any horse in the country up to a mile.

Fastest Race at Sportsman's.

Her breeding isn't particularly stylish on either side of the house. Her race was the fastest of the year at Sportsman's park. She skipped over the seven furlongs in 1:29 1-5.

Lady Thatcher and Arthur B. were the winners of the two races which shared top line honors with the Great Lakes handicap.

Arthur B. Smothers Rivals.

Arthur B. smothered his rivals in the Galesburg purse at five furlongs. He, too, was on the front end of the parade from the start to the finish and was gradually pulling away from Goldman and Maxine B. in the final stages.

A big plunge on Arthur B. drove his price down from 6 to 1 to slightly less than 5 to 2 at post time. James was in the saddle on Arthur B. His double on Arthur B. and Lady Thatcher was the first success he had enjoyed at Sportsman's park in three days.

Large Crowds See Stadium's Rodeo Shows

Large crowds witnessed the afternoon and evening performances of the world championship Rodeo at the Chicago Stadium yesterday.

Milt Moe of Perry, Okla., took the evening first prize money in the saddle bronc event, riding Wahoo, a wild bronco that nearly tossed him into the judges' stand on his first leap out of the chute.

New fields of contestants were drawn for today's matinee and evening performances. Some of the toughest horses and steers of the 600 head at the Stadium will be in today's championship contests.

Dave Campbell of Oklahoma City cracked the world record in steer wrestling with a new mark of :06 2-5, two tenths of a second under a mark that had stood for nine years.

CONNORS SEEKS NEW WORLD AND ROBY RECORDS

Pilot Hurt in Vanderbilt Race to Drive Next Sunday

Determined to create a new Roby track record, even if he cannot beat his own world record of 38.15 for a flat circular dirt racing strip, George Connor, Los Angeles racing pilot, is preparing his Marks-Miller special job for the final meeting of the central states season at Roby next Sunday afternoon.

Connor, victim of a spectacular crash at Roby in the last race while serving as relief driver for Wild Bill Cummings, is now preparing his car, which was forced out of the Vanderbilt cup race last Monday in New York. He is expected to arrive the middle of the week. The Californian was driving in seventh place in New York last week when a broken connecting rod ripped through the crank case of his car and forced him out of the competition.

Sets Record at Springfield.

Connor's world record was created at Springfield in August, just a week after Rex Mays had created a new Roby track mark of 42.19 seconds. Connors believes that there is no reason why the Springfield oval should be four seconds slower than Roby, especially since the oil treatment given the Roby track during the summer has made it one of the finest auto racing surfaces in the country. With that belief firmly established, he sees a record performance ahead.

Woodbury Is Starter.

Cliff Woodbury, veteran Chicago pilot now retired from actual competition, has been named starter for the first annual Roby sweepstakes as the closing event of the season. The appointment was made by Fred Willis, zone supervisor for the contest board of the A. A. A., governing body of the auto racing sport in the United States.

INTERSECTIONAL PREP GAME ON CARD SATURDAY

The only intersectional prep football game of the season in the central states will be played next Saturday at Dyche stadium, Evanston, between the St. Johns Military academy of Delafield, Wis., and the Black Foxe academy of Hollywood, Cal.

Both elevens have shown power this year and have won their games to date. In Jack Banta, full back, the Californians have one of the best all around performers on the coast.

The visitors will have a weight advantage of about 10 pounds per man. They defeated St. Johns on the coast last season. Coach Ed Lerch believes his team is stronger than its predecessor.

David J. Varnes, special representative of the Black Foxe institution, arrived in Chicago Friday to aid in planning the contest.

ANOTHER $1,000 DAILY DOUBLE AT RIVER DOWNS

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Today, for the second time within a week, the daily double at River Downs paid more than $1,000.

Mohawk Cherokee, an extreme outsider, and Blagden, winners of the first and second races, combined to pay $1,660.80 on a $2 ticket, and the winning total came near being three times as large, since House Baby, another outsider, was runner up to Blagden in the second race. Mohawk Cherokee paid $87.80 in the first race and Blagden 4 to 1 in the straight pool in the second.

The $1,660 payoff was the largest of the meeting at River Downs, formerly know nas Coney Island.

Nuvolari Wins Sports Review

Tazio Nuvolari, veteran Italian driver, swung his car around the last of 1,200 hazardous turns and sent it roaring home along the straightaway to win the 300 mile George Vanderbilt cup road race Monday at the new Roosevelt speedway on Long Island. He covered the route in 4 hours 32 minutes 44.04 seconds, averaging 65.99 miles per hour. He finished 11 minutes 51 seconds ahead of his nearest rival in the field of forty-five starters, Jean Wimille of France. Sixty thousand attended.

The best any American driver could do was finish sixth. This honor went to Mauri Rose of Columbus, O.

Although the course was described as the most hazardous route in road racing, the race was run off with no serious accident.

Chicago had just settled down after the city series when it came time to renew another famous local rivalry—the Bears vs. the Cardinals. These teams clashed last Sunday at Wrigley field with the Cardinals in the rôle of underdogs. But the best the Bears could do was get away with a 7 to 3 victory after stopping the Cardinals within inches of what might have been the winning touchdown. Jack Manders scored a touchdown for the Bears and then kicked goal. Bill Smith made a field goal to earn the Cardinals' three points.

Another famous rivalry was renewed during the week when Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs took opposite sides of the net in the final match for the Pacific coast mixed doubles championship at Berkeley, Cal. Mrs. Moody and her partner, Don Budge, beat Miss Jacobs and Henry Culley, 5-7, 10-8, 6-4, in a match that began Sunday, was cut short by darkness and was finished on Monday.

3 Amateurs on Squad to Play Maccabees

A team still in the running in THE TRIBUNE soccer tournament and two which were eliminated in the first round of play will be represented in Chicago's big international match a week from Sunday when the undefeated Maccabee team from Palestine faces the Illinois All-Stars at Comiskey park.

Out of the squad of 15 players selected to face the touring Europeans three are amateurs. They are Paul Baer, goalie from the German-American A. A.; Sexton Mattson, inside right from the Norwegian-American A. A., and Willie Priess, right half back from the Vienna A. A.

Mattson's team was eliminated last Sunday, as was Priess', but Baer's club is still in the competition.

Of this trio of players Priess is perhaps the best known. He has been named a number of times on the International league's all-star team and there was no hesitation in selecting his name when the Illinois group was being picked to face the Jewish champions.

The Maccabees, who have now compiled twenty-eight straight victories on a tour of 15 countries, will reach Chicago tomorrow. They will be given the city's official welcome by Mayor Kelly at the city hall, while an informal reception will be held at the Covenant club. The team will make a public appearance during the week on the west and northwest sides.

The proceeds from this game go for youth welfare work in Palestine and for relief for Polish Jews. It has the support of every Jewish organization in the city. The committee in charge has set as its goal the sale of 60,000 tickets.

KARAKAS STARS IN BLACKHAWK GOAL BARRAGE

Goalie Lauded for Keen Work at Cage.

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—Manager Clem Loughlin of the Chicago Blackhawks continues to exude optimism after a full week of practicing in which passing and shooting were stressed and which saw goalie Mike Karakas the main target for the bombarders of the team. The Hawks boss added his voice to the avalanche of compliments which were paid Karakas after the week's practice for his team mates.

Thompson Adds Praise.

"If Karakas keeps his eye on that puck during the season as he has the last week, we're the club the rest of the National Hocky league teams will have to beat," Loughlin informed a Hibbing group of hocky officials.

Paul Thompson, the leading sniper of the team and one of the best shots in the league, was highly elated at the improved net tending form of Karakas.

"He's already the talk of the players," Thompson said today. "If he keeps it up, he'll be more of a sensation than he was last season when he led all the net guardians of the league in stopping goals for the first 40 games.

Out for Vezina Trophy.

"My brother, Tiny, of the Boston Bruins just nozed him out at the tail end of the season, but it would not surprise me in the least if Mike took the Vezina trophy from Tiny this season."

"To date," said Johnny Gottselig, "he's been a big help to the team in practice because he is making us shoot just as hard as if we were in competition."

MILLIONS WILL WANT TO SWITCH TO AMAZING NEW CAR, MOTORISTS PREDICT

Read What People Who Have Previewed the New 1937 Dodge Say About It!

AGAIN Dodge scores with the greatest money-saving Dodge of them all! With breath-taking new beauty... with new roominess and comfort... with greater all-round economy and safety... the new 1937 Dodge is the car that "millions will want to switch to" in the opinion of everyone who has seen it!

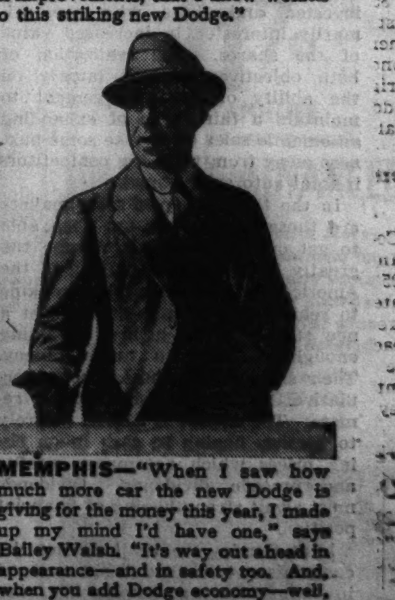
OAKLAND, CALIF.—"Perhaps I'm too enthusiastic, but I just can't help it!" exclaims Ruth Neal. "I've just been treated to a preview of the most beautiful car I have ever set my eyes on! It's the new Dodge for 1397—and it's so refreshingly new, has so many wonderful improvements, that I know women everywhere will want to change over to this striking new Dodge."

CHICAGO—"I've always been satisfied with the cars I have owned," observes Joseph Martin. "But I've just seen the new 1937 Dodge and I have fallen for it plenty! So smart looking you feel like a millionaire in it. So comfortable to ride in you imagine you are in an easy chair. And so easy on the pocketbook that you want to go everywhere in it. I can't wait until my new Dodge arrives."

SOUTH LEE, MASS. — "One look," says Alan Binkerd, "was enough to tell me that this new Dodge will capture America... will make motorists who've never experienced Dodge dependability and economy join the big army of Dodge owners."

Views New Dodge

DUBUQUE, IOWA—"The thing that impressed me about the new 1937 Dodge," says Adele Urbach, "is that its beauty is more than 'skin deep.' I like a good looking car and the new Dodge is even more than that. But comfort, safety, low cost of operation and dependability are more important to me. And on all these counts Dodge scores. So it'll be Dodge for me."



MEMPHIS—"When I saw how much more car the new Dodge is giving for the money this year, I made up my mind I'd have one," says Bailey Walsh. "It's way out ahead in appearance—and in safety too. And, when you add Dodge economy—well, no motorist can help going for this new Dodge in a big way."

New York, Oct. 17.—The bond market today maintained its course toward higher levels, despite the characteristic curtailment of trading activity in the two hour period. Secondary railroad and convertible industrial loans led the upswing, although the improvement spread throughout the higher grade issues and many foreign dollar bonds.

The two hour turnover in all bonds was $7,424,000 compared with $9,182,000 last Saturday.

Advance Is Broad.

The advance spread over a list of issues. Such speculative features as Allis Chalmers convertible 4s, American Writing Paper issues, and Gould Coupler 6s scored gains ranging from 1¼ to 5 points. Among the rails, Wabash refunding 5s featured with a gain of 3¼ points, while the bonds of St. Paul, Chicago and North Western, and Missouri Pacific participated in the advance with substantial net gains.

United States government loans were mostly firm to moderately higher in quiet trading. Closing prices showed gains of 1-32 to 5-32 point and declines of 1-32 to 2-32 point.

Foreign List Advances.

The market for foreign dollar obligations worked irregularly higher in comparatively dull trading. French loans were mixed, Soissons 6s advancing 3½ points while Nord Railway 6½s yielded 2 points. South American government loans were generally higher.

Among the most active issues of the foreign group were Polish 7s, which closed one point net lower.

SILVER FUTURES.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—(AP)—SILVER—Futures closed steady, 5 points lower. No sales. Closing bids: December, 44.45c per oz; March, 44.45c; May, 44.45c.

The Automotive Industry—I.

The automotive industry, with its many ramifications, has assumed a foremost rôle in leading the United States out of depression depths in the last two and a half years. As such, it has been a favorite among investors.

Those who didn't buy Chrysler or General Motors when both were selling at less than $10 a share are envying those who did, and many are wondering if there isn't some place in the automotive industry where they can put a few dollars to work profitably.

Among the auto makers themselves, there are perhaps three types of companies.

The dominant corporations at the top of the heap are in a commanding position. Sales and profits are comparable with or better than previous records. Their securities rate as good investments and should continue so to rate as long as production is maintained at a high level. This type of corporation should appeal more to the investor looking for income than the one seeking substantial capital gain.

In the middle bracket are manufacturers who have managed to obtain a sufficient share of the automobile business from their behemoth competitors to reach a profit basis and, perhaps, pay small dividends. Their shares may have an appeal about equally divided between persons seeking a fair return on money invested and those who are primarily interested in increased value of the shares. The realization of both objectives depends largely on the ability of the management to maintain a fair share of expanding automobile sales or to take some business away from their big competitors if total auto sales shrink.

In the third group of auto makers are those which have not been able to get on a profit basis, despite the greatly increased auto buying of the American public, or who are seeking to rehabilitate themselves and get a new start with the hope of obtaining enough business to make money. Their shares are almost purely speculative. Dividend possibilities are remote. The appeal is almost entirely to persons hoping to cash in on rising prices which accompany profits and precede dividends. Dividends must await strengthening of financial position.

Next Sunday we shall discuss the companies which, though not engaged in manufacturing automobiles, are largely dependent on the industry.

CHICAGO STOCKS POINT HIGHER IN SHORT SESSION

Six New Peaks Recorded; Trade Fairly Active.

Chicago stocks closed mostly steady to higher yesterday. The market was fairly active for a short session on a turnover of 51,000 shares. Six new high marks for 1936 and recent years were recorded.

Common stock of the Chicago corporation was the most active issue, accounting for 9,550 shares. It closed ⅛ point higher at 5⅛. Other leaders were Middle West, which closed unchanged, and Butler Brothers, which rose ⅛ point at 13⅛.

Field Common at Peak.

Marshall Field common again attracted attention by reaching a new peak since 1934 for the second successive day, and was fairly active at 2,500 shares. The new high mark was 19½ and the close 19¼. Activity and strength in the issue has again stirred speculation over the impending financing program.

Crane common, at 44, was highest since 1930. Alfred Decker & Cohn preferred closed at 78, the top level in recent years; Godchaux Sugars B closed at 32¼, a peak for at least six years.

Ken-Rad Tube and Lamp rose to 18⅝, highest price since 1929 and a net gain of 2¾ points for the day. Leath preferred sold at 31, highest since 1930.

Week's Volume Smaller.

Volume on the exchange last week was 306,000 shares, compared with 430,000 shares in the preceding week, and 215,000 shares in the corresponding week of last year.

Yesterday 105 issues participated in trading, of which 44 closed higher, 30 lower, and 31 remained unchanged. For the week 180 issues were traded, including one new issue. Of these, 68 advanced, 81 declined, and 30 were unchanged.

In the preceding week 191 issues were traded, also including one new issue, with 98 advancing, 71 declining, and 21 remaining unchanged. There were 16 new highs set last week against 33 in the preceding week.

COTTON CLOSE IRREGULAR IN FAIRLY ACTIVE TRADING

Cotton futures held within a range of less than 10 points yesterday on the active deliveries. Trading was fairly active, however, with European and Bombay interests good buyers along with domestic mills and speculators. The south sold freely, hedging against the movement of the new crop, and the close was somewhat easy. Chicago futures closed 5 points lower to 4 points higher. Other American markets were 5 points lower to 1 point higher. [A point equals 1-100 cent a pound, or 5 cents a bale.]

Spot cotton declined 5 points, with New Orleans and New York at 12.40 cents per pound and Galveston and Houston at 12.10 cents. Range of futures [cents per pound] follows:

MONEY SYSTEM OF U. S. MUDDLED BY SECRET PACT

Value of Dollar Is Further Confused.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's new secret pact with the British and French governments whereby officials of the three powers peg the quotations on the dollar, the franc and the pound at undisclosed rates has further confused the already muddy American currency system.

Business men now not only do not know whether President Roosevelt intends to exercise the power congress gave him to debase the dollar still another 16 per cent—they do not even know what the value of the dollar is in terms of other currencies.

How Currency Is Issued.

The situation now is something like this: The American people have a paper currency with each dollar supposed to be worth 15 5-21 grains of gold, but you cannot get the gold because the paper dollars have been made inconvertible. The federal reserve banks, which issue the bulk of the nation's currency, have had all their gold taken away from them by the government.

Therefore, instead of issuing federal reserve notes against gold as security they now issue federal reserve notes against "gold certificates." The gold certificates were given to the reserve banks by the treasury in exchange for the gold which was expropriated by the government. Nominally these certificates are warehouse receipts for the metal, but the trick is that they cannot be exercised. The law now prohibits the reserve banks from obtaining the gold for which the certificates are supposed to call.

Gold Held By Treasury.

All the monetary gold—except small amounts that have never been turned in by hoarders—is now in the hands of the treasury. Two billions, 800 millions of it represents the "profit" which the government allocated to itself in January, 1934, when the New Deal debased the dollar 40 per cent.

Much mystery surrounds the uses to which this "profit" has been put by the treasury. Eight hundred millions of it were transferred to the treasury's general account to be spent. Supposedly there are two billions of it left intact. Treasury statements, however, only carry one billion, 800 millions of it.

Just where the other 200 millions is nobody except a few New Deal treasury heads know. This 200 millions constitutes the nation's biggest political "vest pocket" fund.

Used to Manipulate Exchange.

Recent statements by Secretary Morgenthau indicate that it is this fund which is being used by the treasury to manipulate foreign exchange in secret conjunction with the British and French governments. The law permits the entire two billions to be used by the treasury to rig foreign exchange quotations, but only the "vest pocket" fund of 200 millions is now actually being used.

The advantage to the treasury in this scheme is that it permits absolute secrecy. Nobody can tell from day to day or from week to week how much the treasury is losing or gaining in its money market manipulations because the fund used is not accounted for in the published statements. It's an entirely loose 200 millions, the fate of which cannot be traced except by the chosen few insiders.

Size of Fund Now Unknown.

Obviously by now the fund is not exactly 200 millions, because it has been in operation for two years and must have shown either a net gain or a net loss on its transactions. On one recent deal—the purchase from the soviet Russian government of a million British pounds—it would seem there had been a substantial loss because when Secretary Morgenthau bought the pounds they were quoted above $5. Since then they have dropped below $4.90.

New Deal defenders, of course, argue that the fund is absolutely necessary to protect the dollar because other governments have similar funds and might manipulate the dollar in foreign exchange transactions to the disadvantage of the United States if this country had no fund to protect the dollar. It is significant, however, that when a nation is on a gold standard, with a currency redeemable in gold, no stabilization fund and no secret manipulations are necessary.

No Accounting to Public.

A peculiarity of the law creating the stabilization fund is that it makes no provision for the treasury accounting to the public for its employment of this money. Obviously, it cannot make current reports without destroying the secrecy which necessarily accompanies its moves. The law, however, does not even demand an eventual public accounting. The sky, apparently, is the limit.

The United States now has "planned" money, but nobody knows the plans except the planners.

Sloan Urges Study of Issues Before Voters

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 17.—[Special.]—General Motors corporation employés today received over the signature of President Alfred P. Sloan Jr., a letter counseling employés to give careful attention to the issues before the electorate.

ALFRED P. SLOAN JR.

The corporation, the letter points out, is not in politics and does not wish to be "mixed up in politics," but appeals to its employés to examine carefully the economic foundation of proposals offered and to "be sure that you understand who is going to pay for them." The letter, in part, follows:

"General Motors corporation is now starting its 1937 model year, and shortly we will all be back to work on full time. We have had steady employment in 1936, steadier than in the last seven years.

Plans to Aid Employment.

"We hope, through better management and harder work, to improve our operating methods, so that in 1937 we can do a still better job in leveling out employment.

"Wages and salaries in 1937 will be the highest ever paid by the corporation. If the financial result winds up at the end of the year, as it indicates now, we are all going to be happy and we are all going to enjoy it.

"General Motors corporation is not in politics, and does not in any way want to be mixed up in politics; but it is interested in economics, in the sociological welfare of its men and women, in homes for all, health for all, thrift of all, and a reserve for old age.

"With the many proposals coming forth almost daily, we appeal to you all to examine carefully into their economic foundation. In other words, be sure that they are sound, and regardless what the promises are, be sure that you understand who is going to pay for them.

Hard Heads, Not Hard Hearts.

"The economic load of our country is a matter for us all to consider, and to be hard headed is not the same as to be hard hearted.

"You are part of a big company. It is big because it gives public service. Being big, it will always be criticized, because the average critic, or reformer, does not understand the picture, and thinks, that by accusing it of something, whatever it is, he might stir up class hatred and claim personal credit for something that happens in the regular course of business.

"We are all part of this big company, the employé, the supplier of material, the dealer, and the stockholder. If class strife or economic shackles can break the company up, or retard its progress, we will all suffer. The only way we can survive and progress is through mutual confidence and coöperation.

States Company's Aims.

"The success of the corporation is shared by all of us. There is no door in the management which is not open to all. The corporation intends to go forward, giving consideration to all its people, trying to establish the highest position in its relation to the public, the dealers, its employés, and its stockholders.

"You know your own job better than any one else; your own foreman or superintendent is always willing to discuss it with you. You and your fellow workers can do as well as anybody that has no experience in anything but oratory.

"Let us work together in 1937, for our common interest, our individual welfare, and the welfare of our country."

SEEK NOMINATION OF TEMPLETON AS GRAIN BOARD HEAD

A petition to place Kenneth S. Templeton in nomination for the presidency of the Chicago Board of Trade will be circulated among members this week, it was learned yesterday. Templeton is now first vice president of the exchange. Robert P. Boylan, president, will retire at the end of the year to become New York representative of Clement, Curtis & Co.

Heretofore nominees for the presidency were picked by a nominating committee. Under a change in rules approved early this year it was provided that nominees for that office as well as that of second vice president should be named by petition of at least forty members. Seibel C. Harris, second vice president, will automatically become first vice president Jan. 1.

Templeton is 47 years old and has been a member of the exchange since 1911. He is a member of the cash grain firm of J. S. Templeton's Sons, one of the oldest firms on the exchange. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

INDUSTRY EQUALS RECENT SIX YEAR PEAK IN ACTIVITY

New York, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Industrial activity pushed ahead this week to equal the six year peak touched a fortnight back. Steel operations and railroad freight loadings made new recovery tops. The Associated Press index advanced to 96.4 per cent of the 1929-'30 average from 96.2 last week and compared with 76.1 a year ago.

Automobile producers continued to expand output of 1937 models in anticipation of a strong demand. Rail shipments moved up a notch, despite a drop in coal movement. Gains were attributed to miscellaneous and ore loadings.

The composite index advanced 27 per cent during the last year, with heavy industry setting the pace. The largest percentage gainers over the same period last year were residential buildings, up 59 per cent, and steel mill activity, up 50 per cent.

Other upward changes during the year included a 26 per cent rise in cotton manufacturing, a 23 per cent boost in automobile output, 15 per cent in electric power, and 12 per cent in total carloadings.

The index and its seasonally adjusted indices, with 1929-'30 as 100, and based on the latest available statistics, compared as follows:

	Last wk.	Prv. wk.	Yr. ago.

GAIN PREDICTED FOR CHEVROLET '37 TRUCK SALES

Truck sales of the Chevrolet Motor company in 1937 are expected to amount to 225,000 units, which would set a new high record, it was indicated yesterday. This would be an increase of 20,000 trucks over estimated sales of 205,000 in 1936.

"During the coming year we look for a substantial volume of truck sales as a result of the general improvement evident in 1936," W. E. Holler, sales manager, said. "Business, industry, and agriculture alike will contribute to this increase, for all three are in better shape than they were a year ago at this time."

Farmers Lose Fifty Million Lard Buyers

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

Restoration of foreign markets for American lard, lost largely through pig killing and crop control schemes of the New Deal, presents an almost insurmountable task because of the growing competition from other nations, trade circles assert.

Conservative estimates place the number of foreign consumers of the American product which have been lost in the last three years at 50,000,000. Until this business is recovered, farmers in this country cannot return to "normal" production on a profitable basis, it is said.

Win American Markets.

Acknowledgment by United States interests that, following the Agricultural Adjustment administration's pig destruction program, American farmers no longer had sufficient hogs for domestic requirements, spurred widespread production of hogs abroad. Foreigners, who first sought to replace the vanishing American product in European markets, soon found they were able to supply their own needs and leave a surplus, which, because of lower production costs, they could sell to this country at a profit.

Many smaller nations that never before were a factor in the pork export field and depended largely on America for pork products, have now become exporters. Poland, Hungary, and Russia have substantially stepped up hog production and have won much former trade of the United States.

Russia Is Benefitted.

Russia in particular has benefitted. That country increased production at a more rapid rate since the 1933 pig killing in the United States than any other nation. In 1933 Russia reported 12,068,000 pigs on farms. In 1934 production was stepped up to 17,450,000 head and in 1935 Russia had 22,550,000 pigs, according to the department of agriculture.

Even such small nations as Bulgaria have become conspicuous bidders for lard trade. That country is expected to export about 3,000 tons this year, the six months' total being around 1,200 tons. In 1935 Bulgaria sold only 97 tons in the export field.

While these small nations increase their output America falls further behind in the foreign trade. It is estimated that this year's lard exports by America will be about 110,000,000 pounds compared with 584,238,000 pounds in 1933, the year the pigs were destroyed. Pork exports for 1936 are expected to be about 68,000,000 pounds, compared with 142,035,000 pounds in 1933.

At the same time imports of pork rose from 2,926,000 pounds in 1933 to 10,494,000 pounds in 1935, and at the rate the foreign product is pouring in the United States' imports will reach a new all time record of 36,000,000 pounds in 1936.

BELGIAN GOLD ENGAGED FOR EXPORT TO U. S.

First Consignment Since Late 1934.

The engagement of $800,000 gold in Belgium for shipment to the United States was announced yesterday by the Federal Reserve bank of New York. This was the first export of gold from Belgium to this country since before the devaluation of the belga by 28 per cent on April 1, 1935, and the adoption there of a managed gold standard similar to that of the United States.

The belga has been below its gold-export point to the United States for about two weeks, but up to yesterday none of the large commercial banks had ventured to apply for gold in Belgium for export purposes, having believed that such an action might be regarded as unfriendly.

Basis of Sale Is Not Disclosed.

Whether yesterday's engagement was a pure exchange transaction, arranged by commercial banks, or a special transaction carried out by the national bank of Belgium for purposes of supporting the exchange could not be established. The preponderant opinion of commercial bankers was that the shipment had been arranged between the central banks of the two countries.

The previous gold import from Belgium was received at New York on November 26, 1934, and amounted to $7,288,900. Thereafter, until the devaluation in the following April, Belgium supported her exchange by shipments to France. Since devaluation the movement of funds has been chiefly into Belgium and there has been no occasion until the last two weeks to test the willingness of that country to export gold to the United States.

More Gold Engaged.

The New York Reserve bank also announced the engagement of an additional $966,000 gold in England. This gold, like other recent engagements in England, represented purchases in the open market in London. Engagements of gold abroad last week aggregated $12,023,000 and included, in addition to the gold taken in Belgium, $7,703,000 obtained in England, and $3,520,000 taken in India. Since Aug. 7 about $336,000,000 gold has been engaged abroad for shipment to this country.

Dealings in the foreign exchange market continued quiet. The pound sterling declined 7-16 cent to $4.88⅞, at which level it showed a loss of 1⅞ cents in the last week. The franc at 4.65¾ cents showed a drop of ¼ point and a loss of 1¼ points in the week. Guilders continued in demand and were supplied by the Netherlands stabilization fund at 53.86 cents, a rise of one point over the preceding day and a gain of 37 points from the closing price of last week.

Swiss Franc Lower.

Swiss francs at 22.99 cents were off one point yesterday and down 18 points from a week ago. German marks lost 2 points to 40.25 cents, and lire showed no net change for the day. Compared with a week ago the mark was off 3 points and the lira was unchanged. Scandanavian currencies fell 2 to 2½ points in keeping with the lower price of sterling and showed losses of 10 points in the week. The Japanese yen at 28.60 cents was off 2 points yesterday and down 10 points from a week ago. The Canadian dollar at $1.0001 9-16 showed a loss of 2 9-16 points for the day and the week.

AIR CONDITIONING UNITS INSTALLED HERE SET RECORD

Air conditioning installations in Chicago during the first nine months of 1936 increased 39 per cent over the same period last year and established an all time high mark for the period, the Commonwealth Edison company reported yesterday. Units installed or contracted for numbered 402 with a combined capacity of 7,188 horse power, against 290 and 5,253 horse power last year.

The company said Chicago continues to lead all American cities in air conditioning with 1,336 installations having a combined capacity of 56,120 horse power. During September fifteen new plants were contracted for, the same as in September last year. Capacity was slightly lower, totaling 297 horse power against 338 horse power in the 1935 period.

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

Indices Indicate Further Gains in Business—Railroads' Position Improves—Steel Trade Encouraged—Three Nations Return to Temporary Gold Standard—Stock Rise.

The quickening tempo of business and industry was reflected last week in the barometers of activity in many lines. The great railroad industry which has lagged behind in the recovery movement gave evidence that it is coming into its own.

With trafic reaching a new recovery peak, the railroads pushed forward aggressively in their program to build up their passenger business and placed orders with manufacturers for new equipment.

The railroad picture was regarded as the most favorable for at least six years. This view was based not only on the increasing trafic and purchases of equipment but on the revenue reports coming from the leading carriers. The railroads did a gross business of $276,013,000 in September, the largest for any corresponding month in five years and an increase of more than 16 per cent over September, 1935.

Estimates indicated purchases of new locomotives would exceed 250 by the end of the year. At the low time of equipment buying in the deepest depression year only one new locomotive was sold to the industry.

Equipment.

The rapidly recovering economic health of the carriers was reflected during the week in the following developments:

1. Southern Pacific placed orders for $3,410,000 of rails and accessories to be used in putting its San Francisco-Los Angeles line in condition for streamline trains now under construction.

2. The Milwaukee road asked for bids on 31 new locomotives and 7 locomotive boosters, expected to cost $4,000,000. An additional $650,000 was earmarked for other equipment. In the company's own carbuilding shops in Milwaukee work was going ahead on the construction of 20 new day type coaches, 2 dining cars, 3 chair cars, and 500 gondola and 1,000 automobile cars.

3. From the shops of the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing company in Philadelphia rolled the new twelve car Denver Zephyr, longest streamlined train in the world, which goes into service Nov. 8 on the Burlington between Chicago and Denver. Two giant Diesel power cars, with a combined horsepower of 3,000, which will pull the new train were undergoing final tests in the Chicago plant of the Electro-Motive corporation.

4. The Baldwin Locomotive Works reported that orders received in September, including those of its subsidiaries, totaled $2,532,000 as compared with $1,141,000 in the corresponding month last year. Orders booked during the first nine months of 1936 were $23,902,000 against $12,828,000 in the corresponding months of 1935.

Freight.

Railroad trafic figures compiled by the Association of American Railroads showed freight loadings of 829,023 cars in the week ended Oct. 10—the largest since the week-end of Nov. 8, 1930. From the preceding week the increase amounted to 1 per cent and from the corresponding period of 1935 it was 11.7 per cent.

Steel.

The improving railroad picture encouraged the big steel companies. With their biggest customer once more in a position to buy they made plans to meet the increased demand expected in the next year.

A minor recession in steel production occurred during the week when mills operated at 75 per cent of capacity. Rather than a letup in demand the recession was caused by the necessity of closing open harth furnaces in some producing areas for needed repairs.

Expansion.

In Birmingham, William A. Irvin, president of United States Steel corporation, revealed plans for a building and expansion program in the area which involves the expenditure of an estimated $29,000,000.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of U. S. Steel, supplemented Irvin's announcement by explaining what was behind the latest move of the leader of the steel industry. Asserting that "the rhythm of recovery has been established in the United States," the veteran steel leader said:

"We believe that we read these signs aright at this time and that the revival which we have seen and are witnessing is the beginning of a progressive resumption of full operation of America's vast productive enterprises. . . . Confidence, crystallized into action, whets the spirit of American courage and adventure, and revitalizes every one of us."

Air Service.

One of the striking developments of the week in the transportation field was the announcement by Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc. that, beginning tomorrow, it would inaugurate an overnight freight by plane service between Chicago and New York. The idea for the "flying box cars" was first suggested by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in an editorial last February. It was pointed out that the air lines might profitably use older equipment, outdated for the passenger service, for such a freight service. Jack Frye, TWA president, said the company expects to extend the service from coast to coast in the near future.

Sears, Roebuck.

Two corporation reports made outstanding business news last week. Sears, Roebuck & Co. on Wednesday reported sales for the ninth "fiscal period," Sept. 11 to Oct. 8, were the largest on record for the period and in excess of 50 million dollars for the second time in the company's history. On the basis of the report it was estimated that the company's gross sales for the full fiscal year would cross $500,000,000. The previous high mark was $443,000,000 in the year ended Jan. 29, 1930.

A. T. & T.

On the day following, the American Telephone and Telegraph company made public its September quarter earnings statement showing the largest net income for that period in the company's history. The per share income of $2.31 covered the dividend of $2.25 for a quarter for the first time since the June quarter of 1931. Telephones in use, reported President Walter S. Gifford, made a net gain of 600,000 in the first nine months of 1936 and long distance and toll business increased 12 per cent in the period.

On the same day the earnings report was issued a banking group made public offerings of an issue of $150,000,000 of 3¼ cent debentures of A. T. & T. The issue—in the parlance of the trade—went out the window. Dealers reported no such demand had been shown for a corporate obligation within memory.

New Deal.

What goes through the minds of some of the big business men who have attempted to stay on good terms with President Roosevelt despite their skepticism of his policies was revealed last week when the transcript of testimony given by Henry L. Doherty in a stockholders' suit last June became public. As head of the Cities Service company, vast utility holding company, Mr. Doherty has had plenty to worry about under the New Deal.

Said he: "I am in a position where I do not want to offend the President and I do not want to fight his ideas. I want to support him if I can, and if I cannot I must find a way to convince him of my position. So I am just trying to please."

About his part in the promotion of Cities Service he added: "I have not felt that I have cheated anybody because I started out with and still have great ambitions for the company. However, I did not expect to have to buck world wars and things

STOCKS MOUNT ANOTHER NOTCH; NEWS CHEERFUL

Show Confidence in Business Situation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 17.—Such week-end trade news as came to hand today served to bolster confidence in the general business situation and outlook, and substantially higher prices were marked up in most departments of the stock market. In a few isolated instances demand was aggressive enough to register gains of as much as $7 and $8 a share. Improvement in the general list ranged generally from fractions to a point or so.

As usual in the abbreviated week-end dealings, much of the activity was of professional origin and undertaken for evening up purposes. Scattered realizing was in evidence throughout the session, although selling showed a tendency to dwindle in the last half hour with the result that final prices, with few exceptions, were the best of the day.

Roosevelt's Speech Ignored.

The few news items with a market flavor that came over the ticker during the short session had little influence on the groups they might ordinarily have been expected to affect. Motor shares showed an utter disregard to President Roosevelt's Detroit speech suggesting higher wages in the automotive industry, both Chrysler and General Motors moving ahead with the general list to register net gains of a point or so each. Mack Trucks did about as well and minor improvement was the rule for the lesser lights of the division.

Steel stocks were prominent throughout the session, with Bethlehem and United States Steel common turning over in fairly large blocks at better prices. Each showed a gain of around $1 a share when the gong sounded on operations for the day. Both registered new highs for several years.

Pivotal Issues at New Highs.

Most "key" issues of the list advanced to new highs for the movement, many of them selling to the best prices in five or six years. Westinghouse and General Electric were strong features in their respective sectors, the former selling up more than 2 points to a new high for the year.

The coppers, which were strong spots in yesterday's trading, extended their rise moderately in the face of light selling for professional account. Kennecott emerged 2 points above its price for the previous session and Anaconda did more than half as well.

Utilities were rather neglected. Consolidated Edison and Peoples Gas both countered the trend for small fractional losses, while Public Service of New Jersey had all it could do to hold its own in the face of such light selling as came its way.

Amusement Group Active.

Buying was rather heavy in the amusement division, Paramount issues coming in for a particularly vigorous play. Both the common and first preferred moved into new high territory, the latter on a rise of more than two points. Loews climbed 1½ points before meeting resistance.

Farm stocks were in favor, most of the leaders of the group achieving new price peaks. Montgomery Ward in the mail orders and Macy in the merchandise section were well liked.

FORD REPORTS LINCOLN-ZEPHYR ORDERS HEAVY

Dearborn, Mich., Oct. 17. — [Special.]—Orders for the new Lincoln-Zephyr motor cars for 1937 totaled more than 5,300 over last week-end, when the new cars were first put on display, the Ford Motor company announced today.

This total represented more than one-third of the total sales of the 1936 series during last season, based upon reports from the 36 Ford branches throughout the United States.

Week Shows 53 Favorable Changes in Dividends

New York, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Favorable dividend changes in the last week totaled 53, compared with 42 in the preceding period, Standard Statistics company reported today. There was only one unfavorable change against two in the week before.

A CHEAP STOCK FOR LARGE PROFIT

When HOUDAILLE-HERSHEY "B" was selling at 6¾ we advised its purchase as "one of the most attractive low-priced speculations in the entire list." In less than a year it sold above thirty. This demonstrates the unusual profit possibilities in some of the lower-priced stocks.

We have selected another issue which, in some respects, is more attractive than HOUDAILLE-HERSHEY. It is a stock in which you might, in the months ahead, secure greater-than-normal profit. It is listed on the New York Stock Exchange. It will, we believe, sell much higher. Now, however, it may be bought at a very reasonable figure.

INSURANCE MEN TELL OF MEETING WITH ROOSEVELT

President Recites Plans, but Asks No Advice.

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's conference with life insurance company executives at the White House on Sept. 15 was innocuous, with no expert opinions sought, no conclusions reached, and nothing of importance discussed. This now has been revealed, although the meeting, both before and after, was the subject of columns of conjecture and much significance, political, social, and economic, has been attributed to it.

The much quoted phrase attributed to President Roosevelt that no farm mortgage ought to run for more than $25 an acre was never made by the President. It was made in an interview attributed to one of the insurance men, who spoke for himself and not for the group.

There was no official statement made by the group. In fact, before leaving the White House it was agreed not to make any group statement.

Purposes of Conference.

The conference, if it had any significance, was, in the opinion of at least one of its guests, just to impress the financial world that the President is safe and sound, or else that it was planned to be used as evidence for subsequent speeches that the President isn't fighting business, but that he meets business men around the table, is aided by their opinions, and settles their common problems.

Invitations were sent to Frederick H. Ecker, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company; James H. Craig, vice president of the same company; Thomas A. Buckner, president of the New York Life Insurance company; Michael J. Cleary, president of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company; Edward Zacker, president of the Travelers Life Insurance company, and Charles Williams, president of the Western and Southern Life Insurance company.

Meeting Follows Knox Speech.

The invitations followed a few days after a speech by Col. Frank Knox at Allentown, Pa., a speech which had created a good deal of furor among New Deal defenders, who had interpreted it as challenging the security of savings accounts and insurance policies under the New Deal.

The impression among the insurance heads as they gathered at the Carlton hotel, Washington, before proceeding to the White House was either they were going to be spanked or were going to be asked to make a statement publicly discrediting the Knox speech. Nothing of the kind happened.

The insurance men were received by President Roosevelt fifteen minutes after they reached the White House, cordially greeted, and invited into the library. They had been invited for forty-five minutes. The conference actually lasted ninety minutes.

Roosevelt Does Most Talking.

Greeting them, President Roosevelt said: "If I can avoid doing all the talking, I can probably learn something from you." In the ninety minutes the conference lasted, President Roosevelt talked at least eighty-eight, one insurance head remarked to a friend afterward.

President Roosevelt talked about the opportunity for coöperation between the government and private lending agencies through exchange of information and he talked about his theory of the danger of boom real estate values.

It was at this point that the President observed that not many years before farm lands sold at $200 an acre when, on an earning basis, they ought not to have sold for more than $75. Lending agencies, he said, such as insurance companies, could be influential in preventing a repetition of speculative and boom prices by not following boom values in making loans.

Federal Lending Discussed.

The President agreed with an interjection of one of the insurance men that the government agencies themselves were major factors in the loaning field and agreed that they, too, must conform to his suggestion.

The President talked about his crop insurance ideas, which he agreed were nebulous, but which he said he believed could be solved on actuarial basis. There was no request for information, no invitation for the insurance men to join the discussion.

The letter of invitation requested the insurance men to bring the statements of the condition of their companies at the end of 1932 and at the close of each succeeding year. All brought their statements and left them at the White House. They were not mentioned during the conference. The insurance men have heard nothing from them since. They were presumably wanted to show a rising scale of prosperity in the insurance companies and to reflect a general increasing prosperity under the New Deal.

BIG AUTO PARTS GROUPS CHARGED WITH MONOPOLY

Five Associations Cited by Federal Board.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—[U. P.]—The federal trade commission today issued a complaint against five trade associations of manufacturers and jobbers of automobile parts, charging them with attempting to control the market and fix prices.

Two of the groups, the National Standard Parts association, Detroit, and the Motor and Equipment Wholesale association, Chicago, are national organizations. The other three, the Automotive Trade association of Greater Kansas City, Mississippi Valley Automotive Jobbers' association, and Southwestern Jobbers association, are middle-western regional organizations.

Officers and Members Named.

The complaint named also officers, directors, and members of the organizations as respondents. The commission allowed them until Nov. 20 to show cause why it should not issue a cease and desist order against the alleged practices.

The groups, which were described in the complaint as "representing a substantial portion" of the accessories jobbing business, are alleged to have sought control of the market and prices for their products and to have combined in "preventing the establishment of new and additional competitors and executing certain agreements and conspiracies among themselves and with others."

Monopoly Is Charged.

The commission alleged that the associations through agreements attempted to monopolize distribution of the parts in the hands of so-called "legitimate dealers" or those who agreed to maintain the resale prices suggested by the members. It charged that jobber members of the associations and nonmembers, who joined them, agreed to boycott manufacturers who did not conform with their policies.

The complaint is a consolidation of two previous cases involving the National Standard Parts association and the Motor and Equipment Wholesale association, which were closed.

Following NRA Orders.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 17.—(AP)—R. C. Sparks, secretary of the Motor and Equipment Wholesale association of Chicago, one of five trade associations accused by the federal trade commission of forming combinations to control the market in their field, said today that "we have only been doing what they told us to do under the NRA."

Sparks asserted that "we don't think there is anything to it [the charge]. We were indicted some time ago and the case was dropped. I don't know why this new action was taken. We have only been doing what they told us to do under the NRA."

EUROPE PAYING FOR POST-WAR WILD SPENDING

Doubt That Nations Have Learned Lesson.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Seeking surcease from the economic woes that have tagged them since the close of the world war, the nations of Europe have again effected a wholesale devaluation of their currencies. Starting with France, each of the continental countries in the "gold bloc" has been brought to the realization that the game of financial make believe which they have been playing since the war cannot go on indefinitly.

The devaluation means one thing: To pay for the extravagant post-war spending and the excessive indulgence of national pride the countries of Europe have been forced again to reach into the pockets of their citizens for funds. And it is not clear whether the extremity to which they have been pushed will bring about the necessary change in dangerous economic fashions that have been followed to a greater or less degree by all countries for the last decade and a half.

Paying for Reckless Spending.

Europe is now paying, not for the war, but for the reckless spending in which it indulged in the post-war era. By repudiating debts owed to the United States, Europe transferred a considerable amount of the cost of the war, but it is now faced with new debts and the people are being forced to pay for them.

The devaluation programs in various countries have been presented to the people in different sugar coated forms so as to avoid the admission that the steps were made necessary by irresponsible financial statesmanship. Europe evidently is still unprepared to face economic realities and admit that the restoration of international trade and the abandonment of extreme economic nationalism is necessary before economic health may be restored.

Foundation for Confusion.

The statesmen who carved up Europe after the war created many new political divisions and laid the foundation for the economic confusion which has prevailed since. New countries set up national housekeeping and immediately began to defy economic law. They refused to buy manufactured goods of their neighboring countries and set about to establish manufacturing industries in their own countries.

Thus countries like Poland tried to start a motor industry. Czechoslovakia was left with 75 per cent of the industry of the old Austro-Hungarian empire and pratically nothing to do with it except to provide for a country of only 14,000,000 people. On all sides economic barriers had been erected. Austrians would not buy from Czechoslovakia nor would Hungarians.

New Refineries Not Needed.

Today the old sugar refineries of Bratislava are standing idle while a few miles away, across the Danube in Austria, new refineries are being constructed for which there is no economic justification. The Hungarians who have no marked industrial aptitude will not buy textiles made in Kosice because Kosice is in Czechoslovakia. They started a textile industry of their own—subsidized by taxpayers' money. The renowned Bohemiain glassworks can no longer sell to Bulgaria because in a flight of national pride the latter built a subsidized glass industry of its own.

Naturally this process has led to the expenditure of tremendous sums for unsound economic projects and now the people of the various countries are being called on to pay.

From the experience of the last few years it appears that such economic isolation will only lay the groundwork for a new financial debacle some time hence.

COCOA PRICES BOUND CENT PER POUND TO NEW SIX YEAR PEAK

Cocoa prices last week continued the advance which has been under way for more than a month, rising nearly one cent a pound to new six year peaks. Prices of egg futures rose ⅜ cent a dozen and closed within a small fraction of the top price of the season. Cotton, coffee, and sugar came in for more attention, and prices closed higher. Trading in cotton was extremely heavy.

Competition of low priced foreign offerings caused declines of a major fraction in prices of butter futures to new low marks since last June. Hide prices receded moderately. Grain markets were unsettled and closed slightly lower.

Closing prices for the last two weeks on a representative list of commodities, and with the high and low levels for the season, follow:

Steel Plant Rises Amid Cattails

The Republic Steel corporation's new wire mill is nearing completion at South Chicago in the midst of what was a cattail marsh four months ago. The plant, which will cost approximately a million dollars, is part of an expansion and modernization program recently launched by the company in several sections of the country.

Designed by the Austin company, the mill is being built to accommodate high speed crane, monorail, and tramrail operations. The cleaning house is built of glass block and other new acid resisting materials.

The wire drawing, process storage, galvanizing, and fence departments extend in a straight line layout for a length of 675 feet. Fourteen hundred tons of steel have been required for the project.

GIANNINI FILES NEW PLAN FOR PACIFIC MUTUAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 17.—Proposing to create two new companies to take over the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company of California, a new plan of purchase was filed today by L. M. Giannini, president of the Occidental Life Insurance company.

Under this proposal, one company would be organized to take over all of the life insurance policies of Pacifice Mutual, the other to reinsure all noncancelable accident and health policies.

The first organization would be supplied with $3,000,000 by the Trans-America bank group and the second with $1,600,000 by the same group.

Canadian Cattle Exports to U. S. Over 200,000 in '36

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 17.—Exports of cattle to the United States from Canada passed the 200,000 mark during the last week, the total in 1936 to date being officially placed today at 200,306 head, compared with 111,611 head at the same date last year. Drought was a big factor in heavier buying last year, but this year a sharp stimulus was the reduction in tariff duties under the Roosevelt trade pact effective Jan. 1, 1936.

REVIEW OF WEEK'S BUSINESS NEWS

like that. I was really independent before I organized Cities Service and I expect to make it the crowning work of my life. Today, for doing what I thought was praiseworthy, I am held up as a bad example. I am not bitter, just disappointed."

Attacks.

The Chicago speech of President Roosevelt [See Politics: Review Section] on Wednesday in which he defended the administration's record and denied the accusation of hostility to business, was followed by fresh drives from business quarters against the New Deal.

In a speech in Chicago on Thursday, Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, picked up the facile figure of speech the President had used in declaring that his administration had put the economic train back on the tracks after finding it derailed.

"The great danger to normal recovery is that today America has gone off on a siding and is changing its old policies to asking political agencies what to do," said Thorpe.

America will remain off the track to normal recovery, he said, until it "throws overboard the illusions that political agencies can stimulate business."

On Friday, Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference board, said:

"To believe we are going to find our prosperity and security at the hands of government and politicians is a grim and ghastly delusion. To lead masses of men to believe it, is a cruel deception and exploitation of the immemorial fears and desires of poor and unhappy people. . . . The state does nothing and can do nothing but take the product of labor, effort, and intelligence from some people and give it to others."

Gold.

Is the world started on its way back to an orthodox gold standard monetary system? Many observers thought so last week when, simultaneously in Washington, London, and Paris, was announced a new and supplemental agreement to the "gentlemen's monetary entente" which was entered into by the three powers immediately following the French devaluation.

It was announced that henceforth gold will be allowed to flow "freely" between the central banks of the three countries. The agreement is subject to 24 hour cancelation by any of the parties. Other nations were invited to join the entente and as the week closed the adherence of Belgium, Holland, and Switzerland, all members of the old "gold bloc" was reported to be imminent. [See Foreign: Review section.]

Exchange.

Movements in the exchange market during the week were not wide. Each nation was using the devalution fund created through devaluation to regulate the value of its currency in the international market.

On Thursday the Bank of France cut its rediscount rate to 2 per cent to show that the emergency had passed. Just prior to desertion of the gold standard the bank had hiked its rate to 5 per cent in an effort to check the flight of capital out of the country. The statement of the bank, issued on Thursday, showed that gold was once again flowing into the country.

Inflation.

Prof. Edwin W. Kemmerer, Princeton university money authority, warned in a speech in Philadelphia on Friday that the nation is heading for the "inflation rapids."

"The government of the United States," he said, "by not cutting down extravagant expenditures and imposing taxation adequate to meeting public necessities, continued to pursue a strong inflation policy."

Stocks.

The favorable news from business and industry brought a moderate advance in stock prices last week. All groups of shares participated in the rise with stocks of industrial concerns outdistancing both utility and railroad issues.

GRAIN IMPORTS ARE EXPECTED TO SET NEW RECORD

U. S. Has Received Vast Amount This Year.

Imports of grain into the United States for domestic consumption during the 1936-'37 crop year promise to establish a new all time record, official and commercial reports indicate.

As near as can be determined from the available records, there is an aggregate of approximately 60,000,000 bushels of wheat, corn, rye, and barley that either has been actually imported into this country since July 1, 1936; is held in bond at various ports, or is in transit to American and Canadian ports.

During July and August, 1936, the treasury department reported that the duty had been paid on 16,898,000 bushels of grain from other countries—including 10,771,000 bushels of wheat, 2,850,000 bushels of corn, 1,422,000 bushels of rye, and 1,855,000 bushels of barley.

Argentina Sends Much Corn.

Since Aug. 1 Argentina has shipped 27,217,000 bushels of corn to the United States and Canada. The bulk of the exports to Canada are expected to be reshipped to American ports.

The United States has become one of the best customers for surplus grain produced in Canada. The official report of the board of grain commissioners of the dominion government showed shipments from Fort William, Canada, between July 1 and Oct. 8 to American ports as follows:

To Duluth—Wheat, 10,265,000 bushels; barley, 1,885,000 bushels; rye, 100,000 bushels. To Chicago—Wheat, 1,684,000 bushels; rye, 1,468,000 bushels; barley, 1,115,000 bushels. To Milwaukee—Wheat, 60,000 bushels; rye, 100,000 bushels; barley, 1,838,000 bushels. To Detroit—Wheat, 178,000 bushels. Practically all of the grain is expected to be used for domestic consumption in the United States.

Large Imports of Butter.

Approximately 655,000 pounds of butter was imported into the United States last week, the department of agriculture reported. Included in the total was butter from Holland, Latvia, Poland, Siberia, and Cuba. An additional 109,000 pounds are expected today and tomorrow at New York, including 28,000 pounds from New Zealand.

WHEAT EASES DUE TO RAINS

More favorable weather reports from the southern hemisphere, where the new wheat crop now is in the critical period of its growth, resulted in slightly lower futures prices in leading markets yesterday. Speculative interest was light. Closing trades in wheat futures at Chicago showed net losses of about ½ cent. Winnipeg prices lost a major fraction.

Further showers were reported in Argentina and the dry sections of Australia also received some precipitation. The forecast was for additional rainfall in parts of Australia over the week-end. The Liverpool wheat market declined ⅝ to 1⅛ cents per bushel yesterday on news of the Australian rains.

Closing Prices of Futures.

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Wk. ago.	Mo. ago.
Wheat	$1.15⅝	$1.16½	$1.16⅝	$1.13⅛
Corn	.94¼	.93⅞	.95⅝	.95⅛
Oats	.40⅝	.40⅝	.41⅛	.43
Rye	.81⅞	.82¼	.82⅞	.80⅝

Corn futures held within narrow limits, easing early but advancing later on short covering to close a small fraction higher. Oats futures finished practically unchanged, and rye was slightly lower.

Trading in soy beans was fair, with the close ⅜ to ½ cent lower. Receipts of twenty cars were the largest since the new crop started to move.

A report from St. Joseph, Mo., to the Bartlett-Frazier company said the demand for corn products in Oklahoma and Colorado, which normally are supplied by domestic corn from middle western mills, now is being filled by Texas mills, which are manufacturing their products from Argentine corn.

IMPORTED PORK, COSTLY FEED HIT SWINE RAISERS

Farmers Forced to Sell Immature Stock.

While American farmers are selling pigs and immature light swine because they find corn too scarce and costly to be fed profitably even at the current high level of pork and hog prices, foreign nations are able to sell here over our tarif walls.

A new all-time record was established on imports at New York during the week ended Oct. 10 when that port in six days received 1,000,122 pounds of pork, 822,291 pounds being cooked hams in tins from Poland.

The rise in the flood of foreign product has been rapid in the last month. During the week ended Oct. 3, New York received 660,779 pounds of foreign pork and during the preceding week obtained 371,896 pounds.

American Markets Decline.

American markets for pork and hogs declined under the burden, contributing to the dilemma of hog raisers with unfinished stock who are short of corn and must dispose of their stock or pay a high price for feed. The increased run of light hogs on the Chicago market pulled the week's average weight down another 10 pounds last week, to 226 pounds, the lightest weight since March, 1935. Five weeks ago hogs averaged 266 pounds and a year ago the average was 253 pounds.

Chicago hog receipts were swelled to the largest volume in more than eight months by the selling of lights, cutting into the potential pork supply for later this winter. Lack of eastern demand for hogs in the Chicago trade was attributed to the competition of foreign product in the eastern markets.

Hogs Lower for Week.

At the close of the week hogs sold unevenly 15 cents to 50 cents under a week earlier, stock below 180 pounds showing the most loss, with pigs under 110 pounds down 75 cents to $1 in six days. The least declines were in the heaviest of the butchers and in packing sows.

Influenced by the break in hogs and increased cattle receipts, the market for steers last week slumped 25 to 50 cents, with yearling stock off 15 to 35 cents. Butcher stock fell 25 to 50 cents, beef cows showing the full loss. Calves were unchanged. The six day steer average at $9.05 was lowest in six weeks. Top yearling steers reached $10.50.

The week's lamb average at $8.60 established a new 1936 low, but the trade rallied and final quotations for fat lambs were 15 to 25 cents above the previous week's close.

Most live stock receipts yesterday were billed to packers, only a few lots being on the open market. The few sales were at steady prices.

Chicago to Have the World's Largest One Story Motor Truck Freight Terminal-Garage

BIG STRUCTURE WILL COST OVER HALF A MILLION

Lasham Cartage Company to Occupy It.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago is to have the world's largest one story motor truck freight terminal and garage, to cost well over half a million dollars. Work is under way on the structure, which will cover approximately two and a half acres of land, at Archer avenue and Quarry and Mary streets. This is said to be the largest private construction project now being built in Chicago.

B. R. LAWRENCE.

It is being erected by the Lasham Cartage company, wholly owned subsidiary of the United States Freight company, which is the property of the New York Central lines. The Lasham concern, which confines its activities within the Chicago limits, is the largest organization of its kind here, it is said, hauling 125,000,000 pounds of freight per month.

Activities to Be Consolidated.

The big terminal and garage building will front 375 feet on Archer avenue and 267 feet on both Quarry and Mary streets. In it will be housed all the activities of the Lasham Cartage company, at present scattered about the city. The general offices will use more than five thousand square feet, and the remainder will be given over to garage space for the 400 trucks and trailers, for freight storage, paint shops, wash racks, and other motor activities. Louis Russell is architect.

An unusual feature of the project is the selection of a real estate executive to assume entire supervisory responsibility for the construction job. The United States Freight company has appointed H. Edsall Olson, president of the Real Estate Corporation of Chicago, to supervise the project during construction, his task being to coördinate the work of architect, contractor, legal details, and all other elements.

Started with Three Horses.

In 1901 Joseph Lasham, then 18 years old, laid the foundation for the present big organization when he entered the cartage business with two wagons and three horses. He housed these in a small building at 313 South Market street and has remained at that address ever since, enlarging or rebuilding the structure from time to time to care for expanding business.

At the height of his horse and wagon days Lasham had a total of 189 animals. His first experiment with motorized hauling equipment was in 1905 when he purchased one truck. He gradually modernized his equipment, disposing of his last horse only two years ago.

Has Fleet of 400 Trucks.

Today the company has a fleet of more than 400 trucks and trailers, employs more than 300 persons, and is reported to do an annual business of approximately one million dollars.

About ten years ago the company was taken over by the United States Freight company of which B. R. Lawrence is vice president. He also is executive vice president and director of the Universal Carloading and Distributing company, also a subsidiary of the United States Freight company. The Universal concern, which has its headquarters in Chicago, covers the area outside of Chicago, reaching 90,000 communities throughout the country.

All local freight picked up by the Lasham company consigned to out of the city points is turned over to the Universal concern.

Candy Concern Rents Shop in Congress Theater Bldg.

Mrs. Page's Candy Shop, Inc., now operating ten units, has leased the 18 by 60 foot store at 2137 Milwaukee avenue, in the Congress theater building, on a guaranteed and percentage basis, and will open an air conditioned branch. L. J. Sheridan & Co., and F. L. Winston & Co., were brokers.

At the Realty Boards

Charles S. Wanless, president of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards, will speak before the Oak Park Real Estate board at its regular monthly meeting tomorrow evening, Oct. 19, at the Oak Park Arms hotel. His subject will be the coming state convention at Decatur, Oct. 21 to 23. Speeches will follow at 6:30 o'clock dinner to which members of all suburban real estate boards have been invited.

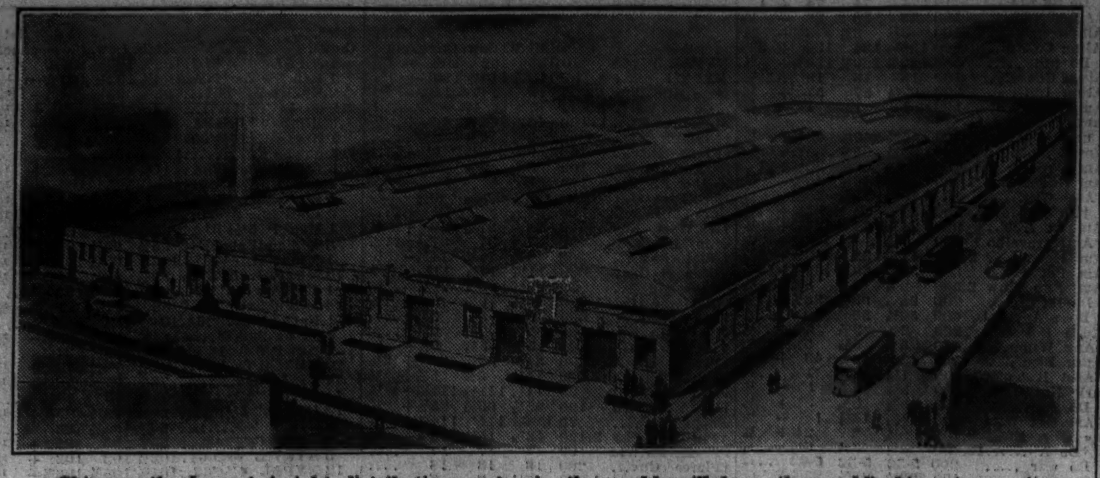
Will House Fleet of 400 Motor Trucks



Chicago, the largest freight distributing center in the world, will have the world's biggest one story motor truck freight terminal and garage. The Lasham Cartage company is now erecting a half million dollar structure at Archer avenue and Mary and Quarry streets, from plans by Architect Louis Russell. It will house all the activities of that concern now scattered about the city. The Lasham concern is a subsidiary of the United States Freight company, which in turn is owned by the New York Central lines. It operates a fleet of 400 motor trucks and trailers.

New Air Conditioned Home for North Shore

Spies Jr., a member of the jewelry manufacturing firm of Spies Brothers, is nearing completion on the east side of Thornwood lane, east of Sunset Ridge road and west of Winnetka. Melville Clarke Chatten is architect and Charles P. Knowe is contractor. It has nine rooms, three baths, and a two car garage, a library in natural gumwood, a screened porch the full length of the living room, and a recreation room with a fireplace. Exterior walls will be of brick, painted white, with roof of blue-black slate. It will be heated with oil and air conditioned.

MortgageFirm Reports New All Time High

Recording more mortgages than at any previous period during its existence of more than three-quarters of a century, Dovenmuehle, Inc., yesterday reported that its total volume of business during the first nine months of 1936 exceeded the figures for the same period of the peak year, 1929, by 112 per cent.

The figures for 1936 also exceeded those for 1935, the first year in which a substantial recovery occurred, by approximately 215 per cent.

Based on Mortgages Bought.

These figures were based on the face value of the mortgages actually purchased and recorded during the first nine months and do not take into account any future commitments that may have been outstanding at the end of the period.

"A vast improvement in those factors which determine the underlying condition of real estate generally has led to a sweeping extension of lending activities in the Chicago area during the current year," said George H. Dovenmuehle, vice president. "Our volume of new loans during the first three-quarters of 1936 exceeded that for the same period of 1929 by 176 per cent.

Calls It Healthy Sign.

"That is a healthy sign, for it shows that money again is flowing regularly into the mortgage market and that building and real estate activities are again on the upgrade. At the same time, our volume of new business for 1936 surpasses the same figures for 1935 by approximately 407 per cent.

"Extension loans, meaning the renewal of expiring mortgages already on our books, have this year exceeded the 1929 figures by 43 per cent."

ELMHURST TO SPEND $75,000 FOR THREE PARK IMPROVEMENTS

Following approval by Elmhurst voters of a $75,000 municipal bond issue for park purposes, Carl Hauber, Elmhurst architect, has completed plans for improvements in three playgrounds of that suburb. No federal funds will be used.

The largest expenditure will be $60,000 for East End park, in the northeast section of the Du Page county community. A large recreation building will be built with a 75x150 foot outdoor swimming pool and a 20 by 60 foot wading pool adjoining. In addition, tennis courts, a football field, and a baseball diamond will be laid out.

The recreation building will contain showers and rest rooms for bathers, living quarters for the park manager, a work shop, and later an auditorium on the second floor seating 400 persons. The building will be of brick and stone. Work will start shortly. The building will cost approximately $20,000, the two pools, $30,000, and the other improvements $10,000, according to Architect Hauber.

Two thousand dollars will be spent on an addition to the recreation building in Salt Creek park, a seven acre playground in the southwest part of Elmhurst. A 30 by 40 foot addition, to cost $5,000, will be built on the present recreation building in Wilder park, a five acre tract. Large fireplaces will be built in both additions.

Two Brewing Programs to Cost$800,000

Two brewing companies yesterday announced expansion programs involving a total expenditure of $800,000.

The Blatz Brewing company, for the fourth time since the repeal of prohibition, will add to its big Milwaukee plant. Its $700,000 building program calls for an erection of a seven story steel and concrete stock house, work on which already has been started.

Will Aid Employment.

To be completed not later than March 1, 1937, construction of the new unit will give employment to more than 200 men for several months, while many permanent employés will be added to handle the increased production of beer.

According to President Edward Landsberg, the expansion program will enable the company to add 300,000 barrels per year to its production.

Atlas Brewing to Modernize.

The Atlas Brewing company of Chicago is starting a $100,000 modernization program according to James R. Buck, chairman of the board. Workmen are now cleaning, staining and tuck-pointing the exterior of the Cermak road and Blue Island avenue plant.

New, high speed bottling and canning machinery is being installed and preparations are being made for renovating and remodeling the brewery inside as well as outside.

Effect Reorganization of Garfield Arms Hotel

Reorganization of the Garfield Arms hotel, 3250 Maypole avenue, has been completed by the American Bond and Mortgage bondholders' committee, according to Dayton Keith, chairman. A new five year lease has been made with Harry S. O'Neal calling for $1,000 minimum rental per month compared with the present $900. At the end of a year and a half the minimum will be raised to $1,200. The lease also provides for a percentage of gross over $4,000 per month. The lessee has agreed to spend $30,000 for modernization. New securities in the reorganized corporation, known as Garfield Arms, Inc., are ready for distribution.

AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEMS BURDEN SEWERS IN LOOP

Solution of Problem Given by City Engineer.

Chicago's downtown district has a large enough water supply to meet the ever increasing demand put upon it by the tremendous growth of air conditioning for the next ten years. On the other hand the loop's 75 year old sewer system already is inadequate to dispose of the vast amount of water used in air conditioning. These statements were made by Acting City Engineer Loran D. Gayton at the October meeting of the Illinois chapter of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers at the Hotel Sherman on Oct. 12.

Gayton outlined the history of the loop's underground water and sewer systems, and their relation to air conditioning, a problem which recently has worried both property owners and engineers.

Names Two Solutions.

He pointed out that one solution, the long discussed rebuilding of the loop sewer system, would entail an expenditure of millions of dollars, inconvenience the public with torn up streets, and might meet with opposition from the business interests in the area affected.

"The second possible solution of the problem is for those requiring air conditioning equipment so to design and install that equipment that the amount of water required from the water supply system shall be reduced to a minimum," he said.

"The installation of cooling towers, evaporative condensers or other devices that may be developed in the future, would bring this about."

Could Reduce Use of Water.

Gayton stated that a joint investigation made by the city's bureau of engineering and the Commonwealth Edison company showed that it would cost somewhat more to operate a 300 ton plant with cooling towers than without. On the other hand, a 900 ton plant would cost less to use cooling towers.

The use of cooling towers or other water conserving devices would cut the use of water in the loop during warm weather from one billion six hundred million gallons to about 5 per cent of that total, or approximately 102,000,000 gallons, Gayton said. It also would cut the income paid the city for water from $111,000 to $7,000.

It was pointed out that as Chicago has the cheapest water in the world, with an unlimited supply at hand, there was little incentive to economize in its use—unless it was shown that it would be cheaper to reduce the use of water than to spend millions on a new loop sewer system.

VAST HIGHWAY REPAIRS SET RECORD

KANE, DU PAGE POLITICAL FOES FIGHT FOR JOBS

G. O. P. Out to Keep County Control.

BY GILBERT SCHEEL.

Rival candidates for offices in Du Page and Kane counties are basing their campaigns this year entirely on state and national rather than local issues. In spite of the apparent lack of local issues, however, the campaign thus far has been one of the most vigorous in years. Both counties in the past have been strongly Republican. Even four years ago, when a Democratic landslide swept the nation the Republican organizations in these two counties of Illinois commanded most of the votes.

The Democrats were stronger four years ago, however, than in many previous elections. In this campaign, both in Du Page and Kane counties, the Democrats seem to be better organized. This has been recognized by the Republican organizations. As a result the candidates of the dominant party are making more speeches and canvassing more thoroughly than is usually deemed necessary.

Keeney Seeks Reëlection.

Keeney served as first assistant state's attorney under Chauncey Reed, before the latter was elected to congress. During those years and since he was appointed to the office of state's attorney, Keeney has tried every major criminal case in Du Page county. Before entering politics he practiced law in Naperville.

Mr. Schaefer, has practiced law in Elmhurst for the last eight years.

Rivals for Coroner.

Dr. Isherwood has held the office for the last twelve years. Many times he has been called on to aid the state's attorney's office in solving criminal cases. His aid, according to Du Page law enforcement officials has been invaluable.

Dr. Leahy has been city health officer of Elmhurst for many years and has a fine record in that position.

Robert M. Haemisch of Glen Ellyn, seeks the office of clerk of the Circuit court on the Republican ticket. He is opposed by William A. Robinson of Westmont.

Records Are Told.

Haemisch served as a deputy sherif of the county for several years. For the last six years he has served in the Circuit court clerk's office. Mr. Robinson was president of the village of Westmont from 1928 to 1934 and also served as supervisor of Downers Grove township.

In the race for county auditor Robert D. Bradlee of Naperville, Republican, is opposed by John F. Nichols of Villa Park, Democrat. Mr. Bradlee was elected auditor in 1930. Mr. Nichols, an accountant, has lived in Villa Park for many years.

Lawrence Hattendorf of Wheaton, who served in the sheriff's office for four years and in 1930 was elected recorder, is seeking reëlection on the Republican ticket. He is opposed by Frederick D. Uphoff of Belmont, Democrat.

Kane County Race.

In Kane county the candidates running for the office of state's attorney are Charles A. O'Connor, Republican, and Henry E. Keating, Democrat, both of Aurora. Both have served as masters in chancery for county courts.

The race for coroner is between Herman J. Vierka of Elgin, Republican, who has held the office since 1928, and Dr. Arnold S. Benson, Democrat, a practicing physician in Aurora for the last twenty years.

The candidates for recorder are Charles Doetschman of Aurora, Republican, and Frank M. Hanny, Democrat.

George A. Chapman of Elgin, a Republican, is seeking reëlection as auditor. He was elected in 1932. His opponent is Norman R. Gustafson of Aurora, Democrat.

Charles F. Farmiloe of Aurora, is the Republican candidate for clerk of the Circuit court, which position he now holds. His Democratic opponent is John J. James Jr. of Elgin, a leader in the county Democratic organization.

SUBURBAN SCOUT COUNCIL TO OPEN DRIVE FOR FUNDS

That it may continue to make effective its work, the West Suburban Boy Scout council, including troops in suburbs from Berwyn to Downers Grove, today will start a campaign for funds that will be conducted for one week.

Hundreds of volunteer workers will canvass suburbanites, under the leadership of a committee headed by Hal V. Clarke, Western Springs; R. J. Bonnell, La Grange, and N. M. Symonds, Hinsdale.

"Successful culmination of the campaign," said Andrew E. Fenn of Hinsdale, president of the organization, "will enable us to bring the scout program to every available boy in the territory."

Indian Summer Lures Equestriennes to Bridle Paths

There is something about the feel of an Indian summer day that lures riders back to their boots and saddles. Whether it is in answer to autumn's quickening days, an obeisance to nature's color sense, or plain appreciation of horseflesh, is debatable. Out at Rosary college in River Forest the faintest suggestion of fall's smoldering beauties brings out a host of girls to mount their favored horses. Pictured here are (left to right) Jonquil, with Miss Patricia Boolookas up; Miss Joan Walkowiak riding Century, and Miss Mary Zuehlke riding Susan. The horses are from the stables of the West Suburban Riding academy. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

TO those of us who are creatures of habit, nature's vagaries each year come as a complete surprise. This season it is lilacs and violets and Easter lilies blooming in Downers Grove and Austin gardens that are causing local consternation. Several sprays of fuchsia, lilacs and a neat handful of violets were the spoils from the garden of Mrs. Carl T. Gramm, 740 Lincoln street, Downers Grove, and the Easter lilies are growing in the backyard of Mrs. Richard Carlson, 4926 Race avenue.

Mary Suzanne Taylor newcomer to our Town is the subject this week of some vital statistics. She was born last week and her parents are the William Price Taylors, 181 Linden avenue, Oak Park. By way of description, she weighs 7 pounds, and has very blue eyes.

IN a mood of reckless abandon, Mrs. Mary Brown mixed and baked 14 fat Boston cream pies which, with coffee, were served after the play at the recent mixed bridge party held at the Village club of Western Springs. WORKERS NEAR COMPLETION OF MANY PROJECTS

West Side Shares in $17,000,000 Program

This year's street and highway improvement program for Chicago and Cook county, estimated at approximately $17,000,000 and covering more than twenty important west side street improvements, is rapidly nearing completion, according to reports issued last week by officials of the various departments involved. The program includes work of the county and state highway departments, the board of local improvements, and the park district.

The county program, estimated at $6,500,000, is partly financed with PWA funds and the program of the state highway department is assisted with federal aid in the form of PWA grants, NRA grants, and WPA work. The work carried on by the board of local improvements and the city is financed partly by PWA and, in most cases, worked by WPA.

Record Season Since 1914

Both Clayton Smith, president of the county board, and Kendrick Harger, district engineer for the state highway department, have asserted this season marks one of the heaviest in Cook county highway construction. Smith pointed out that it is the heaviest since the organization of the county highway department in 1914.

Completed west side county highway department paving projects are:

Wolf road—German Church road to 47th street.

One Near Completion.

The paving improvement of Forest avenue in Brookfield from Prairie avenue to McCormick avenue will be completed before the first of December.

State highway improvements on the west side, together with the status of each, are:

Cermak road—paving from Kenton to Crawford in Chicago, Harlem to Wesley in Berwyn, Harlem to 1st avenue in North Riverside, and 48th to 56th avenue in Cicero, entirely completed.

Grade crossing on 1st avenue at the C. B. & Q. line in Riverside, under construction, will be completed in January.

Grade crossing on Cicero avenue at the Illinois Central railroad and 33d street, under contract, will be completed in September, 1937.

Improvements in Paving.

West side paving improvements to be undertaken shortly by the board of local improvements are:

North and South Franklin street—Harrison street to Lake street.

Laramie avenue—Roosevelt road to Polk street.

North avenue—Pulaski road to Western avenue.

State street—11th street to Archer avenue.

Harrison street—Ogden avenue to State street.

Harrison street—Laramie to Kildare avenue.

Division street—Austin to Lockwood avenue.

Grand avenue—Long to Kostner avenue.

Plan Asphalt Paving.

Madison street—Canal to Wood street.

California avenue—Jackson boulevard to Roosevelt road.

Division street — Milwaukee to Western avenue.

Harrison street—Damen avenue to Rockwell street.

Kedzie avenue—Hirsch street to Washington boulevard.

The program to recondition arterial streets is being financed by PWA funds and state gas tax money.

Two west side park boulevard reconditioning projects are at present under construction as part of the WPA program. They are:

Ashland avenue—Roosevelt road to Lake street.

Washington boulevard — Halsted street to Austin avenue.

Other Streets Repaved.

Under the same program Humboldt boulevard from Armitage to North avenue will be repaved, provided that WPA funds are available.

In addition to the listed arterial streets, WPA officials report that 294 miles of city and park streets and boulevards have been resurfaced with asphalt, 6.8 miles reconditioned with brick relay, and 81 miles of unimproved streets paved with crushed stone by WPA workers this year.

Farragut High school graduates of 1936 will meet Friday evening at Shedd park to organize an alumni association for the school. The alumni membership will be open to graduates of the last three years.

CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATES HIT UNAMERICANISM

Republicans Challenge in Fifth District.

Republicans in the Fifth congressional district are aiming their campaign to shatter the political complacency of A. J. Sabath that arises out of the Democratic dean's tenure of thirty years in congress as the representative from this district.

In this sector of the lower near west side, normally Democratic, Sabath is taking it for granted he will be reëlected, the Republicans report. Firm in this conviction and relying on patronage and the belief that all Works Progress administration workers and those on relief will vote for him, the 70 year old political veteran hasn't bothered, they say, to show himself much in the district.

In contrast with Sabath's political self-satisfaction, his Republican opponent, Max Price, a garage owner, is putting on the most aggressive campaign seen in the area in many years. Price has a sound truck covering the streets and is swinging constantly throughout the territory. The Republican committeemen of the wards that comprise the district appear enthusiastic over his progress.

Unemployment Continues.

Sabath's silence has deprived the voters of answers to the questions that Price is asking. The Republican wants to know what defense Sabath has for President Roosevelt's "espousal of communistic theories of government as revealed in the New Deal program," and whether Sabath is going to part company with Al Smith of New York, whom Sabath has called a "great American." Smith is for Landon.

"Unemployment in the Fifth district continues on a large scale," Price points out. "Roosevelt promised in 1932 that he would cure the unemployment problem, but a large number in this district haven't seen a job since he took office. They have had to depend on relief."

Sabath is an ardent New Dealer, Price asserts, subserviently following the New Deal in all phases of its social and economic program. He votes for all its measures, including the "must" legislation that is ordered by the President and the brain trust, and followed their trail in attacking the United States Supreme court.

New Deal Issue.

In the Sixth district Frederick A. Virkus, the Republican nominee, is declaring that every citizen has at stake in the campaign everything he holds dear, the sanctity of his home, the welfare of his family, his standard of living, his free citizenship, his own future, and the future of his children. The campaign, he says, is a war to preserve these.

"In the final analysis the supreme issue in his campaign is the New Deal," Virkus continues in his speeches. "Roosevelt's reëlection or defeat will determine whether constitutional democracy or dictatorship shall prevail in these United States.

"We know the communists in Russia have solved their unemployment problem by regimented slavery. There cannot be private reëmployment there because private business is out of existence and the government is the only employer. We have seen, too, what happens in other dictator governed countries to religious freedom, and the freedom of the press, of speech, and of each individual to live his own life."

Brain Trusters in Control.

Virkus asserts the Washington brain trusters have been given control of the government. They are the men who have decreed that for 150 years the country has been wrong in its progress and must be made over, he says. He appeals to reason and patriotism to overcome the New Deal's efforts to breed class consciousness and hatred.

The election, the candidate says, is the most momentous since the civil war, and the makeup of the next congress will determine the vital question of whether the United States is to have constitutional, representative government or a dictatorship.

Communism is a subject mentioned in the campaign speeches of James C. Moreland, Republican nominee in the Seventh district. Communism is a menace to American religious and educational institutions, he contends. To vote Republican is to vote American, he declares.

"So well satisfied are the communists in this country with the progress of the Roosevelt administration toward communism they advocate his reëlection," Moreland says. "The communists say that in 1940 they will be far enough along their path to take over the reins of government."

Mrs. Irene A. Tomas, the Republican nominee in the Fourth district, is putting new vim into her campaign against Congressman Harry P. Beam, Democrat. One plank that she reiterates is her stand against the United States entering any league of nations as eventually it would lead this country into participation in some one else's war, she says.

Beam, who was mentioned for the United States district attorney position in Chicago before it finally was given to Michael L. Igoe, is assistant Democratic whip in congress. He has two letters, praising him for active work in congress and for his services as assistant whip written by the late Speaker Jo Byrnes and the present Speaker W. B. Bankhead. He often is called by the speaker to preside over the house, according to his colleagues.

Beam points to his vote to repeal the eighteenth amendment and for the social security legislation in inviting support. He also is reminding the voters in this stockyards district that he fought against the processing tax on hogs.

Reed Fought Crime.

Another record in the congressional campaigns is that of Congressman Chauncey W. Reed, Republican, of the Eleventh district—Will, Du Page, Kane, and McHenry counties. Reed's service for fifteen years as state's attorney of Du Page county gained him membership on a subcommittee investigating crime conditions in the District of Columbia.

Crime has decreased in that area, he says, as the result of enactment into legislation of many of the subcommittee's recommendations. Reed also had adopted a bill providing for the punishment of bribery which heretofore had not been a crime in the District of Columbia. This, in addition to his work for his Illinois district.

HINSDALE VOLUNTEERS

Hinsdale Volunteer leaders meet to plan a record Republican rally. Left, Mrs. Phyllis B. MacKinnon, chairman of the Hinsdale Volunteer unit, and right, Mrs. W. T. Bruckner, vice president of the unit.

EPIPHANY PARISH TO OBSERVE WEEK OF HOMECOMING

Special Service to Open Celebration Today.

Reminiscent of early west side elegance, the Church of Epiphany will review its own march of time this week, beginning with a festival service at 11 o'clock today. Former parishioners, representing the city's most prominent families, will return to their old worshiping place this morning for Epiphany's homecoming week, to hear the Rt. Rev. George W. Davenport, bishop of Easton, Pa., preach.

Tomorrow evening, former rectors of the parish will greet their friends at a homecoming dinner in the parish house. Among them will be the Rev. John S. Plummer, rector of St. Michael and All Angel's church, Berwyn; Dr. John Henry Hopkins, now retired, and Dr. Herbert W. Prince, rector of Holy Spirit church, Lake Forest. The irls' Friendly society will have a special program Thursday, and the young people will have a homecoming party Friday evening. Robert Nied is president of the young people's society, and Walter Sommerman is vice president.

The festivities will be climaxed Sunday, Oct. 25 with a special service at 11 o'clock, when the Rev. F. G. Deis, archdeacon of Chicago will preach. At 5 o'clock, Francis E. Aulbach, organist and choirmaster, will give a chapel recital and the day's program will be concluded with an Epiphany fellowship meeting.

Dr. Edwin J. Randall, Epiphany pastor, has appointed the Rev. Francis J. Foley, Mr. Aulbach, W. P. Vaught, Miss Jane Barron, and Mrs. W. W. Cowles as his homecoming committee.

Center of Mission Work.

Church of Epiphany in its early history was the procathedral of the Episcopal church in Chicago. After the fire of 1871, it grew along with the entire west side, and became the church home of many important families in the city's development. In recent years it has become a center of missionary and institutional work. Dr. Randall, pastor, also is superintendent of the city missions, an organization supervising work in more than thirty charitable and public institutions of the city.

MELROSE PARK C. C. WILL ERECT WELCOMING SIGN

A large sign which will welcome visitors to Melrose Park and contain a trafic message has been ordered by the Melrose Park Chamber of commerce. Thomas McBreen, president, said the group desired to place the sign, 15 feet by 8 feet, on North Western railroad property at a point where it might offer a greeting to motorists entering Melrose Park from the west.

The chamber also has ordered a sign which will direct motorists to parking lot facilities for 100 cars adjacent to Broadway, main shopping street.

Mr. McBreen said better lighting for Broadway was a matter that continued to interest the chamber. New street light reflectors, each costing but a few dollars and not calling for any further poles, are being considered.

CHECK IS PLACED ON MEMBERSHIP IN VILLAGE CLUB

Affiliates Must Reside in Western Springs.

Membership in the Village club of Western Springs was restricted to residents of the immediate community at a recent meeting of the board of directors.

The decision, it is explained, in no way affects present members who reside outside the village, nor will it affect any member in good standing who moves away from the village. The directors said the action was regrettable but necessary in a club with a membership that is steadily increasing.

New Members Approved.

Applications for membership in what is one of the most active social organizations in the western suburbs recently were approved as follows:

William T. Birch, sponsored by Paul J. Drexler and Ivan S. Denton; Hugh D. Gilman, sponsored by J. H. Cattell and Frank G. Somers; G. Mylon Liscom Jr., sponsored by Paul J. Drexler and H. Leading merchants and manufacturers in the community subscribed $200,000 capital stock for the new bank. William H. Regenery, president of the West Shade Cloth company is president and Samuel Shuster, vice president. William B. Gardner is assistant cashier.

TEACHERS ADDED TO FILL PROVISO STAF VACANCIES

Four New Instructors at High School.

In addition to the changes in the Proviso High school teaching staf announced at the opening of the school year, a number of recent changes have taken place.

Miss Charlotte Dege, a graduate of Coe college, Cedar Rapids, Ia., with an M. A. degree from the University of Iowa and with six years of high school teaching experience at Stanwood, Ia., has been added to the staf of the history department to take the place left vacant by the resignation of W. J. Brownrigg. Mr. Brownrigg resigned to accept a position as critic teacher at Ypsilanti Teachers college, Ypsilanti, Mich.

New Stenographic Teacher.

The resignation of Miss Marguerite LeMar, a new member of the stenographic department, created an unexpected vacancy which has been filled by the employment of Miss Elizabeth Schenfeldt, who is a graduate of Illinois State Normal college and possesses an M. A. degree from the University of Illinois.

Miss Schenfeldt has had nine years high school teaching experience in addition to four summers of work on the Illinois State Normal university summer school staf. Just previous to coming to Chicago, she was employed in personnel research by the Chicago Mail Order company. Miss LaMar, whom she succeeds, went to Kent State college, Kent, O., as instructor in shorthand theory and secretarial work.

Joins Library Staf.

Miss Viola Fried succeeds John Carter as assistant librarian. Having received her B. A. from the University of Wisconsin, Miss Fried took a year of training in the Wisconsin library school. Following three years high school teaching, she became full time librarian of the Cudahy, Wis., High school and spent the last year doing general public library work in the Kellogg Public library, Green Bay, Wis. Mr. Carter, whom she succeeds, is continuing his studies for a Ph. D. at the University of Chicago.

Other changes not previously announced are the promotion of Miss Grace McAuley to a full time teaching position in the science department and the return of Miss Florence Scott and Miss Ruth Neal as members of the English department.

DOWNERS GROVE PUPILS TO PLAY 'SMILIN' THROUGH'

High School Show Will Be Nov. 12 and 13.

"Smilin' Through," popular vehicle of stage and screen, will be presented as an all-school play, Nov. 12 and 13, at the Downers Grove Community High school.

Graduates Pass Tests.

Keeping track of its graduates, the school learns that Miss Betty Jayne Staats, a freshman at the University of Illinois, recently passed two English tests that excused her from a year of freshman English. Miss Staats revealed her literary talents while a student at Downers. Word also comes that Miss Virginia Tholin has placed in the highest group in freshman English and is now taking creative writing.

After a busy rush week, Miss Gen Haller has been pledged to Sigma Alpha Iota sorority of Illinois Wesleyan university, where she is majoring in music.

Alumni Find Jobs.

A number of last year's graduates at Downers Grove have found employment in the village, and a still larger number are employed in Chicago.

In choosing cheer leaders at the school this fall, the method used at amateur programs was tried out, and those who received the most applause in assembly were Jack Powers, Muriel Friis, Alice Spangler, and Marjorie Barnum.

Amitie Social Club.

Amitie Social club will hold its fourth annual dance Friday evening, Oct. 30, at Herzl hall, 1335 North California avenue. Miss Helen Neuhauser, 3520 West Potomac avenue, is dance chairman.

PUBLIC LIBRARY IN RIVER FOREST IS REDECORATED

A redecorated interior of the River Forest public library greets patrons this fall. Venetian blinds have been added to the windows, woodwork has been painted, marble cleaned, and the cork panels of the ceiling have been refinished. The structure of modified Gothic architecture, located in the center of the village, recently was redecorated for the first time since its construction in 1929.

Recently the library was accorded its second allotment of funds for the purchase of books and periodicals from the $600,000 aid fund for free tax supported Illinois libraries.

Expenditures from the fund last year were used to supplement the library's general book collection, both the children's and the adults'. The Catholic encyclopedia and a number of volumes of reference were added. The library is known for its close cooperation with schools of the community, public and parochial.

Miss Gladys Allison said "Gone with the Wind" was the novel most in demand this season. She said, however, that there was a noticeable trend toward travel and biography as opposed to fiction.

The library has 4,847 registered borrowers, 1,604 of whom are children. The last annual report showed 71,155 volumes were borrowed from the library, making the circulation eight per capita.

Of this circulation 40,888 were books for adults, and 30,267 for juveniles. Of the juvenile circulation 7,819 books were borrowed from two school stations maintained by the library.

Forty per cent of the adult books were nonfiction. Volumes in the library include 10,106 books for adults and 4,897 for juveniles.

"Then and Now" Sponsor Commended.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Thumbnail notations on some of the newer offerings of the airways:

THEN AND NOW—A dramatic and musical show recreating historical highlights of the last 50 years [the sponsor this year is celebrating a Golden Jubilee]. As the title indicates incidents of other days are placed in contrast with those of today. With the current radio trend toward Hollywood this Chicago sponsor is to be congratulated for putting on this radio program in its home town, forcing the star guest performers to come here and utilizing the wealth of dramatic talent and musicians available here for the backbone of the show.

This program started out unusually ambitiously with such celebrities as Walter Hampden, Fred Stone, Constance Bennett, Walter Huston, Al Jolson, and Marion Claire but now seems to be using figures of lesser stature. WBBM-CBS at 10 Thursday.

GABRIEL HEATTER—A commentator who is informed and informal. Unlike several other editorialists he avoids that tone of finality and keeps away from dictatorial pronouncements. W-G-N-MBS 9 p. m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday.

WE, THE PEOPLE—An informal show "starring the American public," according to its press agent, but actually showing off such items as marrying mayors, midgets, men with diamond studded teeth, girls that cry for a living, and many another oddity. WENR-NBC, 5 p. m. Sunday.

FAMOUS JURY TRIALS—Studio recreations of famous trials but omitting the real names of the persons involved and altering the details slightly now and then. This practice is irritating. Readers wouldn't like it much if newspapers resorted to such devices when they serve up famous trials in their Sunday feature sections. W-G-N-Mutual, 10 p. m. Mondays.

TIME FLIES — Featuring Frank Hawks' air adventures this show sponsored by a watch maker could not be better named. The commercials are "gagged in" in this briskly paced show. Nancy Noland does the singing and you should know her better before the year is over. Allan Joslyn and Milt Rettenberg's orchestra round out this half hour of entertainment. W-G-N-Mutual 8 p. m. Friday.

Room for Improvements.

FAMOUS PLAYERS GUILD—Ethel Barrymore in a double time—yea, triple time—reading of lines of her former successes compressed into 28 minutes radio offerings. Often unintelligible. WENR-NBC, 8:30 Wednesday.

THE WONDER SHOW — Oldtime mellerdramas put on with great gusto by Orson Welles as The Great McCoy and an all star cast of actors. A laugh in every line including the commercials. W-G-N-MBS, 9, Sundays.

OPEN HOUSE—Nelson Eddy, the robustious baritone, and Francia White, a fine soprano, with Josef Pasternack's orchestra in a half hour of familiar and favorite melodies. Ought to have a high listener rating soon. WBBM-CBS, 8, Sundays.

Comedy Find of the Year.

FRED ASTAIRE'S REVUE — Featuring the movie idol as a many faceted entertainer—master of ceremonies, dancer, pianist, composer, singer, stooge, and so on, and the stumblingly funny Charlie Butterworth who seems likely to emerge as the radio comedy find of the year. For diverting light music Johnny Green provides just about the slickest on this show. WMAQ-NBC, 9:30 p. m. Tuesday.

GOOD WILL COURT—Picked by a coffee maker as a logical successor to Maj. Bowes' Amateurs after a buildup on Mutual, this show in which the poor tell their troubles to a judge, seems to have lost some of its dramatic appeal after undergoing an NBC dehorning process. WMAQ-NBC, 8 p. m. Sundays.

OUR NEIGHBORS—Jerry Belcher would have you believe that he has finally planted the microphone in the living room so that you may eavesdrop on what your neighbor has to say about you. But your neighbor knows what its all about and doesn't say anything more exciting on this Sunday program than he does during the week on those "man on the street" broadcasts. WENR-NBC, 3:30, Sunday.

Snappy Collegiate Rhythm.

FOOTBALL REVUE — Thundering Ed Thorgerson informing you for the umpty-umpth time what happened on the nation's gridirons in the afternoon while Kay Kyser and his crew—Art Wright, Bill Stoker, Virginia Sims, Sully Mason, Mern Bogue, and Bobby Guy, provide a setting of collegiate rhythm and nifty glee club work. WBBM-CBS, 8:30, Saturday.

THE SPEEDSHOW—Whether it's so called because of the staccato clip of Floyd Gibbons' talk of lately viewed Spanish atrocities, the rippling of Vincent Lopez's fingers on the piano, or the pace possible by buying one of the sponsor's car we don't know. Whatever the reason it's the Speedshow. WBBM-CBS, 8:30, Saturday.

REVUE DE PAREE — An oddly named show since it is mainly Fannie Brice doing her Baby Snooks act. It can't last long without something additional. WLS-NBC, 8, Wednesday.

SATURDAY EVENING SERENADE—Sponsor believes in that ancient formula of good music as presented by a soprano, tenor, chorus and orchestra. And an excellent one it turns out to be when the girl is Mary Eastman, the man Bill Perry, the choral group the Cote and Rappaport Modern choir and the orchestra Gus Haenschen's. They present the kind of music everybody likes. This program is adequate reason for staying in Saturday night. WBBM-CBS, 9:30, Saturday.

AT PRYOR'S OPENING

AL KAVELIN TO RETURN TO W-G-N FRIDAY EVENING

Two Vocalists Will Be Heard with Him.

Al Kavelin and his dance orchestra will open their fall engagement in the Mayfair room at the Blackstone hotel next Friday evening and will be heard on a nightly series of broadcasts over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system.

Returning with Kavelin's orchestra are his soloists, Carmen, brilliant pianist, and Virginia Gilchrist, girl vocalist. Miss Gilchrist is the maestro's wife.

Kavelin's orchestra was one of Chicago's favorites last season. With Kavelin will be also Señorita Corrina Mura, the Castilian beauty who was the sensation at the Savoy-Plaza last season. Miss Mura is a songstress of great ability and plays her own accompaniment on the guitar. She is to be heard on some of Kavelin's broadcasts. Also featured at the Mayfair room will be the dance team, Georges and Jalna.

Kavelin was educated at the Royal Verdi Academy of Music in Milan, Italy. He was a highly successful concert artist both in Italy and this country before he sidetracked classical music to direct a dance orchestra.

Wake Up and Sing!

"Wake Up and Sing," a new 15 minute musical program, will be heard over W-G-N at 7 a. m. every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings beginning tomorrow.

Campaign Headquarters Swamped

Lum Edwards (Chet Lauck), at the left, points out the ruins of what used to be Lum 'n' Abner's office but is now the headquarters of the "Demopublican" party. Lum, the party nominee for President, is helping dispatch 100,000 campaign buttons. Abner (Norris Goff), to the rear, is getting a kick out of the situation while the staf is busy answering listeners' requests for buttons.

"LEND ME YOUR SKIN FOR 3 DAYS"

Says LADY ESTHER

"I Will Show You New Clearness, New Smoothness, New Fineness of Texture!"

Have you a skin that gives you trouble? Do blackheads, enlarged pores and dry patches persist in spite of what you do?

Then put your skin in my hands for three days. In other words, give your skin the care that I direct for that time.

First of all, give up your present cleansing methods. Give up all preparations you use on your face. That includes everything except face powder. Even water!

Use Only One Thing for 3 Days!

Use only Lady Esther Face Cream for three days. (I will supply you with cream enough for a week.)

For three days, every morning and night, cleanse your skin with Lady Esther Face Cream. Follow the directions that come with the cream I send you.

At the end of three days examine your skin closely. Note how the blackheads have begun to disappear. Mark how the enlarged pores have come down in size.

Observe, too, how smooth and soft your skin has become. Feel it with your fingers. Note an absence of those dry patches.

Visible Results

Three days isn't a long time, but even in that short space, you will see such a difference in your skin as to amaze you. You can readily see how much you could accomplish for your skin if you continue the use of the cream.

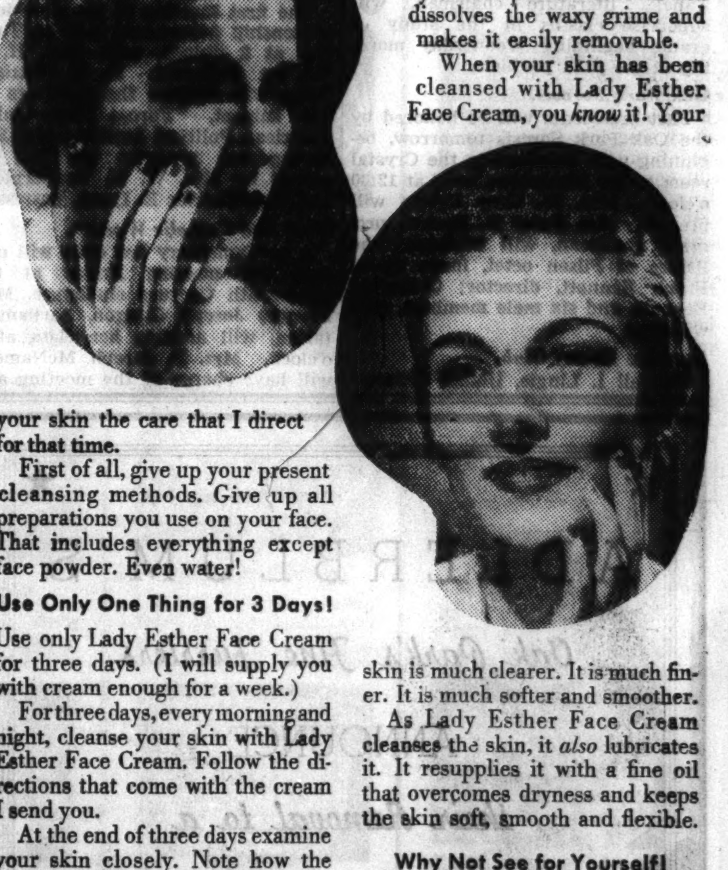
Lady Esther Face Cream is no miracle performer. It can't transform your skin overnight. But it is so efficient a beauty treatment that three days' use of it will make a noticeable difference in your skin.

Definitely Helpful!

Lady Esther Face Cream is a penetrating face cream. It works its way into the pores. It loosens and dissolves the waxy grime and makes it easily removable.

When your skin has been cleansed with Lady Esther Face Cream, you know it! Your skin is much clearer. It is much finer. It is much softer and smoother.

As Lady Esther Face Cream cleanses the skin, it also lubricates it. It resupplies it with a fine oil that overcomes dryness and keeps the skin soft, smooth and flexible.



Why Not See for Yourself!

Why not make the three days' test of Lady Esther Face Cream? It costs you [illegible] a liberal supply of the cream.

In three days you will see how the use of Lady Esther Face Cream will give you a skin you will be proud of. Mail the coupon today.

(You can paste this on a penny postcard.) (60) FREE

WEST SIDE P.-T. A. COUNCIL TO HAVE LEADERS' SCHOOL

Session Among Features of Special Week.

In acknowledgment of the service of parent-teacher associations throughout the state to education and public welfare, Gov. Horner has proclaimed the week beginning tomorrow as parent-teacher week. Local organizations have chosen the period for special membership drives, and have urged parents to take this opportunity to visit public schools and discuss mutual educational problems with the teachers of their children.

The West Side council, with Mrs. George H. Turner presiding, will conduct a school of instructions for the members of twenty-six associations comprising the council Thursday in the Gregory school, 3713 Polk street. The primary purpose of the school will be a clearing house for congress units to assist in increasing their capacity for service. Council methods of work and suggestions on procedure will be given. Mrs. Charles Clauss is district director of the council.

A reception for parents and teachers will occupy members at Tilton P.-T. A's first meeting Tuesday in the school assembly. Several musical selections and choral poetry by pupils will be presented as part of the program. Mrs. J. D. Sigal, program chairman for Tilton, has planned the year's program around the theme of character growth in school and home. Mrs. June Radloff is president of the association, and Mrs. Edward Chill is first vice president and membership chairman.

Mrs. H. C. Haase will preside at the first meeting of the Harrison High School P.-T. A., opening its yearly program tomorrow in the social room. PROVISO TO USE ASSEMBLIES AS EDUCATION AID

Realizing high school assemblies afford valuable opportunity for student training through participation in programs and believing that among Proviso's 3,700 students there is sufficient talent to provide interesting and instructive programs without calling in professionals, Supt. E. R. Sifert has appointed an assembly committee charged with accomplishing those ends.

This committee, having E. W. Stubbs, senior class sponsor, as chairman, and with R. Lee Osburn, head of the music department; Miss Cecil Stark, head dramatic coach, and Miss Pauline Groessman and Harold Graves, class counselors, as members, will have charge of all assemblies.

It will be the committee's responsibility to see that all parts of the program are educationally justifiable and that each part has been prepared properly for presentation. It will be the aim of the committee to afford an opportunity to participate in the programs to as many students as are qualified.

PUPILS' PARENTS FAVOR ELMHURST REPORT LETTER

Old System Abandoned for Six Grades.

A diagnostic report letter has been substituted for the formal report card in grades from one to six in Elmhurst elementary schools, and the most recent report of the Continuous Self Survey issued from the office of Supt. V. L. Beggs reveals that the innovation is approved by the majority of parents.

V. L. BEGGS.

The survey concerning the manner in which parents are made acquainted with the progress of children at school is but one phase of the fifth annual report of the continuous self survey instituted in 1931 in the Elmhurst schools.

The 1935-'36 report covers 171 pages of statistics and deductions in summarizing the year's program in the light of earlier practices.

Survey In Demand.

Calls for a copy of the survey have come from schools in every state, and requests include those from the San Francisco public library, and the University of Chicago and Northwestern university administrative classes.

Initiation of the diagnostic report letter in place of the familiar report card was a gradual one, according to the survey. Knowing the variability of marks, no matter how conscientiously prepared, and the penalty often attached to marks on report cards, the administration decided in 1929 to issue no report cards in grade one, and if the procedure proved satisfactory, to continue the plan throughout the grades.

Comments from parents were so favorable that the new method of reporting progress was extended to the sixth grade a year ago. Last year, a combination report card and diagnostic letter was initiated in the junior high school.

Majority Favors Letter.

These diagnostic letters are said to have been of great value in helping teachers, as well as parents, understand the personality problems of the boys and girls.

This year, after the plan had been in operation for six years, a comprehensive survey was taken, and a detailed questionnaire submitted to all parents. Responses were received from 883 families.

A total of 85.9 per cent of parents of children in grades from one to six, stated their preference for the diagnostic letter. The report card was preferred by 14.1 per cent of the parents.

Answering the query as to how often the letter should be issued, 64.8 per cent of the parents preferred four times a year; 1.3 per cent, twice a year; 1.7 per cent, three times a year, and 32.2 per cent, once a month.

32 Nationalities Listed.

Thirty-two nationalities are represented by pupils in the Elmhurst schools. In each school, the four nationalities, American, German, Swedish, and English, predominate. The distribution of languages spoken in the home remains about the same as that of the two previous surveys. Fourteen languages are spoken in the homes of Elmhurst, with English predominating in 97.44 of the homes this year, contrasted with 95.75 of the homes during 1932-'33.

The conclusions drawn from the summary indicate that the children of the Elmhurst elementary schools are singularly free from language handicaps, and from disadvantages arising from different national ideals, customs, or traditions.

Drive faults away with rousing UNDER SKIN Treatment

WHEN blackheads and blemishes begin to dot your skin—good-by to good looks! The same with coarse pores. People say, "She'd be pretty if —"

Don't let them! Learn how to clear those faults away.

Blackheads come when little glands in your underskin function poorly. Pores clog. Blemishes follow. Soon pores are coarse.

But you can rouse that faulty underskin. Start glands functioning healthily again—with Pond's invigorating "deep-skin" treatments.

Every night, apply Pond's Cold Cream. Its specially processed fine oils go deep, loosen dirt and make-up. Wipe it all off. Now more Pond's Cold Cream. Pat it in briskly. Feel the blood tingling. Your skin feels toned already!

In the morning, repeat this treatment. Your skin is smooth for powder.

Keep this up regularly. As blackheads soften, press them out. Soon they are fewer. Blemishes disappear. Pores grow finer. How much prettier you look!

DINNER TO OPEN CHEST CAMPAIGN IN TWO SUBURBS

Drive for $110,000 Will Begin Thursday.

More than 1,000 men and women workers are expected to be present Thursday night at the dinner meeting starting the Oak Park and River Forest Community Chest campaign, which has $110,000 for a total objective. The dinner meeting will be held in the high school building and will start at 6:30 o'clock.

GILBERT ALEXANDER. [Karmen-Winger Studios.]

Agencies participating in the chest are Family Welfare association of Oak Park, River Forest Family Welfare, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Young Men's Christian association, American Red Cross, West Suburban Community Service guild, Oak Park Hospital auxiliary, Oak Park Infant Welfare station, Hephzibah home, and the Oak Park and River Forest Day nursery.

Alexander Again Leader.

The general chairman of the solicitation campaign again this year will be Gilbert Alexander, who headed the initial local effort last year that marked a high record of achievement in the number of pledges secured, the number of workers participating, and the results obtained.

Harold H. Rockwell, chairman of the budget reviewing committee of the chest, said that the goal of $110,000 was not a pleasant figure picked out of the air or taken out of the hat.

"It is the aggregate of amounts granted to the 11 participating agencies by the committee after months of careful work and an exhaustive study of the program and budget of each individual agency," he said.

Cites Integrity of Work.

"The character of the representative men and women from Oak Park and River Forest who serve on the board of governors of the Community Chest is the best guarantee of the integrity and efficiency of the drive and the careful management of funds submitted to its care."

E. J. Bullock is chairman of the big gifts solicitation committee, and Mrs. Simpson Rogers Jr., of the advertising and publicity committee.

The personnel of the board of governors of the Chest is G. W. Hales, chairman; Gilbert Alexander, vice chairman; Thomas P. Carpenter, secretary; and F. W. Mathison, treasurer.

Leaders of Agencies.

Agency representatives are G. W. Hales, Oak Park Family welfare; the Rev. C. A. Spaulding, River Forest Family welfare; Hiram T. Beard, Boy Scouts; Earl B. Wilkinson, Girl Scouts; E. L. Hartig, Y. M. C. A.; Mrs. R. E. Cantwell Jr., Infant welfare; Mrs. Thomas H. Heneage, Hephzibah home; Mrs. Frank S. Collins, Oak Park and River Forest Day nursery; Lester B. McAllister, American Red Cross; Mrs. J. S. Anderson, West Suburban Community Service guild; and Dr. John Peters, Oak Park Hospital auxiliary.

Chamber of Commerce representatives are J. P. Smart, Oak Park; and Roy F. Nix, River Forest.

The plan of the campaign again this year will organize residence sections of Oak Park and River Forest, for the most part by school districts, with representative local citizens taking the lead in each school district.

Chairmen of Districts.

District chairmen are: North Oak Park residence, Rex MacKenzie; South Oak Park residence, Percy W. Stephens; Oak Park business, Harry L. Judd; and River Forest, Ernest W. Badenoch.

High school and grammar school authorities are credited with splendid coöperation in the campaign. Discussions of how cities grow and of factors that make for good citizenship and clean municipal government, have been considered in current events and civics classes, as well as the problems of the relief and social service agencies in the community.

The art department of the high school also has coöperated by encouraging students to submit drawings for Community Chest posters which will be appraised by a group of competent judges. Those awarded the highest number of points will be hung for display in local shop windows.

Representatives of the contributing public are Mrs. W. M. Bryant, E. J. Bullock, Otto C. Doering, H. E. Fritschel, George S. Hamilton, Garrett F. Larkin, Mrs. Irwin Maze, Mrs. John C. Phelps, Harold H. Rockwell, and Gordon D. Shorney.

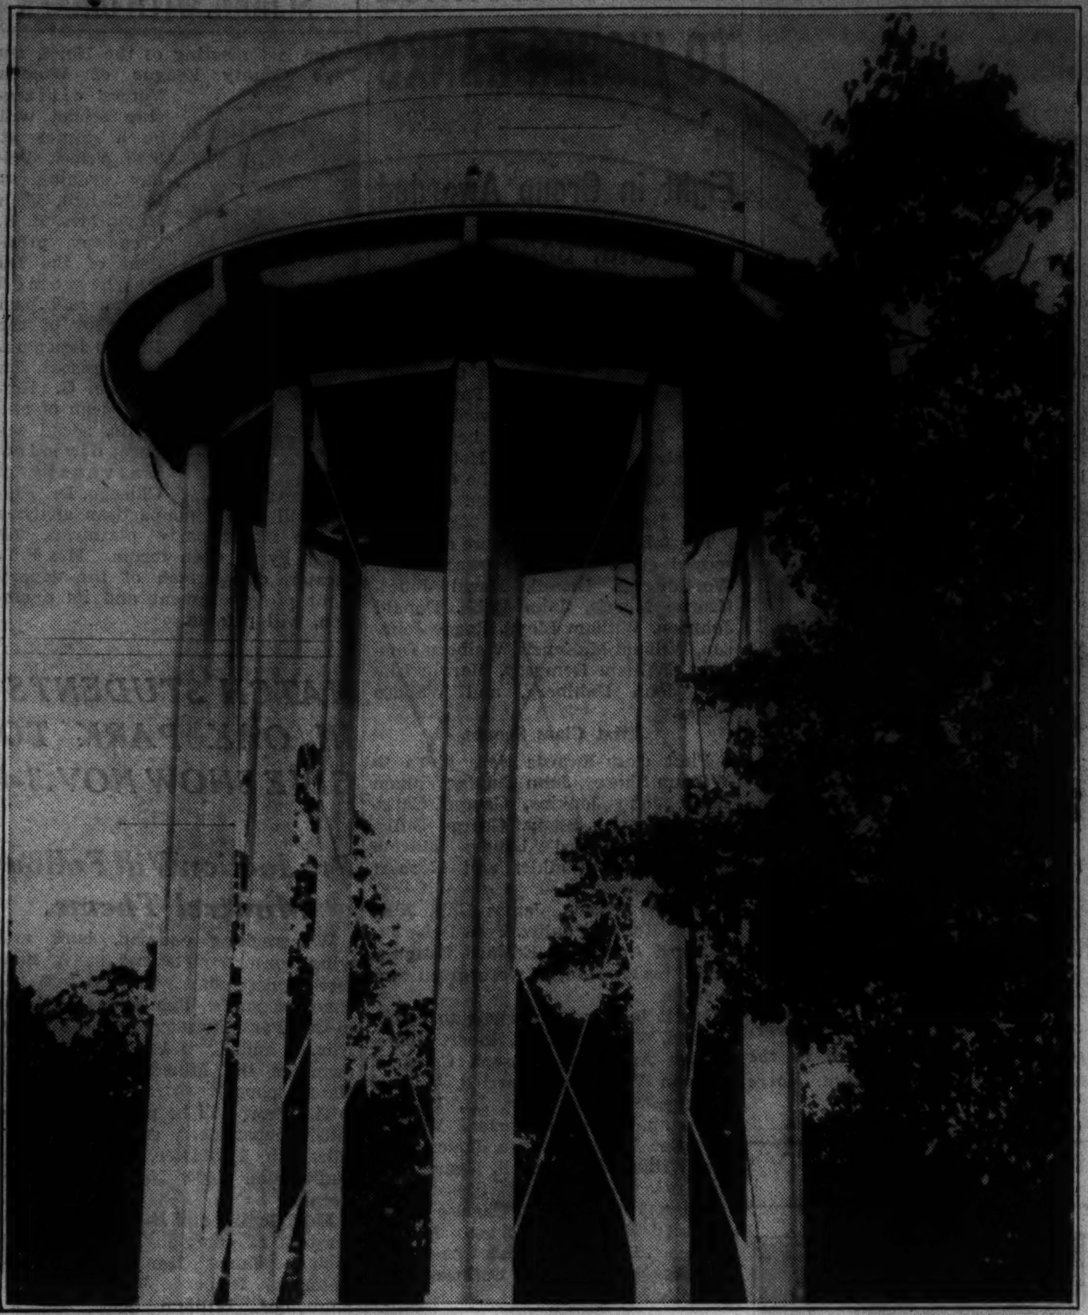
WPA Workers Build Unusual Water Tank—Cavalry Company Totes Tommy Guns in Fort Knox Review



WPA GOES MODERNISTIC—This is not, the photographer assures us, a piece of futuristic art. It's a very utilitarian water tank erected at Decatur, Ga., a suburb of Atlanta, by laborers under the Works Progress administration. He adds that there are only two others like it in the south, which probably is true. [Acme Photo.]

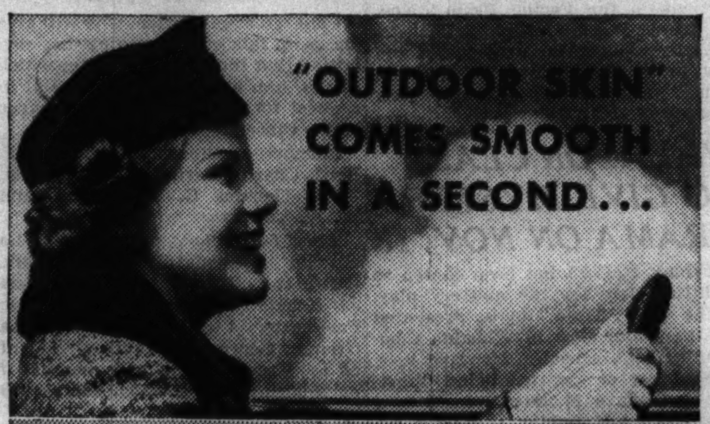
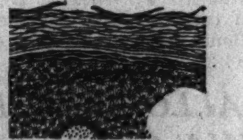
Flaky Bits MELT OFF EASILY



A SWELL TIME in the out of doors is no reason for not having even better times when you've a swanky evening date.

There's a simple way popular girls know—to get rid of all those little flaky bits that spoil skin for make-up. A special cream that actually melts them off in half a second!



Why skin feels "flaky"
Dead cells on the top of your skin are dried out by exposure, flake off. You can melt them smooth.

Here's how a distinguished dermatologist explains it:

"Exposure hastens the drying out of surface skin cells. They shrink, scuff loose. The skin feels harsh. These particles can be melted away instantly with a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream). Then the smooth, underlying cells appear."

Before make-up—Right after cleansing, put on a film of Pond's Vanishing Cream. It smooths away every flaky bit. Now powder and rouge go on evenly. Stay for hours.

Overnight—Apply Pond's Vanishing Cream after your nightly cleansing. Leave it on. As you sleep, your skin gets softer.

ULTRAMODERN DESIGN USED IN CAPE COD HOME

Concrete Cinder Walls Are Painted White.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

A new and interesting type of construction has been employed in the building of this charming five room Cape Cod home. Its walls are of concrete cinder masonry in ashlar pattern, a pattern which is faintly and agreeably visible through two coats of ivory cement paint.

Newer than this exterior treatment of the walls, however, is the use of insulated ashlar blocks for the interior walls!

The first floor inside walls are finished with rigid insulation board, furred out from the concrete blocks. The natural finish of the boards is kept a soft tan shade and textured to resemble an oatmeal water paper.

Entire Attic Insulated.

On the second floor the wall treatment is a more radical departure from the conventional. Granulated material has been poured into the core of the second story blocks to increase their insulating value. The only treatment given these blocks is paint. Therefore, the wall is reasonably priced. By way of still further protection, the entire attic is completely insulated to insure minimum heat loss in winter and to keep out the summer heat.

Augmenting the fireproof features of this home are the concrete first and second floors and the terrazzo finished concrete stairs. [Surprisingly quiet stairs!]

The floors are carpeted downstairs and upstairs, except in rooms where greater utility requires linoleum, such as in the kitchen and the bathroom. The boys' bedroom also is covered with linoleum.

Another interesting point in the construction of this home, and also an economical point, is the fact that all the first floor joists, of pre-cast concrete, are left exposed to give a higher ceiling effect. The added economy is effected by eliminating the need for a finished, flat ceiling. In the basement recreation room, which has a natural wood burning fireplace, there are the same exposed joists, or ceiling beams.

The carefully laid out floor plan provides a living room the width of the house, with a dining alcove set off to the side, joining the kitchen. On the first floor there also is a study which can be used as an extra bedroom, if desired. This study is finished in random width knotty pine. Here the pre-cast joists which make up the beamed ceiling are painted a soft tan to match the paneled pine walls.

The doors and trim throughout the house are bone white. As the floor plan shows, there is a lavatory on the first floor with a built-in wardrobe in case the library adjacent to it should ever be used as a bedroom.

Two Fireplaces in House.

There are two fireplaces in the house. The fireplace in the living room is built into a section of exposed concrete masonry which contrasts with the smooth finish of the other walls. At the right, it has a set-in bookshelf which helps balance the arch of the dining alcove.

The kitchen is small, compact, and beautifully planned from a standpoint of ultra-efficiency. It has a double tray sink with solid maple counters and built-in lighting over the sink. The walls are of a soft gray, finely finished wall board with aluminum striping. The surface of these walls is maintained by waxing. The pre-cast concrete first floor joists, which make up the beamed ceiling, are painted pearl gray in the kitchen to harmonize with the walls.

Home Is Air Conditioned.

The garage, separate from the house, will be constructed later of concrete cinder masonry units, laid in the same ashlar pattern as the exterior walls of the house.

Conditioned heat is provided by a warm air heating system, gas fueled. Winter air conditioning has been given to the house.

Because of the excellent insulating qualities of this type of construction, the architect feels that Mr. Woodworth can heat his house this winter, with gas, at a cost that will not exceed $90. The house has some 21,000 cubic feet, and has been built at an approximate cost of 35 cents a cubic foot.

Mrs. Bargelt will speak over W-G-N next Wednesday at 2:15 p. m.

The first orders of promotion in the St. Mel R. O. T. C. were issued last week by Capt. George W. Busbey, instructor of the unit, to meet the need for officers in the four battalions of the regiment. Other promotions to commissioned and noncommissioned posts will be made at the conclusion of competitions now in progress, Capt. Busbey said.

HONOR MILITARY GROUPS PLEDGE CHICAGO CADETS

Thirteen Chicago cadet officers in the University of Illinois R. O. T. C. brigade were recently pledged to membership in Scabbard and Blade, and Phalanx, national honorary military fraternities. A total of 62 men in the unit were taken into the organizations.

Among the Chicago cadets accorded the Phalanx pledges were Daniel Iannela, 524 North Cicero avenue; Alfred Harris, 805 Independence boulevard; David Keith, 111 West Monroe street; D. C. Player, R. R. 1, West Chicago, and Philip Moskowitz, 921 North Harding avenue.

Scabbard and Blade, which was founded in 1905, has 82 chapters throughout the country; Phalanx, organized in 1926, has ten. Instruction in military training at the University of Illinois is given by a staf of 25 regular army officers, under the command of Col. Fred R. Brown. Total enrollment in the brigade is 4,208.

GLENBARD HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY ADDS 170 BOOKS

5,000 Volumes Are on Hand for Reference.

Library facilities at Glenbard High school were increased by the addition of 170 books placed on the shelves during the summer. This brings the approximate number of volumes to 5,000, according to Miss Blanche Aust, librarian.

An adventure story, "Alone Across the Top of the World," by David Irwin, is included in the list. Among Glenbard teachers, who journeyed last summer in foreign lands and are able to impart personal stories of adventure is Miss Martha Pinney, instructor in algebra.

Writes Events of Trip.

Miss Pinney kept a log of her trip in which she set down her impressions of a typhoon on the China sea and of her visit to the schools in Tokio. She found that gymnastics were stressed in Japanese schools, along with vocational studies. Pupils learn to write with brush and ink by drawing their characters upon large scrolls placed on the floor.

Interesting facts recently brougnt out at Glenbard reveal that during his nineteen years as principal, John L. Biester has seen the enrollment rise from 120 pupils in 1918 to 1,125 in 1934.

It has been demonstrated that should fire break out in the building the school could be cleared of pupils in 1 minute and 40 seconds.

Lake Deeded to Parks.

The land on which Glenbard is situated, including the lake, originally cost $8,000, but the lake was later sold back to the Glen Ellyn park district for $1.

Homecoming at Elmhurst College to Close Today

Alumni day, to be observed at a service in St. Peter's church, today will bring to a close the three day program of the 14th annual homecoming celebration at Elmhurst college. The Rev. R. C. Stanger of Detroit will preach.

—Marshall—

Cadet First Lieutenant Edward Shulgan was elected president of the Marshall Officers' club at the orgaization's first meeting of the year. Assisting Lieut. Shulgan will be Cadet Second Lieutenant Merton Lawry, vice president; Cadet Second Lieutenant Jerome Czypinski, treasurer; Cadet Sergeant Major Marvin Fisher, secretary, and Cadet Second Lieutenant James Williams, sergeant at arms. Meetings will be held each Wednesday for the remainder of the semester, the new president announced.

—Lane—

The Lane band, under the direction of Capt. Gardner P. Huff, is rehersing for its semi-annual concert, which will be given in the school auditorium in November. The band is playing at Lane football games during the season. Noncommissioned band officers' tests have been given, but promotions have not yet been announced. Cadet First Sergeant Robert Howley is reported the leading contender for the unit's recruiting medal.

GRADUATES JOIN SOCIAL CLUB AT GLENBARD HIGH

A monthly dance with attendance limited to students and recent graduates of Glenbard High school is the sole activity planned by the recently organized Di-Kai-Os club, made up of young men of Lombard and Glen Ellyn.

Future events arranged by the club include a Thanksgiving dance and a homecoming dance during the Christmas holidays.

Organizers of the club are Fred Wardle, Lee Williams, Claude Bollman, and Arthur Zielke. On the executive committee are three Glenbard graduates, Don Charlesworth, Arthur Zielke, and John Biester, and three present students at the school, Scott Runge, Willis Bremner, and Gordon Bingham.

CATHOLICS WILL ESTABLISH NEW CHINA MISSION

Three Leaders to Depart from Lisle.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Acting in accordance with the encyclical of Pope Pius XI. on promoting Catholic missions, the first three emissaries of the Benedictine order for the new foundation at Kaifeng, capital of Honan province in China, will receive itinerary benediction on Tuesday in the abbey chapel of St. Procopius at Lisle, pronounced by the Rt. Rev. Abbot Valentine Kohlbeck.

THE RT. REV. VALENTINE KOHLBECK.

The Very Rev. Cosmas Vesely, pastor of St. Procopius parish, 18th and Allport streets, chaplain of the district alliance of Czech Catholics and for 15 years rector of St. Procopius college, will be the superior of the foundation which will be established at the Kuang Yu middle school, the only Catholic high school for boys in Honan province with a population of 30 millions.

Will Sail Saturday.

The Rev. Richard Shonka, noted for his research work in physics and mathematics, and the Rev. Gerard Mach, pastor of St. Joan of Arc at Lisle and head of the department of commerce at St. Procopius college, will sail with Father Vesely next Saturday on the SS. President McKinley from Seattle, Wash. Accompanying the three monks on their journey will be the Most Rev. Joseph N. Tacconi, vicar apostolic of Kaufeng, who after 40 years in China came to America to deliver the commission of the holy see to St. Procopius abbey.

Benedictines have been for centuries scholars and teachers rather than missionaries, and Chinese reverence for scholarship and culture coupled with zeal for knowledge are proverbial. Consequently, it is felt that this period of intellectual awakening in China is particularly auspicious for the introduction of the Benedictine order with its age old traditions.

The encyclical of Pius XI. governing this expedition recommended that vicar apostolics should form native religious communities as the most effective means of church extension in mission countries.

See Check on Communism.

Chinese, inherently fitted for monastic life by their high regard for tradition, will appreciate the stability of the Benedictine order and with thousands of Buddhists living under cloistral rule in all parts of China it may be hoped that stable conversion through native monasticism may prove a check to the growth of communism in that country.

These three monks from St. Procopius will take with them much valuable physical apparatus and a large library to make an important addition to the educational equipment of the Kuang Yu school. These Benedictines also will teach at the state university of Honan physics, history and English, which will give them immense prestige, among even the pagan Chinese in that area, so that whatsoever may eventuate from the Kuang Yu school in the development of a native clergy will probably determine the norm in that respect for the whole of China.

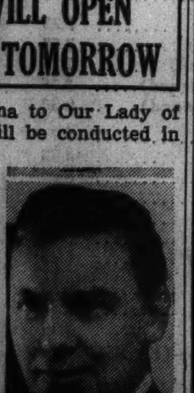
The First Presbyterian church of Wilmette will celebrate its silver anniversary this week beginning with the dedication this afternoon of the chapel, the first completed unit of the new church building. The service will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. James T. Veneklasen, assisted by the Rev. William J. Ohan, representing the Chicago presbytery. Dr. Henry Seymour Brown will make the dedicatory address.

Wednesday evening will be world service night with an address by the Rev. James E. Detweiler.

The Rt. Rev. Frank Du Moulin, formerly bishop coadjutor of Ohio but at present rector of St. John of Lattington church, Locust Valley, N. Y., will preach this morning at St. Peter's Episcopal church, 621 Belmont avenue. Bishop Du Moulin was rector of St. Peter's church from 1889 to 1907.

NEW ST. SYLVESTER PASTOR WILL OPEN NOVENA TOMORROW

A Solemn Novena to Our Lady of Perpetual Help will be conducted in St. Sylvester church, 2157 Humboldt boulevard, by the Rev. Joseph Carroll, a member of the Order of Redemptorist Fathers, beginning tomorrow and closing Tuesday, Oct. 27. A social fall festival will follow on Wednesday, Oct. 28, which will continue until Nov. 1.



THE REV. J. S. COLLINS.

Merchandise will be sold at the various booths during the festival and a program of games will be played. A prize will be awarded on the closing night.

The Rev. J. S. Collins was formerly superintendent of St. Mary's Training school in Des Plaines and recently was appointed pastor of St. Sylvester church. The novena will serve as opportunity for him to meet his parishioners.

Mother: If Your Child Eats Poorly . . . Try This:–

YES! There is now a simple way that's helping to make thousands of "poor eaters" EAT! Not just a way to "tempt the taste." But a way that actually helps nature create the natural sensation of hunger—a strong desire to eat.

Mothers everywhere report surprising results. They say their children now eat without fussing, coaxing or forcing. And actually ask for such healthful foods as vegetables and milk which they wouldn't "touch" before.

Ovaltine was originally created in Switzerland, and is now made over here. You simply give it mixed with milk—either hot or cold—and children love its delicious taste.

What Mothers Report

Thousands of letters are regularly received from mothers telling how heartily their children have commenced to eat since Ovaltine was added to their regular daily diets.

For example, Mr. Edward W. Kuhn, 530 Tupelo St., New Orleans, La., writes:—"My daughter had been very delicate. She weighed only 29 pounds, did not have any appetite and had to be coaxed and forced to eat. We first started giving her Ovaltine less than two months ago. Now she weighs 41 pounds and has a wonderful appetite."

Another delighted parent, Mrs. L. S. RaDesill, 437 W. Antietam Street, Hagerstown, Md., writes:—"My little girl would hardly eat a thing until I gave her Ovaltine. But now she has been eating much better and has gained 2 pounds. Several people had told me to give her Ovaltine—but I always thought it was just something to make children drink milk. Now I realize there is something in Ovaltine to make them want to eat more food besides drink milk."

These, of course, are only two individual experiences. Naturally, we do not predict that similar results will occur in every case where Ovaltine is given. But we have received so many letters similar to the above, that we believe a fair trial of Ovaltine is justified by every intelligent mother whose child has to be coaxed or forced to eat.

You can obtain Ovaltine at any grocery, drug, or department store. Why not get a can today? (Note the special offer of a genuine Little Orphan Annie Mug. Clip the coupon for your child now.)

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES MAKE YOU HATE TO BE SEEN

PIMPLES spoil many a "date"—for boys as well as girls—after the start of adolescence, from about 13 to 25 years of age, or even longer.

At this time, important glands develop and final growth takes place. The entire system is disturbed. The skin gets extra sensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin. Then, unsightly pimples pop out.

Thousands of boys and girls find Fleischmann's fresh Yeast is an excellent way to get rid of a pimply skin. It clears these skin irritants out of the blood. As a result—pimples go!

Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly each day, one about ½ hour before meals. Eat it plain, or dissolved in a little water—until your skin is entirely clear once more. Begin now!

BROMO-SELTZER stops next-morning headaches Faster, doctors find . . .

YOU don't have to suffer the next morning—just because you made merry the night before! It's so easy to get relief—the Bromo-Seltzer way.

Doctors recently made tests—proved Bromo-Seltzer stops next-morning headaches FASTER than any other remedy they tested.

This gentle remedy does more for you, too. It helps to settle an upset stomach, soothes jangled nerves. Reduces excess lactic acid accumulation in the blood caused by overindulgence. Helps nature restore your normal alkaline reserve.

You can get Bromo-Seltzer at drugstores and soda fountains everywhere. It's handy to keep a bottle in your medicine cabinet, too.

OH, BOY! WHAT A PARADE! AND TO THINK THEY'RE ALL MARCHING ESPECIALLY FOR ME— HERE COMES THE CAVALRY!

ON REACHING AN OBSCURE POINT AT THE WATER'S EDGE HE CRAWLS INTO A SMALL BOAT AND ROWS OUT TO AN OLD FISHING VESSEL, ANCHORED IN THE BAY—
NO SOONER THAN THE STRANGER GETS ABOARD, THE SHIP PUTS OUT TO SEA—
AT LAST- A COMPLETE REPORT IN DETAIL AND FIGURES ON EVERY SHIP- FORT- GUN AND MAN AVAILABLE FOR MILITARY DUTY IN CASE OF WAR- BUT WHAT WILL MY EMPEROR SAY WHEN HE SEES THIS PHOTO OF THE HUGE GIANT NOW IN COMMAND?

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Halter Arouses Colts

Oct. 17, 1936.

SKIPPY, the colt that amused all the boys on the farm because he learned the trick of showing his teeth and sort of smiling when one of them would come up to pet him, has been disappointing his public recently. Sometimes he will do his trick and sometimes he won't. There is nothing certain about his performance or his temperament. When he refuses to display his row of ivory the boys blame it on temperament.

Skippy is being halter broken. Every day the boys put halters on both Skippy and his pal, Libard, another colt. The animals don't like it at all. They twist and pull and try in every way to get rid of the outfit, but, of course, the halters stay on. The boys say that this routine with the halter doubtless is responsible for Skippy's change in disposition and his refusal to perform for his public.

Silage Cooks Itself.

The way the big white silo on the farm has been behaving this past week is something of a scandal. Inasmuch as the corn was cut up and put in the silo when it was moist the natural development was fermentation. The silage has literally been doing its own cooking and producing a potent "likker" that changes the corn plant gradually into highly nourishing stock food.

In fact, from the smell and looks of the liquid leaking out of the bottom door the silo appears to be anything but an innocent white concrete structure to hold food for stock. Fortunately this situation won't continue very long. The silage will begin to "behave itself" as soon as this stage of fermentation is over.

Put Gravel on Feed Lot.

The boys on the Yorkville farm have been engaged in giving the steers a better playground. Their feed lot has been rather muddy since the numerous late summer rains. Therefore the boys have been hauling gravel from a pit near the river and putting it in the feed lot so the cattle will have a drier stomping ground.

About the only other job occupying the men now is that of cutting silage for the steers. All of the silos are full, but the men are continuing to cut more corn for each daily feeding. Other jobs facing the men in the near future are those of corn shocking and more fall plowing.

Pigs Learn Their Lessons.

The young pigs on the Yorkville farm are learning a lot of new lessons these days, with their mother sows and the farm visitors serving as teachers.

When we were there the other day the sows were leading the pigs around a field of corn showing them how to find food. The corn had been cut for silage. The boys put the pigs in the field so that they could get any corn which the hungry cutter might have forgotten.

Some of the farm visitors are teaching the pigs [which are about 10 inches high now] the meaning of an automobile horn. The other day one of the visitors saw the pigs staring through the fence at his auto. He waited until he had a "congregation" of about 25 porky listeners, then blew his horn long and loud.

The pigs turned tail as though they had urgent business to take care of at their stalls. Apparently it takes only one lesson to teach the pigs that an auto horn means for them to move away in a hurry.

REDUCED RATES
ON ALL LOANS ABOVE $100.

1. Whether or not you have furniture or a car, you can borrow here if you can make regular monthly payments.
2. Payments on all loans are small. For example, payments on a $200 loan are $10 per month plus interest charges on a 20 month schedule.
3. You do not need co-makers or endorsers.
4. You can secure the money quickly—the same day if you apply before 9 o'clock.
5. Household's rate of 3% per month on the first $100 and 2% per month on that part of the balance over $100 is substantially lower than the lawful maximum on all loans above $100.
6. Repay at any time and reduce the cost.
7. Private offices. Your problem will have our sympathetic attention.

We have the greatest array of late model Studebakers in Chicago. They are 1934, 1935, and 1936 cars in President, Commander, and Dictator models. You can choose from Sedans, Broughams, Coupes, and sport models. Most of these cars have been only driven a few hundred miles. All of them have been carefully checked over in our shops from bumper to bumper and are ready to give you new car satisfaction today. They come with free wheeling, independent planar wheel suspension, ride control, safety glass, and all the newest advancements. All are lavishly equipped with de luxe extras. We can sincerely say that these Studebakers are the last word for smart appearance and sparkling performance. They are backed by a new car guarantee. And now here's the good news. These practically brand new Studebakers are priced down to only $395. Yes sir! Only $395 and you drive away a virtually new Studebaker. Your old car in trade may make the entire down payment. 1937 DODGE AND BUICK

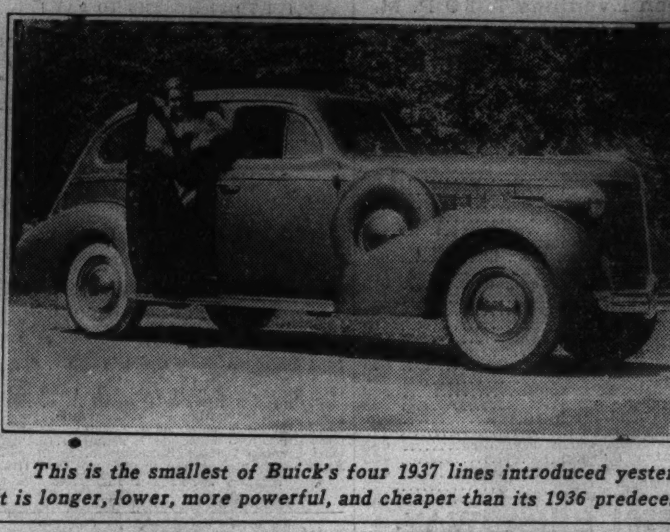
Here is the 1937 Dodge with its variety of safety provisions, crash pads on back of front seat, smoothed instrument panel, large windows, and slender corner posts.



This is the smallest of Buick's four 1937 lines introduced yesterday. It is longer, lower, more powerful, and cheaper than its 1936 predecessor.

DODGE AND BUICK PUT THEIR 1937 AUTOS ON SALE

BY HAL FOUST.

Dodge and Buick yesterday placed their 1937 models on the market. These latest entrants emphasize that this market is to be a highly competitive one, with keen competition in style, performance, riding comfort, and prices.

Dodge and Buick contribute their due portions to the factual generality that the industry has produced an improved automobile for 1937. The battle for buyers, free of government subsidy or regulation, has again resulted in pronounced advancements.

Innovations in the Dodge include some safety factors that heretofore have been neglected by all manufacturers. The top and the back of the front seat have been upholstered to pad the impact for tonneau passengers thrown forward in an accident. Knobs and handles on the instrument panel have been recessed to save front seat passengers from wounds in collisions.

Dodge Is Roomier.

The Dodge body is roomier. The drive shaft tunnel has been removed from the floor by employing a hypoid differential that permits a lower drive shaft. The exterior is graced with larger fenders and with horizontal bars on the radiator grille.

The roadability of the new Dodge has been enhanced by four shock absorbers of the plunger type, the type that is used on airplane landing gear. A brace has been added to the front end assembly to reduce sway on turns.

The Buicks, in appearance, differ widely from their predecessors. Bullet shaped headlamps are molded directly into a deep radiator shell. The hood is tailored over the front of this shell to a grille of horizontal bars divided by a heavy chromium stripe.

The Buick engines have been stepped up in power output, and the producers claim that even with substantially more horse power, the fuel consumption has been lessened. The mechanical refinements bringing these results include a new carburetor of airplane type, functioning well regardless of disturbances from sudden stops, turns, or from sharp grades.

Completely Automatic.

The Buicks are complete automobiles mechanically, they contain all of those units such as automatic choke, heat control, and spark adjustment that are designed for unflawed performance. Just as complete are interior fittings, instrument dials, radiator grilles, and smoking sets.

Buick has widened its market, lowering the price of its smaller cars and increasing the price of its luxury models. There are four complete lines, a 100 horsepower engine on 122 wheel base and a 130 horsepower engine on wheel bases of 126 inches, 131 inches, and 138 inches. Ten color options are offered.

Packard, Studebaker, and Graham presented their 1937 models a couple of weeks ago. Others are to follow soon, and all will be on the market when the annual automobile show opens in New York on Nov. 11 and in Chicago on Nov. 14.

NOW'S THE TIME TO TUNE UP CAR FOR THE WINTER

It is not too early to begin thinking about conditioning your automobile for satisfactory winter service. Don't wait until freezing temperatures, then rush into a gas station for some radiator solution and let it go at that.

Cold weather is a heavy strain on a motor car at its best. When not at its best there are failures, and a balk in the winter can entail discomfort and actual suffering as well as inconvenience.

Lighter oils and greases are needed in the winter to assure circulation of lubricants in low temperature. According to the engineering staf of one of the large petroleum companies, these winter grades are serviceable in Indian summer so there is no risk in making the change early.

Clean Radiator.

Before anti-freeze is added to the water, the cooling system should be cleaned of its summer accumulation of rust, dirt, and lime scale. Any soft rubber hose should be replaced and all connections should be inspected for security.

The engine should be given a tuning up. Spark plug points and distributor points should be checked and adjusted to the proper gap. Wiring connections should be inspected to insure that they are clean and tight. The compression should be tested and brought up to normal, with an even compression in each cylinder. If carbon has accumulated it should be removed. In some cars the valves may need touching up.

The fuel system should be cleaned and carburetor adjustment changed for cold weather. The battery, which if neglected becomes a frequent source of trouble in cold weather, should be carefully checked so that it may be brought up to full capacity to meet the extra demands on it due to the heavier load on the starter. The generator output also should be checked.

The lights are used more in winter than in summer, and it is important that there be plenty of "juice" to take care of them as well as of all the other electrical requirements. Battery cables should be checked and, if corroded at the terminals, cleaned or replaced if too badly damaged. Badly corroded terminals cause a very heavy current loss.

Smooth Tires a Hazard.

Tires that are badly cut or that have been worn smooth should be looked after. Smooth tires are a great hazard on slippery streets.

Brakes, always of the utmost importance, should be checked for winter driving. See that they are equalized on all four wheels and that no foreign matter on one brake shoe or another causes it to perform less than its perfect function. The clutch pedal should be checked to see that it has full clearance.

The windshield wiper comes in for a lot of use in the winter and should be in good condition. Blades sometimes get fuzzy. A new blade can be purchased for a few cents and is easily installed.

HEILS TO KEEP BERLIN BOWLING CUP UNTIL 1938

The bowling trophies won by Heil Products stars of Milwaukee in Berlin last summer against 5,000 experts from 14 countries will be in possession of the Milwaukee Bowling association until 1938, when they will be returned to the international association for the meet to be held that year in Sweden.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The 1937 Plymouths, it was learned last week, will employ a hypoid rear axle. The hypoid design increases the contact area of the gear teeth and permits the drift shaft to be mounted lower without decreasing the road clearance. With a lower drive shaft, floors can be lowered.

Other details of the new Plymouths are being suppressed by the company pending a formal announcement early next month. The 1937 models are being assembled in the Detroit factory at a rate of 2,000 cars a day.

W. J. Mougey, Chicago zone manager for Pontiac, is arranging for dealers and salesmen of this area to see their company's 1937 models next week at a meeting in the Stevens hotel. A party coming from the factory in Pontiac, Mich., will include C. P. Simpson, vice president and general sales manager; F. A. Berend, advertising manager, and J. H. Otis, parts and accessories manager.

The 1937 program of the Cadillac Motor Car company will be laid before its sales and service organizations of the Chicago area at a meeting here a week from tomorrow. Increased size, greater power and the lowest prices in the company's history feature the 1937 models, according to reliable reports. The details of the cars are not to be made public before a forthcoming formal announcement.

Edward F. Fisher, general manager of Fisher Body, last week issued a statement that $25,000,000 was spent for the "unisteel" bodies that will be part of General Motors 1937 cars. Itemizing, he said dies for the new models cost $10,000,000; building and other investments in fixed assets were $11,000,000, and the rearrangement of production lines and equipment amounted to $4,000,000.

The "unisteel" body is a single steel unit, as the name implies. The "turret top" is permanently fused to the front end assembly and the quarter panels, and those parts with the reinforced steel floor. To this rigid structure, the steel interior bracing, which is welded at every point of contact, is added.

The steel rocker panels, roof rails, U-shaped cross members, vertical steel pillars, the bulkheads at front and back, coupled with the inherent strength of the modern streamlined design, offer greater resistance to torsional, beam, and compression stresses than has ever before been achieved, Mr. Fisher declared.

B. G. Sykes, president of the Bird-Sykes company, Chicago distributor for Graham, said last week that the factory schedule calls for a production of 40,000 cars of the 1937 models. This is twice as great an output as the 1936 total.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

WHITE FIRE TRUCKS.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—There is a city ordinance prohibiting red automobiles, but I notice on the streets a good many of this color. A piece of fire apparatus cannot be distinguished by its color from a bread or laundry truck.

If this ordinance is not going to be enforced, I suggest that fire apparatus be painted white. This, I believe, would prevent accidents. You could see the white vehicles approaching at night and in foggy or raining weather.

CHICAGO FIREMAN.

RUSTY LICENSE PLATES.

Cicero, Ill., Oct. 14.—I think it would be a good idea for Gov. Horner to invest some of the relief money in better automobile license plates. It sure is a crime to see all the pretty cars with rusty plates.

Come on, you motorists, demand something for your money. The least the state can do is to get a little better plates for 1937.

[MRS.] L. O.

NO PARKING SIGNS.

Hammond, Ind., Oct. 15.—Your photographers should be assigned to view various Chicago streets bearing signs reading "No parking at any time by order of city council." Picture the long lines of cars that are parked in complete disregard of the ordinance. If the signs mean nothing, why post them?

There's "Swing" in Smart New Coats and Suits

Fur Trim Trick Done With a Flair for Flattering and Dramatic Effects.

By Rhea Seeger.

ALL suits and coats for the coming winter have swing, a dashing, individual swing, a smartness that has been missing, or wasn't particularly visible, when we had to accept straight line, rather shapeless, long, sacklike affairs, with fur engulfing the shoulder lines, or fur virtually plastered on the coat without regard for style or usefulness. These new models do the fur trim trick with finesse, with a flair, and every model you see or select has great distinction. Fur trimming has been skilfully worked out and imaginative designers have achieved the most flattering effects.

Bands of flat fur, sleek collars of shining flat fur like galyak are dramatic accents on coats for the more sophisticated figure. Subtle fitted silhouettes for both the younger and older shopper are feminine and gracious. Nothing has been left undone to make winter coats and suits the most excitingly different and interesting clothes in town. You can shop for color and find anything you ask for—red, henna, sage green, old gold, purple blues, stunning tones of gray, some of the smartest black and brown combines that have ever been shown, and what probably is the all time high for handsome, slenderizing blacks. Definitly different combines of fur and fabric, as well as combinations of color, are so plentiful it takes a most discriminating shopper to select the best of these.

Smooth Suede Textures Firsts for Winter Wraps.

Woolens are soft, warm, and slenderizing. Smooth suede textures are "firsts"; next come fancy weaves with hairy surfaces; then the soft, nubby wools and tufted fabrics. Sleeves are tremendously important. They are full and comfortable, without being overdone. Their long, loose lines make it easy to wear full sleeved dresses under them. Waistlines are defined, and so are riblines and shoulders. Skirts flare interestingly and youthfully. Belts are wide and, in the larger models, usually are of the same fabric as the coat in order to keep a smooth, unbroken silhouette. In the younger models, for the slender shopper, wide belts are of lether, metal, etc.

Fur trimmed winter suits make flattering and decorative as well as smart costumes. Most of them are dress and coat combines, the one piece dress having a gay top and short sleeves, the jacket lavishly but knowingly trimmed with fur. Black wool again is the favorite cloth, and Persian lamb fur bands once more the favorite trimming. Collars are narrow but snugly fitted around the neckline. Jackets are smoothly fitted and sleeves are moderately full. Peplum effects are available in all lengths.

Smart Fur Trimmed Suits and Coats Being Featured There.

The fur trimmed coats and suits sketched are brilliant examples of what can be found in just one collection, this particular one from a boulevard shop. The smart, fur trimmed suits are being featured in a newly opened suit department. The fur trimmed coats come from the same shop, where fur coats and lovely fur trimmed wool coats have been presented for years.

A . . . The fur coat and wool dress combine is the most practical buy of the season, for the coat can be worn with other dresses and with skirts and sweaters. Some of them go out at night over simple dance dresses. The only decoration on this smooth fitting sage green wool dress is tied-on buttons or buckles of gold metal. The short swinging jacket is of golden brown Baronduki fur, lined with the green wool, which also is made into a flat fold border around the edge of the jacket. It's young, smart, and moderately priced.

C . . . A black wool suit trimmed with bands of black Persian lamb. The dress has a gay top of kelly green and gold metallic fabric, short puffed sleeves, and a skirt that fits in a molded princess silhouette. The outfit is completed with a small high hat of Persian and a muff.

D . . . Another green affair with the fur of silky taupe colored moleskin. The dress has a sleek satin top with long fitted, buttoned sleeves. The jacket is almost entirely of the fur, and wraps and ties at the waistline with a sash of the soft green wool.

E . . . A distinguished black wool coat trimmed with mink, this is one of the most unusual winter coats to be found. The flat, silky mink is used in a well designed, long tuxedo collar or front band effect. The petaled collar is also of the mink and matches the simple band cuffs around the moderately wide sleeves. Around the natural waistline is a wide belt of lether that defines the flare of the skirt and the snug fitting top. This is a truly distinctive brown and black combine and a perfect foundation coat for any well planned wardrobe.

F . . . A tuxedo model in soft gray wool with a stunning flat collar and front bands that reach the hem. The trim is dark gray Persian lamb, with which the sleeves also are dramatized. The waistline is accented with a wide belt of gray suede lether. This may be alternated with a dress parade belt of silver metal or one of dull black or brown lether.

G . . . Gray combined with brown furnishes one of the most important of unusual contrasts. The coat is of stone gray wool, made with moderately puffed long sleeves and a cinched in waistline. Completely covering the chest is the soft, luxurious brown nutria fur. A collar of the nutria flares softly around the neckline.

Hospital Call Must Be Short and Cheerful

Brief Visits Are the Rule; Conversation Must Be of Light Vein and Pleasant.

By Helen Bartlett.

MAKING a hospital call or a sick call is not an every day responsibility, but it is one which each of us is called upon to perform some time or other. It is not always the most pleasant duty either, but still one that should not be shirked.

People who find themselves confined to the small plain rooms of a hospital are there for a purpose. They are very ill, otherwise they wouldn't be there. Friends should appreciate how unending the days can be under such circumstances and show their thoughtfulness by sending cards, letters, little presents, or making calls. And here is where you must use discretion.

Hospital Calls Should Be Short, Conversation Pleasant.

Time may be long for the sick one and a call may have a delightfully cheering influence, but it can be so easily overdone. Remember that hospital calls must be made during visiting hours. And remember, too, that the purpose of the call is to cheer and not to exhaust. Calls should be short. A long, tiresome visitor will make the patient wish that she might never have come. Conversation always shoud be kept on a cheerful plane. Just because you inquire after the health of the patient is no reason why the morbid details of the case should be discussed. Drop the subject after the first inquiry, and refrain from talking about another friend who had the same symptoms and died a horrible death. Rather try to get the patient's mind off of her own painful situation.

Keep the conversation light, pleasant and kindly. Too deep subjects are wearisome. And be prepared to do most of the talking or else take your leave.

Sending a little present is another way of showing thoughtfulness. Flowers come to your mind immediately. And sending cut flowers or a sturdy potted plant is an excellent way of expressing your kindly thoughts. But you must admit it is not too original an idea. There are many other things, and more interesting, useful things, too.

For a child or an adult whom you know has that particular interest, send puzzles, jigsaw, nail head puzzles, or any other that you know will please. Little children love paper cutouts. There are books and magazines for people of all ages and all tastes. Lovely monogrammed handkerchiefs are a happy suggestion, or some piece of wearing apparel such as a bed jacket, pajamas, dressing gown, or nightgown. For the young feminist you might send a beauty kit containing creams and lotions and manicuring necessities. And what girl wouldn't like a little bottle of choice perfume or refreshing cologne?

Delectable Foods Please the Patient Without Strict Diet.

For the patient who is convalescing and is not on a limited, restricted diet it is permissible to send delectable bits to please the inner person, such as hard candies, choice fruits, little cookies, or grape juice. The list of suggestions is endless.

Getting back to flowers for just a moment. I like the idea of selecting a small bouquet of posies to be arranged as a corsage. It does something to the spirit to have a bouquet of violets, purple pansies, daisies or gardenias tucked under the chir by pininng it to the bed jacket or gown.

Chicago Cooks Show Dexterity with Strudels

By Mary Meade.

"SHE must be straight from the old country! Nobody else could roll out strudel dough that swiftly!"

The scene was a downtown store. The time, during a recent cooking school. The performers were three Chicago housewives, expert cooks, at three tables on a platform where almost a thousand other Chicago housewives could watch them compete in the difficult German art of strudel making.

Three Contestants' Deft Fingers Make Strudels in "Nothing Flat."

It was more fun than any three ring circus. On the right was Mrs. Josephine Mitchell, 9151 Harper avenue, an easy winner. Mrs. Mitchell, with several swoops and a flourish, had her strudel dough rolled, filled, shaped and ready for the oven in 3½ minutes flat. Now this is no mean feat, as any one who knows anything at all about strudel making can appreciate. The pastry must be stretched paper thin to cover an entire table and to fall over the edges. Then it must be filled with apples, nuts, raisins, butter and sugar, or some other combination of filling, and rolled over and over, shaped like a horseshoe, brushed with butter and placed in a baking pan. All this was done in 3½ minutes.

One Cook Reveals Genuine Flare for High Comedy.

And, in the center of things, was Mrs. Josephine Lynch, 2717 West Sixteenth street, who was star performer, although she trailed the other two in placement by the judges. Mrs. Lynch, a grandmother, had no background of strudel making as did the other two cooks. This was only her third trial, and results were nothing to be scorned. However, the audience was interested not so much in Mrs. Lynch's strudel as in Mrs. Lynch herself, for she proved to be a comedienne of the first order. To hear hearty laughter at a cooking school is rather extraordinary, but this gray haired person had her audience half hysterical as she clowned her way clear through her strudel dough. "It's better'n seeing a Zazu Pitts movie," somebody remarked between gales of laughter.

If you had been privileged, as we were, to sample the prize winning strudel after it was baked to a nice golden brown, you'd have sought out the cook at once and clamored for her recipe. We did that, and we're going to pass the recipe on.

Strudel making is an accomplished art well worth struggling for. And although few of us can hope to attain the speed and efficiency of a Mrs. Mitchell, we can do no better than to start with her own recipe.

APPLE STRUDEL DOUGH.
4 cups flour
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
Lard the size of a walnut
1¾ cups cold water.

Mix these five ingredients together in a large bowl, using the hands. Knead for half an hour. [This is necessary in order to develop the elasticity of the flour gluten to the point where it will stretch without breaking.] When dough is elastic, toss on a well floured board and cover with a warm bowl for half an hour. Meanwhile, prepare filling. Do not mix filling ingredients. They are scattered over the dough separately.

APPLE STRUDEL FILLING.
6 pounds apples, sliced
1½ cups sugar
3 cups toasted bread crums
½ pound butter, melted
1 cup white raisins
1 cup walnuts
½ cup ground almonds

TO STRETCH AND FILL DOUGH—Lay the dough in the center of a well floured tablecloth. Roll a few strokes with a rolling pin. Then, with palms down, place hands under dough and stretch it gradually all around the table toward the edges, until it is paper thin and hangs over the table. Cut off dough that hangs over, toss the filling over the dough, one ingredient at a time, working quickly.

TO ROLL AND SHAPE DOUGH—Lift tablecloth high with both hands and the strudel will roll itself up like a large jelly roll. Twist into a horseshoe shape, brush with melted butter and place in pan.

TO BAKE APPLE STRUDEL—Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees F., for half an hour. Then reduce the heat to 350 degrees and bake until brown and crisp. The prize winning strudel was baked for 45 minutes.

Miss Meade contributes daily to the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune, guiding housewives to the best knowledge of cookery, hostessing, and budgeting.

Fads of Empress Eugenie Much Copied in America

WHEN Mrs. Jane Means Appleton Pierce, wife of President Franklin Pierce, assumed charge of the social end of the nation at the White House, the styles were more grotesque than ever before. The gay Empress Eugenie of France was creating havoc in Europe with her ideas. She was responsible for the hoopskirt, first made of whalebone, then the more atrocious graduated steel circles, widest at the hips. Once possessed of this fad she carried it so far that she could not get through the doors of her own palace arrayed in them. The devotees of fashion in this country lost no time in imitating her.

Applique Quilt Creation of Pennsylvania Dutch Settler

STAR AND CRESCENT.

By Nancy Cabot.

THIS applique block, "Star and Crescent," was created by one of the early Pennsylvania Dutch settlers. It is one of the quilt patterns which requires dainty needlework to bring out effectively the details of the block. Color combinations must be harmonious in this design, otherwise the beauty of a coverlet may be completely destroyed. One of the favorite combinations of the Dutch is delft blue and yellow gold against a white ground.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

HAS PART IN LEAGUE FOLLIES

Miss Nancy Lewis' bright smile and sparkling eyes will not be lost upon the audience that will fill the Glencoe school auditorium on the nights of Nov. 5, 6 and 7 for the Evanston Junior League's Follies revue. Miss Lewis, who lives in Evanston, is one of the league's younger members, and she will be doing her part behind the footlights on those three eventful nights when the league hopes to raise more than the $6,000 they earned at a similar show two years ago. The Follies of two years ago was one of the most successful amateur shows ever produced in town or on the north shore.

Various Events Planned to Aid Philanthropies

Several Benefits Taking Place This Week, Still Others Being Arranged.

SCARCELY have the season's activities begun before clubwomen become engrossed in the problem of raising funds for their favorite philanthropies. Several benefits are taking place this week, and still others will be launched at the opening meetings of several organizations within the next few days.

Sunday, Nov. 1, will be a popular date for entertaining, since the Infants' Aid and the Ruth League for Crippled Children both have selected that evening for benefit parties. The Ruth league, which opens its season with a meeting at 2:30 o'clock today in the Free Sons' clubrooms, 316 North Michigan avenue, will give its third annual dance and musical revue, "The World on Parade," on Nov. 1 at the Medinah Athletic club. Proceeds from the show will be used to provide scholarships for crippled children.

Infants' Aid Making Final Plans for Annual Benefit.

At a meeting tomorrow at the Palmer house the Infants' aid will make final arrangements for a dinner dance and floor show to take place Nov. 1 at the Hotel Sherman. The major portion of the proceeds will be used to complete the endowment fund for the Hortense Shoen Joseph premature infant station maintained by the organization at the Sarah Morris hospital.

Viola Roth will read from the play "The First Lady," by George Kaufman and Kathryn Dayton, at tomorrow's meeting, and Jackie Heller, radio singer, will give a program, accompanied by Davie Rose. Mrs. Isadore S. Stein is president of Infants' aid, which is opening its twenty-second year with a membership of 1,000 women.

Underprivileged and Crippled Children Also to Be Aided.

Underprivileged and crippled children also will benefit from the annual dinner-dance and floor show of the Chicago Club for Crippled Children to be held Sunday evening, Nov. 15, in the Grand ballroom of the Palmer house.

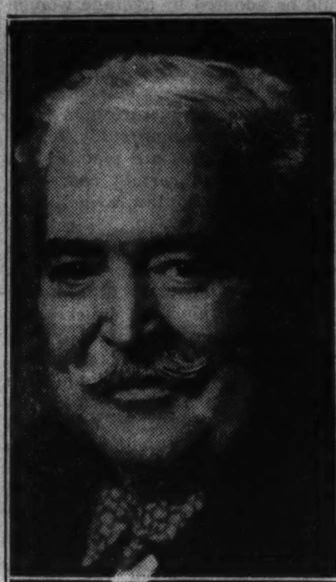
The Chef from Rector's with a Savory Dish

By George Rector.

ANCIENT Chicagoans remember my father, Charlie Rector, as the man who parlayed a fifteen cent oyster stew into a million dollars. At that time all fish and oysters traveling west to see America first were shipped in hermetically sealed cans and father decided to do something about it. So he arranged for the first barrel of oysters ever to be shipped west in their own shells. The idea was somewhat of a novelty, but a great success, and when the lid was knocked off the barrel the oysters lasted only long enough to get them out of their shells.

After that Rector's became famous for shellfish specialties and the rush started with such bon vivants as Marshall Field, George Ade, Elbert Hubbard, Eugene Field, and many others too numerous to mention. Marshall Field was particularly fond of sea food and we enjoyed catering to his taste by originating new dishes and preparing the ones he liked. One of his favorites was "oysters casino" and here is the recipe:



The Author.

Select large oysters and allow six for each portion. Have individual shallow baking pans for each service. Cover bottom of pan with rock salt and imbed the oysters, which have been opened on the deep shell, in the salt. The bed of salt is used to steady the oyster, thereby holding the liquor in the shell. On each oyster sprinkle one-half teaspoon finely chopped green pepper and one-half teaspoon finely chopped pimiento. Season with salt, a few grains of cayenne pepper, and a dash of paprika. Then on top place a piece of sliced bacon which has been cut into one and one-half inch pieces. Broil under moderate flame until bacon is cooked and the edges of the oysters curl or shrivel slightly. Serve immediately and right in the pan in which the oysters were cooked. Clams may also be cooked the same way.

Another dish that has remained popular all through the years and one which is simple to make is "Finnan Haddie a la Rector."

Cover a finnan haddie with two cups of milk, add ten whole black peppercorns, one bay leaf, one pinch of thyme, and one slice of onion. Let soak for one hour, then place over low heat and slowly bring to boiling point and let simmer for ten minutes. Flake fish into pieces, discarding all bones and skin. Strain the milk that the fish cooked in and add one-half cup heavy cream to it as this is to be used for the sauce. Melt four tablespoons butter, blend in four tablespoons flour and gradually add the hot milk and cream, stirring constantly until smooth and thick. Season with a few grains of cayenne. Add flaked fish to sauce along with one tablespoon chopped pimiento and one tablespoon chopped green pepper which has been blanched. Serve garnished with chopped hard boiled eggs.

We were the first also to show the amazed citizens of Illinois their first live lobsters shipped direct from Maine. Then we topped that off with the first live green sea turtle shipped from the West Indies which found his or her way into soup and other epicurean dishes. The turtle weighed over three hundred pounds and celebrated its debut in the middle west by knocking over a lamp in the freight depot and setting the building on fire. The blaze didn't reach the magnificent proportions of the conflagration started by the left hind foot of Mrs. O'Leary's cow, but it was not so bad for a turtle's first effort.

Getting back to the lobsters it is only fair to give them a credit line, too, as they contributed in no small way to making our restaurant a popular rendezvous. They were served hot, cold, plain, or fancy, but there was always one on the menu with an a la Rector attached to it. Chicago ate and talked lobster for days on end, so it was up to us to keep the interest aroused and the appetite tempted. Enough oysters and lobsters arrived in the following years to satisfy all and if Chicagoans felt grateful for receiving their iodine in palatable form we filled our part of the contract by keeping them well supplied, as we did not know at the time whether shellfish was a fad or a firmly established institution.

I am aware of the fact that the average housewife has many cookbooks and hundreds of recipes to avoid monotony or sameness of food day by day. We were compelled to scour the four corners of the earth for foods that would provide rare and fancy dishes to avoid repetition of menus, and in so far as I have some space left I can think of no better purpose to put it than tell you a good lobster story told to me by Augustus W. Mott of the Mott Iron works.

Mr. Mott was the guest of Wilson Marshall on board the two masted schooner yacht Atlantic and while cruising off Rhode Island the yacht was left becalmed very close to a thicket of lobster pots. Mr. Mott asked his host if he could leave the yacht, taking the motor launch and two sailors. Mr Marshall agreed to the request and was astonished to see his guest direct the launch to a lobster pot buoy and order the crew to pull up the pot. This almost caused mutiny, as such an act is punishable in dollars and jail. Nevertheless, Mr. Mott had an idea and he intended to see it through. The pot was pulled up and six of the liveliest beauties were withdrawn. He then took his calling card and, with a piece of wire, wrapped it around a bottle of fine old bourbon, lowered it in the pot and sailed away. A few weeks after he returned to his residence at 130th street and Fifth avenue, he received a letter postmarked Rhode Island. It read: "Dear Mr. Mott: Thanks. Call again."

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

A handsome and complete manicure kit, containing unusual manicure aids, provides an excellent incentive to the home care which is so essential to lovely nails.

PERHAPS, if you're inclined, as we are, to make and remake resolutions about home nail care with alarming regularity, it's time to apply a little psychology. Maybe, if you supply yourselves with manicure implements that are a joy to wield you'll be more inclined to take arms against the recalcitrant cuticle and bring order out of chaos. You'll have to do something about it, girls, because hands are in the limelight this season, and "pretty" nails are in again.

We can't think of a better incentive than the possession of one of the extra-complete manicure sets made by a manufacturer who has given some thought to the matter of women's hands and nails and their care. They're replete with all that makes manicuring a rite and a beauty ritual, and the implements are rather unusual, too.

Kit Itself Is Handsome Article for Boudoir.

First of all, the kit itself is handsome, one you wouldn't mind having your worst enemy find you using, and comes in brown or black and silver, with either a blue or a green knob.

Inside you'll find every single item we can think of that goes to make a manicure complete, not even forgetting the hand lotion. There is polish, both powder and liquid. There are removers, both cuticle and polish. There is a buffer that is, in our opinion, excellent as to size, weight, and texture.

What ordinarily would be called an orangewood stick, and serves that purpose, has a transparent, flexible end and is perfect for grooming the cuticle. It's made of the same composition as are knitting needles and, like knitting needles, it never roughens up or shows its age. It still is clean and new looking after months of service.

One of Implements Is Cross Between File and Emery Board.

One of the implements we particularly like is a cross between a nail file and an emery board. Its action is gentle, but it is quite durable, too. And the nail file itself is, of all things, "air conditioned." It is extra supple and little holes perforate each filing edge.

You'll find these kits in at least one shop in town, and they're not very expensive. But if you're interested only in certain individual items you'll find them sold separately, too.

[For information about this manicure kit telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0100, or write her in care of The Tribune.]

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

APPEALS for clothing continue to pour in to this department. We've tried especially to see that the youngsters were helped as much as possible in order to attend school. Now we'd like to call your attention to the needs of the hundreds of men listed on our files, the actual and potential bread winners. We have found it particularly difficult to outfit them and, as the need is very great, we hope we can prod some of our readers into distributing any surplus masculine apparel they may have on hand.

R. L. is 55 years old, a university graduate who has had a long and varied record of employment. His misfortunes began in 1929, with the failure of a firm with which he had long been identified. He secured other temporary work, but continued illness and numerous operations prevented his earning more than a meager living. After months in various hospitals he was completely without funds and he now has heart disease and is unable to work. He says, in part, in his letter. "My clothing, shoes, watch, radio, etc., all are in pawn, and the clothes I am wearing have given out. I deplore having to ask it, but is it possible that you can help me out by providing a suit? I weigh 125 pounds and am 6 feet 6 inches tall. My size is 35 or 36. I am without relatives and my friends all have already aided me to the best of their ability."

Mr. L. now is hospitalized in an infirmary on the extreme west side, but hopes, with the improvement of his health, to seek work in the near future. He is unable to leave there at present, and clothing will have to be mailed to him.

Another man fighting his way back to health writes: "I am a young man in my early twenties, and in difficult circumstances. After a two year period spent in a sanitarium, due to tuberculosis, I again have a chance to rehabilitate myself. Physicians advise that, providing I am cautious, I may resume some type of light work. I am experienced in sales and clerical work, and have been promised a job but, at this time, I lack clothing so badly I am unable to present a decent appearance. The only clothing I now own is a light summer suit, many years old.—R. B."

Mr. B. is of average height, but very slender. Clothes worn by the average high school boy probably would fit him—waist size 29 or 30 inches. His greatest need is a suit, but he also lacks shoes, size 7.

We have hundreds of similar requests. Families on relief have had no clothing appropriations, and those on work relief do not earn enough to purchase apparel. There are many other wage earners who are unable to supply clothing for their children, much less for themselves. These men must, of course, continue to work during the coldest weather, if they are to continue to earn. We can place clothing of all kinds and all sizes.

Sports Styles for Fall Strike Individual Note

In the picture section of this issue, in full color, appear pictures of smart new Paris styles for fall and winter.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Sports styles that will go to the big games this fall, that will be worn to glide over the ice, to go hiking along country roads, or to drive a ball onto the green have dropped the uniform idea with a heavy and smacking thud. They've turned personal and individual.

The swagger coat of tweed with a fur collar and its ilk are not invited to sit in the grand stands of the big stylemakers any more. Also-rans may wear their sports suits as usual, but the girl with a last minute allure of charm and freshness will step out in the new clothes, which are different and delightful to look at.

The new fashion in sports coats, done in fur, is the short coat in fur that's dyed to look like something out of a fairy tale. Maybe it's the same old lapin or muskrat, but nobody will know it. For fur coats are vivid rust red, sparkling green, and soft horizon blue in color.

They're usually made of shaggy fur and they fly out at the back as though in a windstorm.

They are worn with loud checkered or plaid wool skirts, made of fine Scotch and English material, and no color is too gaudy to go into the pattern.

Pullover Sweaters Are Being Worn as Blouses.

Pullover sweaters act as blouses. Many of these are covered with wool embroidery in bright colors, like Tyrolean peasants wear.

Sports shoes have hefty bright soles and ride up to the ankle in contrasting colors.

Sports scarfs of angora and cashmere, in one color of the plaid skirt, fill in necklines.

Sports coats made of cloth follow the silhouette of town coats and are fitted around the rib-region, with swinging width in the skirt. Many of them have vest fronts. They're made of checked, striped, and mixed tweeds, and in these wools, too, the colors are lusty and gay.

Natural lynx is the fur of the hour to trim the sports coat of cloth.

Sports suits are spick and span little numbers that have hug me tight jackets, usually hip length. They are likely to come out in tweeds in such colors as danger red, peacock blue, and amethyst, or two colors in a checked pattern.

Suits like this often are seen with wrist length overcoats like the boulevardiers of Paris used to wear, overcoats made of husky wool and double breasted from top to bottom.

Suede and chamois vests are made to wear under the sports suit jacket, for warmth and decoration, and then, just for fun, the blouse may be of chiffon in a brilliant color with full peasant sleeves.

One Color Sports Suits Have Contrasting Edgings.

One color sports suits go in for edging bands of velvet around the pockets and the closing. These bands are done in contrasting colors.

And when a sports suit is in plain tweed or worsted, it may be worn with a green jacket, a russet skirt, and a yellow blouse, or some such mixture.

Sports hats are rakish craft and skim over the waves of the smart head.

Peaked hats that rise a good six inches above the crown of the head and have brims turned up at the sides are made by Maria Guy, and are a smart note in sports accessories.

Sports brims give their wearers a one eye effect, dipping down and hiding the right orb completely. They have highish crowns with twin birds in vivid plumage set near the top.

Alix has taken to making millinery and has designed a sports hat like a Spanish shepherd wears.

Robin Hood caps with ten inch quils, and pressed so they collapse to the thickness of a sheet of paper when not on the head, are other smart sports millinery.

By all this you will see that the sports mode is asserting its right to be personal in a big way, and that color is one of the chief attractions of the new action fashions.

One Marcel Rochas ensemble combines color without reserve. The chic, short coat is made of a fur which resembles baby fox, and is dyed a ruddy brick shade.

Plaid Skirt Red, Green, Orange on Brown Ground.

The plaid skirt is red, green, and orange on a brown ground, and a cashmere scarf of red is tucked in the neckline.

The hat, from Maria Guy, is high, comes to a peak, and is made of rusty felt with a red bow at the top and back.

An Alix ensemble has a suit made of dark gray wool, with a fitted hiplength jacket that fastens up the front on four pairs of square lether cuff links. The four set-in pockets are edged with red velvet, and the back of the collar is also red velvet.

Alix continues the shepherd idea with the coat, which opens at the back, being draped like a shawl over the right shoulder, and lined with red velvet.

A sports suit designed by Lyolene has a jacket of chaudron brown tweed, hiplength, and with big pockets under flaps. The four gored skirt is made of olive green wool.

A vest of green wool that matches the skirt has a front panel of chaudron brown suede, fastened to the vest with tiny metal hooks down each side.

An Attractive Crocheted Blouse for Your Winter Suit

By Ellen Bruce.

DESIGNERS of hand crochet garments are forced to work overtime because of the great demand for all variety of crochet work. These items run the gamut from hot water bag covers to the most elaborate of blouses in nearly every known stitch, yet women still clamor for more. Complicated stitches seldom deter the crochet worker because crocheting is one of the handicrafts which allows a person to use judgment rather than to depend upon an instructor.

The good looking sleeveless blouse illustrated today is an example of clever and smart designing, coupled with a simple stitch. The pattern consists of double and single crochet, with bands of single crochet used down the front and for the collar and armholes. Crêpe yarn is one of the favorites for this type of blouse, but cotton, Irish linen, and French zephyr yarns work up equally well. It is sufficiently dressy to be worn without a jacket if the winter suit should prove too warm for modern apartment wear.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for crocheting the sleeveless blouse with high neck, illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Origin of Chintz Goes Back to Indian Process

CHINTZ, so beloved by the English, and now almost as popular in this country, first appeared in Great Britain in the 18th century, being brought by sailing ships from India. These first printed pieces were in the shape of large oblongs, just the right size for bedspreads. They were known as "Palampores." The most popular design was "the tree of life," still found on many British manufactured chintzes today.

The manner of making the first chintzes in India was such a lengthy and complicated process that the fabric brought tremendous prices. The demand for chintzes grew by such leaps and bounds, however, that soon European manufacturers were forced to copy them, and thus less expensive processes were evolved.

Then some one invented the method of making prints all in one color, and the lovely tones of blue, red, and mauve of that period were the result. France lowered the price of chintzes, and soon places everywhere were entering the business.

What Role Has Love in Making One Beautiful?

Observation Reveals That Girl Enamored Is Lovelier in Both Face and Clothing.

Frequent scalp massage works wonders for both scalp and hair. Antoinette Donnelly suggests an easy, tested method of massage in her booklet, "Bring Out the Beauty in Your Hair." By Antoinette Donnelly.

WE LEARN about women from the screen. We don't have to believe all that we learn about women from the screen, because some of it isn't acceptable to our own ideals. But there is no question but that screen coiffures, eyebrows, mouth makeup, and clothes set the style for a good many feminine citizens the country over. How much of this style setting should be adopted by average women is another thing. Certain settings and certain character rôles determine the type of screen dress and makeup, so they're not always adaptable to less glamorous or picturesque rôles. But it is an interesting study, nevertheless, how clothes are planned out in movieland and certain characteristics stressed to fit into a picture.

My attention was called to this recently by the plans laid out for four movie stars appearing in "Ladies in Love." Each star is so different in personality, in physical appearance: Constance Bennett, Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, and Simone Simon. The interesting study in connection with the group is the manner in which each personality undergoes changes when the "right man" flits into her screen life.

This change inspired the query: How important is love in the scheme of the woman beautiful?" You and I have a fair idea of just how important love is. How women deprived of it become discouraged, disheartened with a physical reflection of the uninspired heart. Unfortunately, one can not be told how to go about introducing love into her life. If you can't find the way yourself, the chances are you never will taste its fruits. We only can say that there is no tonic so vitalizing, so regenerating as love. It beautifies the homeliest face and further illuminates the lovely face.

To speak again of the screen stars in their physical portrayal of what happens to a girl infected with the love virus. One doesn't often get four of them into one picture to be able to observe the changing influence of love. There's Loretta Young, first pictured as a chorus girl making her first entrance in an ordinary frock of silk splashed and trimmed with large figures, with none too smart a tam flaunting a huge floral ornament in front.

Along comes romance. Then see the change the handsome man-about-town inspires! The girl studies and seeks to emulate in chic and smartness one noted for these distinguished traits. Her clothes soon reflect perfectly good taste. No more gaudy, flashy trimming on hat or frock. We won't go into a description of the good taste progression. Enough that in the metamorphosis the girl aims to please the man of the world.

Sophisticated Girl, Falling in Love, Takes to Softer Clothes.

In the movie Constance Bennett is the glamorous, chic dress model of the tale. She is brittle in her quips, scoffing at love and marriage in the earlier scenes. Supersophistication is her rôle, the dress betraying it, too, until love strikes, when the sophisticated pose melts. Threatened with the loss of her man, another side of the complex nature expands, again reflected in the beguiling, softly appealing change of dress.

For youth appeal there is the petite and vivacious Simone Simon playing her 18 years for all the youth that is in them, even to adopting a ridiculously childish sailor hat and suit.

Janet Gaynor, in love with a struggling scientist with little money to spend, is outfitted for her sweetheart simply but practically with a gay little turban tiptilted in the motive of gay young optimism.

The above is not presented as a picture of what to wear when one is in love or on the hunt for love. It's simply a portrayal of women decked out for heart appeal.

Miss Donnelly's authoritative articles, counseling women in matters of beauty and charm, appear every day in the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold as the Stamp Exchange contains offers to buy and sell. Always inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

DURING the first half of the 19th century the United States post office was simply a depot for incoming and outgoing mail. In 1851 an act of congress provided for free delivery of mail by carriers in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and New Orleans. Later, street letter boxes were set up, making it unnecessary to go to the post office either to post letters or to inquire for mail.

Prior to the inauguration of these conveniences, their need had been recognized in many cities and districts, and private dispatch and express companies had been organized to pick up and deliver letters and parcels. Mail destined within the range of the express company's service was delivered to the addressee, while that consigned elsewhere was delivered to the post office.

In 1860 congress made it illegal to operate a private express service between points served by the United States mail, except for the carrying of newspapers and periodicals. Eventually all of the highways and byways were declared to be post roads and the private carriers were legislated out of existence.

In connection with the pickup and delivery of letters, many of the private companies used stamps to indicate payment for the service. These were sold, sometimes at wholesale, and affixed to the letters, which could then be dropped into boxes located at convenient points, without the necessity of a trip to the office of the company.

These stamps generally were used on local mail and destroyed as soon as received and this, coupled with their short life, make them scarcer than the regular postage stamps of the period.

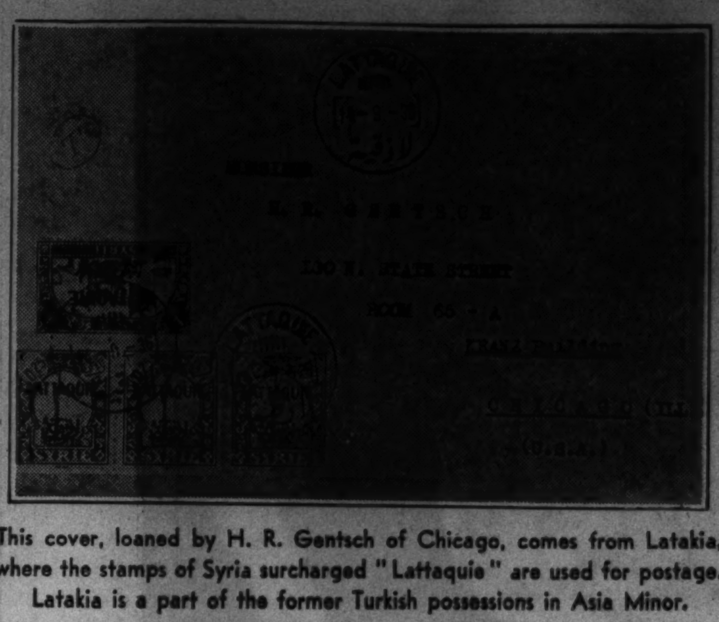
As early as 1874 J. W. Scott & Co., publishers of a combined album and catalog of stamps, recognized that the demand for the "local" stamps far exceeded the supply, and placed on sale facsimiles, or counterfeits, to fill the spaces in the average collection. On the flyleaf of a catalog of that date, kindly furnished by Towner Webster of Winnetka, the publisher explains his reasons for selling these counterfeit labels. This reads, in part, as follows:

"The first column gives the price of good imitations, printed in the correct color only, of nearly all of the rare and almost unobtainable originals; these are offered at the uniform rate of 2 cents each. They have been prepared for the express purpose of familiarizing collectors with the appearance of these rare stamps, nearly all of which are worth, at present, from one to ten dollars each; our publishers being prepared to pay nearly the full retail value for all of them. It is hoped that the publication of these facts will stimulate active search for these rarities, . . . etc."

A second column prices those stamps which have been reprinted, and a third column gives the prices of original copies. Perhaps this early endeavor of the catalog publisher to provide space fillers accounts for the many bogus "local" stamps which are found in the older collections.

The event of the week for local and nearby collectors is the fifth annual Chicago Hobby Collectors' exposition which will be held at the Stevens hotel from Monday, Oct. 19, to Saturday, Oct. 24. There will be displays of antiques, coins, autographs, firearms, glass, china, curios, paintings, prints, books, and other things which interest collectors, including an unusually large stamp display.

Separate awards will be given for stamp collections and for cover collections and the competition has been increased this year since the managing director, O. C. Lightner, has announced an attractive cash prize to go to the club making the best display in each of these divisions. The booths in the stamp section have been taken by dealers and each collector will find some of his specialty on sale.



This cover, loaned by H. R. Gentsch of Chicago, comes from Latakia, where the stamps of Syria surcharged "Lattaquie" are used for postage. Latakia is a part of the former Turkish possessions in Asia Minor.

Club Notes.

The Green Bay Philatelic society announces the resumption of regular meetings after the usual summer vacation. During the coming season meetings will be held at 7:30 p. m. on the first and third Mondays of each month in room F of the Y. M. C. A. building at Jefferson and Pine streets, Green Bay, Wis.

On Oct. 20, at 7 p. m., the Elmhurst Philatelic society will celebrate its first anniversary with a banquet, exhibition, and entertainment in the Congressional room of the Congregational church, Elmhurst, Ill. Included in the program will be a showing of the sound film, "Cruising the Seven Seas."

Stamp Notes.

The Philippine Trade Commissioner, 919 Barr building, Washington, D. C., has recently prepared a new list of Philippine stamps on sale at that address. This will be furnished to interested collectors upon request if accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The Philatelic Agency, Postoffice department, Washington, D. C., is now entirely sold out of souvenir sheets of stamps, the 3 cent Century of Progress sheet being the last to go. Actually only a few commemorative varieties remain on the list and some of these may be removed at any time. Unless some activity takes place soon in the section, which selects, designs, approves, and expedites commemoratives, it does not seem possible for the Philatelic agency to maintain its monthly gross income which for September amounted to $178,384.68 as against $35,749.81 for August, 1935.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Oct. 19.

Do not waste the ground in front of shrubbery borders, for excellent spring effects can be achieved by using bulbs in that area. Hyacinths and narcissus are always excellent when grown in patches or colonies. Squilla, grape hyacinth, and crocus may be naturalized in groups in front of the taller flowers. Perennials still may be planted, including the phloxes. If an increase in the number of shrubs is desired make cuttings of ripened wood now. The virginal mockorange, one of the best of these fine flowering plants, and the bridal wreath are easily propagated by taking cuttings of the present season's growth in 10 inch lengths, burying them in sand or in a well drained spot in the garden, and transplanting them in rows next spring.

Tuesday, Oct. 20.

Dead wood should be removed before the leaves fall. October is an excellent time to plant bulb, root, and tuber, but do not plant deciduous trees and shrubs that have thin bark or thick, fleshy roots, such as the magnolia. Clean up and burn all diseased plants. Cacti plants of fair size may be stored in a light basement, or indoor rockery may be made of sand and stone for the winter months. Cacti require a minimum amount of water in cold weather.

Wednesday, Oct. 21.

Add the raked up leaves to the compost heap. Leaves from hard wood trees have more food value than those from soft wood. Do not waste leaves by burning if there is any need for composted soil. Do not use infested material for composting. House plants in active growth may be given an application of liquid food made from a good commercial fertilizer. Apply at intervals of from three to four weeks. Earthworms in the soil may be controled by dusting with lime on the surface or by watering with lime water.

Thursday, Oct. 22.

Peonies still may be planted. These plants do best in a soil that is not too heavy and the one that has been well enriched. They should be planted so that the crowns are no more than 3 inches deep. Grapevines may be pruned now while weather conditions are good. Prepare to mulch raspberries, currants, strawberries, and gooseberries. Water palms lightly, for these plants enter a period of semi-rest at this time and require little moisture.

Friday, Oct. 23.

Gardeners wishing to have a typical old-fashioned garden should not use the modern varieties of plants. The list should include only those which were in use prior to the civil war. Examples of them are peony, iris, sweet William, foxglove, Canterbury bell, hollyhock, delphinium, madonna lily, day lily, bleeding heart, primula, forget-me-not, hepatrica, trillium, tiger lily, scarlet lychnis, lily-of-the-valley, and the old-time pansies.

Saturday, Oct. 24.

Take in all garden accessories to protect them from bad weather. Oil all machines before storing. The lawnmower should be thoroughly cleaned and all parts oiled. Hoes should be dipped in old cylinder oil; spades cleaned and oiled. Take in the bird houses; clean, repaint if necessary. See that the coldframes which house the perennials are protected whenever necessary.

London Hospitals Closing Doors to Women Doctors

By Ann Whittingham.

That far-off sound of slamming doors you hear possibly may be the noise of big London hospitals shutting out women medical students. LONDON

Quite an uproar is being made about it, but I don't know how far the women and their allies will get with the general medical council.

There are some 6,000 women doctors in the United Kingdom, out of a total of 60,000 registered practitioners, but this 6,000 has been stationary for several years, while the number of men doctors grows yearly by several hundreds. While the profession in general is considered overcrowded, and there is much talk of raising the educational and medical standards, there appears to be a real shortage of women doctors who, considering the anti-feminist prejudices of the country, seem to be surprisingly popular.

Nevertheless, the big Charing Cross hospital, in the medical school of which the famous Huxley once taught, has decided that it has no room for women medical students. King's college hospital, which theoretically takes in eight women students each year, took in none last year and is taking in none this year. University College Medical school, theoretically co-educational, also is said to be shutting them out, while St. Bartholomew's, St. Thomas', and Guy's hospitals, all famous schools, never have admitted women at all. Only one of the big London hospitals accepts them freely, and that is the Royal Free hospital.

Women now are agitating to have the medical council recognize and register the medical schools attached to the big London county council hospitals which are co-educational.

Men's Wigs All the Rage Under William of Orange

WHEN William, the Dutchman, and his English wife, Mary, occupied the throne of England from 1689 to 1702, the wigs for men became all the rage. There was the periwig, the peruke, the campaign wig with polelocks, all of which were the first thoughts of the gentlemen of the kingdom. Historians say "their heads were loaded with curl upon curl, long ringlets hanging over their shoulders and down their backs, some brown, some covered with meal until their coats looked like millers' coats; scented hair, almost hiding the loose tied cravat, most agreeably discolored with snuff from top to bottom."

Rainy Days Can Be Happy Ones for Youngsters

Dislike of Having an Upset House Selfish Reason for Spoiling Their Fun.

"Things the Children Can Make" is the name of a fully written leaflet by Gladys Huntington Bevans. It requires a large, 3 cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request. If you wish the double sized gift leaflet containing additional suggestions and directions it will be necessary to send double postage and a very large envelope.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

WHEN I was a little girl I used to adore rainy days, not just because I loved rain [an inherited affection] but because it seemed to make things so cozy.

At school—I went to a strict, old-fashioned public school with high scholastic standards, discipline would relax delightfully. Many of the children would stay home then, so the few who were there were allowed quite a bit of freedom. We even could talk to each other, and "help teacher" by sharpening pencils and cleaning blackboards and perhaps, if we were good spellers, we sometimes were given spelling papers to correct.

At home things were so cozy that I used to weigh the joys of being at home against the joys of being at school, and sometimes the former would win out and I'd beg not to go back after lunch. We lived in a big, old-fashioned house which had in the dining room one of those inefficient stoves known as a Baltimore heater, the kind that has lots of little doors fitted with isinglass through which the fire glows cheerfully.

Would Return to Listen to Adventure Stories.

There we'd sit reading, or painting, or drawing, or sewing on especially delectable scraps of satin or velvet.

We sometimes deserted the dining room for the kitchen, only to come back later to listen to stories of Indian adventure and doings on the high seas told by an uncle who never had left the city pavements [but made us thing he had!], or to hear, fascinated, funny impromptu jingles in which we were the characters, jingles made up and sung by the same uncle who had no sense whatever of rhythm or tune, but a good notion of how to amuse children.

I can't clearly recall what else we did, but I do remember that we children all loved rainy days at home.

And we still do.

When my rôle became that of mother instead of child, rainy days often were the occasion for letting work slide and doing something special, or for doing ordinary things in a special way.

We mothers, I think, don't sense how constantly busy we seem to our children. A mother who really enjoys her child, was amazed one day to have her little daughter announce: "Mommie, you're always so busy doing things, all the time doing things, you never seem to have any time for me." I'm sure many children feel that way.

If you'll ignore your sense of duty about chores, and just take some time out to be with the children, rainy days can be red letter days, cozy, colorful, and entertaining, even if the skies are gray. And sometimes this atmosphere produces one of those rare moods in which we get to know our children better.

If you want to make rainy days pleasant instead of fretful, discontented times, there's one thing you have to be reconciled to, besides expecting to give up time, and that is, to having the house upset.

Dressing up, for instance, does that to your orderly home. Giving charades or plays does it still more. Of course an attic is a wonderful help that way, but somehow we've never had a big story book attic in any of our houses. Most people haven't. So lots of things that are fun to do on rainy days will upset your house, especially if you live in a small apartment.

All of those thrilling make-believe games for which the children use chairs and blankets also make, for the time being, a rather chaotic looking house. You know most of these, I hope. Being shipwrecked, being pirates, camping out, may all take place under a blanket tent with the aid of a flashlight, a lantern, a pistol, and some "rations" from the kitchen.

Chairs Make an Elegant Pretend Railroad Train.

Neither does the long railroad train [using all the chairs in the house] make for an orderly menage. But what do you care, as the bell rings and the whistle blows and "All aboard" sounds, followed by the lusty, serious "choo! choo! choo!" of the starting engine? If you suggest it before the children are too tired or too hungry, the chairs [or blankets, or other paraphernalia] willingly will be replaced.

Other things the children, young or older, enjoy doing on a rainy day create, perhaps, less disorder and confusion. Cutting, pasting, sewing, carpentry can't be carried on at all and certainly not happily, if you're going to be fussy about a mess.

Surely you'd rather have a messy house [temporarily] than a lot of messy dispositions, wouldn't you? Suppose you haven't one of these ideal playroom workrooms for your children that we read about in magazines and that so few of us have? Suppose your quarters are small? Then let your son make his ship or airplane models on the dining room table, or actually do his sawing and planing on the living room floor. I like an orderly, attractive home as well as you do, and I know all these things can be done. Why? Because I've done them myself under difficult as well as favorable conditions.

Of course all the nice rainy day things there are to be done needn't stand the house on its ear. Some of them, such as reading or being read to, story telling and listening to music, don't make any disorder at all. With many other rains day occupations the disorder can be confined to a small space. The important thing is for the mother of the family to have the right sort of rainy day spirit.

This subject will be continued tomorrow.

Mrs. Bevans' column also appears in the Tribune on Monday and every other weekday.

Trend Toward Lovelier Home Accessories

Exquisite Lamps Reflect the Greater Elegance of Fall Furniture and Draperies.

The story of some of the famous earthenwares and porcelains is told in "Learn About China Before You Buy," a booklet by Claire Winslow. This handy little brochure for your reference shelves is 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

By Claire Winslow.

THE trend toward more elaborate and beautiful accessories is the echo of that greater elegance to be found in furniture and draperies this season. The shops are showing merchandise, imported objets d'art, antique porcelains, and glass and modern ceramics that have not been available for years in the American market. It is an encouraging sign of the times.

Take the field of lamps, for example. It has been possible to buy models of superior quality and workmanship, but until this fall the variety and the quantity have been limited. A woman did not have many high grade lamps from which to choose, no matter how much money she wanted to spend.

Now her main problem will be how to make up her mind which of the great supply of handsome, distinctive ones she likes the best. She will be able to purchase exquisite Lenox porcelain vases and urns with shades of corresponding beauty. She'll see Spode, too, that choice English china with a history centuries old, made up into interesting table lights.

Rose and White Spode Sugar Bowl Lamp Base.

One clever designer has taken a stunning rose and white Spode sugar bowl for a lamp base. He also has made the same use, oddly enough, of a coffee pot, cover and all. It is in the lovely old tower design in soft tones of brown and white, and has been given an appropriate old English silver metal mounting and a handsome shade in ecru Corean silk. Needless to say, it is a most original lamp and one smart enough for any room in your home.

The same firm has used crystal drops and clear crystal balls to catch the glow of several other types of lamps. For early American rooms it shows quaint pewter candlesticks with taperlike lights. Victorian furnishings are complemented by the perfectly round, opaque glass shaded affairs reminiscent of marble topped center tables and family photograph albums.

For the living room of no particular period there are the gorgeously colored Rookwood pottery lamps. One I saw in the Merchandise Mart in a deep, glowing red called oxblood, was especially rich looking. It was manufactured by a Chicago firm, the same one making the other model described.

Another table lamp, and one unique in design, is pictured today. It is eighteenth century English in feeling, with its two candlelike lights and its solid toned dark metal shade. This shade is adjustable, a nice feature. It is finished in blue-black on the outside and white inside.

Just beneath it, and in the warmth of the light, is a receptacle for the greenery of plants. Several little potted ferns or ivy can be accommodated. Their foliage is really charming seen against the Sheffield silver of the lamp base. This model, because of its material and its special design, is not inexpensive.

For the bedroom there are any number of fascinating pastel tinted dressing table lamps. Some of the smartest I saw in the display of a New York firm at the Merchandise Mart. They are available in several Chicago stores.

Frilly Bands of Plaited Ruching Decorate Shades.

The beautiful ones photographed for you are seen on a painted dressing table of the French poudreuse type. They are exquisitely feminine because of the treatment of the translucent shades. At the tops are frilly bands of plaited ruching tied with narrow turquoise ribbons and bows.

The bases of crystal balls rest on squares of pale green architectural glass. This company is featuring a group of extremely pretty bedroom lamps, all with glass bases of various kinds. The shades are out of the ordinary and most attractive.

Figurines, from the old fashioned Dresden china shepherdess type to pure white and brightly colored Chinese nobles and goddesses, will grace many a living room table as lamps this winter. They lend an exotic touch to an interior, an accent that deepens the beauty of the furnishings.

So if you want a truly distinguished lamp, now is the time to buy.

CRYSTAL AND SILVER

What could be more attractive for a young girl's dressing table than a pair of crystal ball lamps wearing shades of a translucent material? Especially when they are topped by bands of frilly plaiting and turquoise ribbons. These come from New York and are sold in Chicago stores. Seen at the Merchandise Mart.

Questions Before the House

DEAR MRS. BARGELT: We have had an estimate on some new paint work and the painter thinks the all new woodwork in a remodeled part of the house should be given three coats of paint. Do you think it is necessary? It seems an extravagance to us. Mr. W. D.

ANSWER: It may not be absolutely necessary, but it is not an extravagance. You will find it an economy in the end.

Refugees from Spain Finding Way to Paris

Two Titled Exiles Guests at Estate of Duc and Duchesse de Talleyrand.

By May Birkhead.

As was to be expected, some of the refugees from Spain are finding their way to Paris. Two of them

PARIS recently were guests of the Duc and Duchesse de Talleyrand [Anna Gould] at their property, Le Marais, about 40 miles from Paris. The exiles from Spain preferred not to talk of the terrible things they had seen, and they both considered themselves fortunate to have escaped with their lives. They were accompanied by Clifford B. Harmon who lived for some years in Barcelona and who recently went back there to put a sign on his house that would indicate it belonged to an American.

One of the guests, a distinguished and remarkably handsome woman, Marquesa de Marianao, with violet blue eyes and long lashes, had been thrown into an improvised prison in Barcelona, and one day heard the Reds debating whether they would shoot or burn her. She contrived by keeping her eyes open, to escape, and had the luck to find some of her money and jewels. The British consulate gave her protection and passage on a British cruiser to Marseilles. From there she came to Paris.

Likewise numbered among the Whites, as they prefer to call themselves, was another guest, the Conde de Güell, Marques de Comillas, each of whose Spanish estates, with castles, he said, was larger than Le Marais. He is a grandee of Spain, and his treasures include—or did—some remarkable works of art, particularly sculpture, which he managed to have put in the Museum of Fine Arts in Barcelona, and hopes will be saved. He was wearing a plaid sports costume, the only clothes he could salvage, with a blue stock, whiplike pin, and yellow sweater. He got away with only $20. A day or two later we saw him at the Ritz with Prince Andrew of Greece.

The Duchesse de Talleyrand, who has been spending much of the late summer at Le Marais, a historic property with a famous promenade around the small lake, or miroir, as it was called in the 18th century, has just gone to Cap Ferrat on the Riviera, where she is installing an indoor swimming pool in the villa which she acquired alongside the one she has had there for several years.

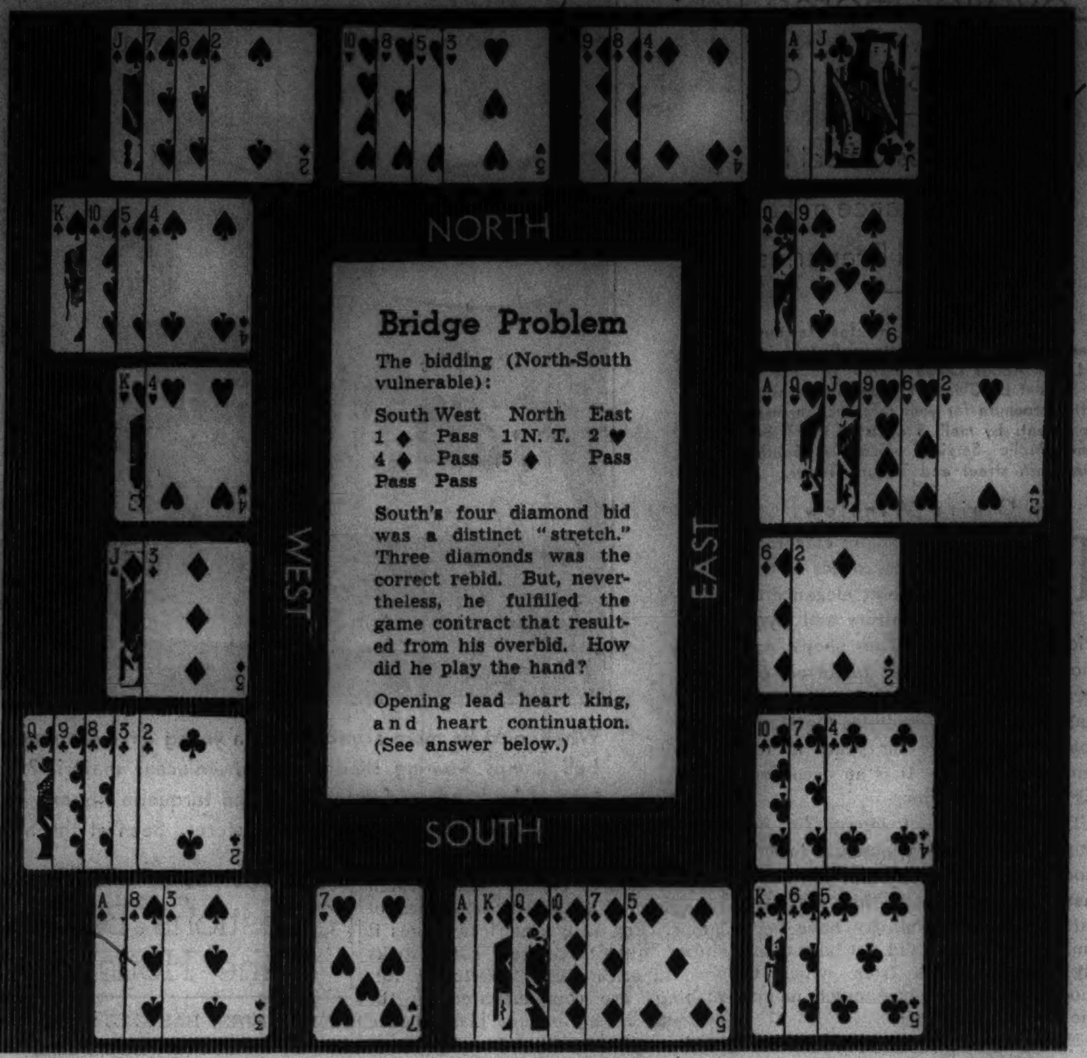
Contract According to Culbertson



ANSWER: South ruffed second lead and drew two rounds of trumps, finessed to club jack, led a heart and ruffed it. Led to club ace; ruffed last heart. Cashed club king; then led ace and another spade. West had to duck or drop East's queen. East won with queen, but had to return a heart, on which declarer discarded his only remaining loser, while dummy ruffed.

Response Vital Link in Chain of Bidding

By Ely Culbertson

IN ALMOST every bidding chain the response to the opening bid is at once the most important link and the most difficult to forge. The opening bid may be likened to the starting mechanism of an automobile; the response corresponds to the steering gear. And what a delicate, easily dislocated steering device it is! In the hands of an expert driver, dangerous obstacles are avoided, hazardous detours negotiated in a maximum of safety. But too heavy or too insecure a hand on the wheel is more apt than not to ram the vehicle head-on against a lurking telegraph post.

The function of the first response requires packing a lot of information into an uncomfortably small space, viz., one round of bidding. Not only must the responder disclose his honor strength (within fairly narrow limits), or, equally important, his lack of honor strength, but he must also roughly describe the type of his hand from the distributional point of view. Finally, in many cases he can give immediate assurance of a "fit" with the opening bid.

The various responses that may be made to an opening one bid do not form a hodge-podge or stew from which a player should fish at random for a potato, a carrot, or a chunk of solid meat. The matter of selection is much more scientific, and for this reason: Responses form a scale, something on the order of a color chart. It becomes the relatively simple matter of selecting the proper color to harmonize with a certain hand.

But let us be explicit. Suppose your partner opens the bidding with one heart, the next opponent passes, and you hold one of the following hands:

1.—♠ K 10 4 3 2 ♥ Q 4 3 2 ♦ 3 2 ♣ 3 2
2.—♠ K 10 4 3 2 ♥ Q 4 3 ♦ 4 3 2 ♣ 3 2
3.—♠ 4 3 2 ♥ 3 2 ♦ Q 4 3 ♣ K 10 4 3 2
4.—♠ 4 3 2 ♥ K 10 4 3 2 ♦ 3 2 ♣ Q 3 2
5.—♠ 2 ♥ K 10 4 3 2 ♦ 3 2 ♣ Q 5 4 3 2

Please note that the honor value of all five hands remains the same—exactly one king and one queen, with a ten spot the only card above a five. Now let us consider the vastly different responses that should be made.

On hand 1 you need consider only two possible responses, either one spade or two hearts. The first is temporarily all right, but you ask yourself what you will do if your partner rebids his hearts. Should you then raise or pass? To avoid this possible embarrassment you figuratively wash your hands of the whole matter by choosing to bid two hearts right now. This relieves you of further responsibility. Your comparatively weak holding that includes support for partner's suit has been disclosed in one single bid.

Hand 2 is different from the first only in that a small heart has been changed into a small diamond. But that change is enough to leave you with only one expressive bid instead of the two choices you had before. Now you bid a spade; if partner rebids with two hearts you will not have the slightest qualm in promptly passing.

In hand 3 the five-card K-10 suit has been changed to a minor and you no longer have adequate trump support. The ranking nature of the suits now enters the picture—you cannot, as before, show your suit over partner's heart bid except at the expense and danger of increasing the contract. Rather than pay this price for the questionable advantage of showing partner your distribution you decide the possible gain is not worth the price and therefore compromise between this course and passing entirely by holding the bidding open with a noncommittal no trump. It is on this specific point that so many players go astray. They have never examined the reasons behind a no trump response to an opening-suit one bid, therefore summarily use this valuable device to indicate every hand that is not adequately furnished with honor tricks. The fact that a spade suit may be cheaply shown, whereas a minor suit may immediately increase the contract, seems to have made little or no impression on them. Yet it is the price (bidding level) of every response that should exercise enormous influence over choice of bids. What you can show cheaply should usually be shown.

Now examine hands 4 and 5. The heart (partner's) suit is the same in both, as is the diamond suit. One hand, however, has 5-3-3-2 distribution, the other 5-5-2-1. This difference is considerable, but hardly great enough in itself to justify the huge difference in the proper response with each hand. With hand 4 a single heart raise is the best we can do; with hand 5 we should jump all the way to four hearts. The latter bid (as I have said) is not induced merely by the increase in offensive power. Now we can logically and safely combine offensive hopes with defensive fears and make a combination game attempt and shutout bid on the assurance that we can never be severely hurt. A contract of four hearts on hand 4 might be crucified.

(This subject of responses will be continued in next Sunday's article.)

I have written so much about unnecessary finesses that I may have given the impression I despise all finesses. Far from it! A finesse on the following hand turned out to be a very good friend indeed!

NORTH
♥ Q 3

SOUTH

♣ A 3

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥ (final bid)

When West opened the diamond king and I saw my partner's hand I felt like thanking him for the vote of confidence expressed by his raise from three to four hearts. It probably had pained him no little, considering his "tripe."

I won the lead with the ace and promptly returned the suit, expecting to ruff my third diamond and eventually to concede only one spade and one club trick in addition to the diamond I was currently giving up. To my horror, however, east failed to follow suit on the second lead, and when West cruelly followed up his diamond queen with the lead of the ten I had to ruff it with dummy's heart queen or court a practically certain overuff of the three spot. With the queen gone from my resources, I now had to take serious thought about losing a trump trick to the ten spot. Since West had shown a seven-card diamond suit, it was extremely likely that trumps would not break 3-2, and, of course, East figured to have the long trumps to make up for his diamond deficiency. So, after ruffing the diamond with the heart queen, I led dummy's three and finessed my own nine spot. Fortune smiled and the contract came home after all.

Today's Questions

Question: Against no trump contracts, if one leads from a suit K J 10 4, what particular card should be chosen?

Answer: Usually the jack. With a poor outside hand, lead the four spot.

Question: I was about to lead from the dummy when I should have led from my own hand. Dummy spoke up and warned me. Of course, he had no right to do this, I know, but what was the penalty for his actual doing of it?

Answer: The left-hand opponent of the dummy may choose the hand from which he wishes the same suit to be led.

Skirts of Rare Theater Robes Found by Dealer

AMONG the treasures of the Metropolitan Museum of Art are to be found the coats of two elaborate eighteenth century court theater robes. The skirts of these rare and richly embroidered costumes had disappeared during the misfortunes which overtook the imperial court of China. The gorgeous costumes made the old Chinese court glow with color. A California dealer, after seeing a handbook of the exhibition, realized that he owned the missing skirts.

Ladies of Old Virginia Imported Their Finery

VIRGINIA ladies of the seventeenth century differed little from the English in their costumes, except that, being richer, they were better able to gratify their desire to shine and outshine. As they manufactured nothing in the south, all their finery was fresh from England. A Virginia lady, Mrs. Pritchard, in 1660, owned an olive colored silk petticoat, another of silk tabby, one of flowered tabby, one of velvet, and one of white striped dimity. Her printed calico gown was lined with blue silk. There were also a pair of scarlet sleeves and another of ruffled holland; also a pair of green stockings.

Gracefully Tailored Frock Styled for Figure Which Is Shorter than Average.

Fashion at your fingertips! With emphasis on current trends in styling, the new modes presented in the fall and winter edition of Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions offer you a complete wardrobe which you can create yourself. The booklet is 15 cents, or 10 cents when ordered with a pattern. Address Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

By Clotilde.

THE woman who is shorter than the average has a special problem in the selection of clothes. Most ready-made garments are too long in the waist and seldom are styled correctly. A frock which is properly designed will give an illusion of height and appear to minimize breadth.

The pattern illustrated today will be appreciated by women whose silhouettes involve the problem mentioned above. It is designed with a higher waistline, a paneled skirt, and soft lines to flatter the bust, waist, and hips. The frock features a pointed yoke with soft, draped neckline that buttons up snugly in the back and falls in graceful cowl folds in the front. The gores of the skirt create a well fitted hipline, a swing skirt, and give the appearance of height. The sleeves are long and full, in bell fashion. The belt is simple, serving only to distinguish the waistline without destroying the unity of line.

This attractive little dress, which fills such an important order, is designed for all types of daytime wear. It is tailored and yet dressy, and may go with perfect assurance to matinées, luncheons, bridge parties, teas, club functions, and dinner in the evening.

Satin back crêpe, crêpes with distinctive and modern weaves, novelty woolens and velvet all are lovely fabrics for this model. It is best to avoid large figured fabrics, because they have a way of shortening the silhouette, whereas plain colors and delicate patterns preserve the smooth flow of lines from shoulder line to hem. Any of the dark shades so popular this season will be appropriate, with black holding the spotlight this year as always. Wise women all know that black is a pal in any type of figure problem, since it flatters without being, in itself, obvious.

Style No. 2557 is designed for sizes 32½, 34½, 36½, 38½, 40½, and 42½ inches bust measurement. Size 36½ requires 4⅛ yards of 39 inch material.

Clotilde is a daily contributor to the Chicago Tribune, offering constructive information to women who enjoy making their own clothes, and presenting a fascinating pattern every day of the week.

INJUN SUMMER

Yep, sonny, this is sure enough Injun summer. Don't know what that is, I reckon, do you?

Well, that's when all the homesick Injuns come back to play. You know, a long time ago, long afore yer granddaddy was born even, there used to be heaps of Injuns around here—thousands—millions, I reckon, far as that's concerned. Reg'lar sure 'nough Injuns—none o' yer cigar store Injuns, not much. They wuz all around here—right here where you're standin'.

They all went away and died, so they ain't no more left.

But every year, 'long about now, they all come back, leastways their sperrits do. They're here now. You can see 'em off across the fields. Look real hard. See that kind o' hazy, misty look out yonder? Well, them's Injuns—Injun sperrits marchin' along an' dancin' in the sunlight. That's what makes that kind o' haze that's everywhere—it's jest the sperrits of the Injuns all come back. They're all around us now.

See off yonder; see them tepees? They kind o' look like corn shocks from here, but them's Injun tents, sure as you're a foot high. See 'em now? Sure, I knowed you could. Smell that smoky sort o' smell in the air? That's the campfires a-burnin' and their pipes a-goin'.

Lots o' people say it's just leaves burnin', but it ain't. It's the campfires, an' th' Injuns are hoppin' 'round 'em t' beat the old Harry.

You jest come out here tonight when the moon is hangin' over the hill off yonder an' the harvest fields is all swimmin' in the moonlight, an' you can see the Injuns and the tepees jest as plain as kin be. You can, eh? I knowed you would after a little while.

Jever notice how the leaves turn red 'bout this time o' year? That's jest another sign o' redskins. That's when an old Injun sperrit gits tired dancin' an' goes up an' squats on a leaf t' rest. Why, I kin hear 'em rustlin' an' whisperin' an' creepin' 'round among the leaves all the time; an' ever' once'n a while a leaf gives way under some fat old Injun ghost and comes floatin' down to the ground. See—here's one now. See how red it is? That's the war paint rubbed off'n an Injun ghost, sure's you're born.

Purty soon all the Injuns'll go marchin' away agin, back to the happy huntin' ground, but next year you'll see 'em troopin' back—th' sky jest hazy with 'em and their campfires smolderin' away jest like they are now.

Helen Jerome Adapts Novel by Jane Austen

Englishwoman Also Has 'Jane Eyre,' 'Charlotte Corday' in Reserve.

By Charles Collins.

THE skill of the dramatization of Jane Austen's novel, "Pride and Prejudice," which is now giving audiences in the Harris theater a happy taste of Georgian manners and character, arouses interest in the author who arranged this classic story for the stage. She is a new writer and deserves an introduction. Helen Jerome is her name, and England is her habitat.

About two years ago she started to write a play about Charlotte Corday, the French girl who ended the career of the bloodthirsty revolutionist, Marat, by stabbing him while he was in his bathtub. She had had a dream about this historical incident and decided that this was an inspiration for a drama with the French revolution as its background. She immediately plunged into research on this subject.

One night, when she was weary of grubbing through libraries, she picked up "Pride and Prejudice," one of her favorite novels, to read as an antidote. She felt that the tranquility of English country life as depicted by Jane Austen would be an excellent means of relaxation. Jane herself lived through the revolutionary and Napoleonic periods, but the political and military whirlwinds of the time never disturbed the calm of her secluded life in English parsonages. Her works are the most sedative novels ever written.

Novel Stirred Playwriting Fever.

But Miss Jerome did not find the rest that she sought for in the pages of "Pride and Prejudice." She felt, instead, a new urge to playwriting; here, she said to herself, is the material for a play, almost made to order; beneath the placid surface of this smoothly running stream of conversation and description was an excellent plot. Moreover, the characters had the sharply marked form that the stage requires. Elizabeth Bennet, Darcy, the Rev. Collins, the Lady Catherine de Bourgh are, as many literary critics have remarked, notable additions to the great gallery of British character in fiction.

Miss Jerome immediately put her "Charlotte Corday" aside and went to work on an adaptation of "Pride and Prejudice" for the theater. She followed the story closely, but did not restrict herself to a close adherence of Miss Austen's dialog, which is so good that it might easily tempt a dramatizer to lift it from the printed page. Much of the dialog of the play is Miss Jerome's, based, of course, on the Austen manner but also borrowing its rhythms from the freer flowing dialog of classic Georgian comedies, such as Sheridan's.

"Jane Eyre" for New York Theater Guild.

The result was the "Pride and Prejudice" which Chicago may see at the Harris theater after its long run in New York last season. The play's Broadway success was soon duplicated in London, where it was produced last spring and is still running.

Before she started on "Charlotte Corday" Miss Jerome had written a dramatization of another classic of English fiction—Charlotte Bronte's "Jane Eyre." Producers had passed it by, but last spring, with the London première of "Pride and Prejudice" as evidence that this new writer had the proper touch for such material, Sir Barry Jackson staged it in Birmingham, and then made it a feature of the summer drama festival at Malvern, England. The New York Theater Guild has placed "Jane Eyre" on its schedule for the present season. "Charlotte Corday" will also figure on the New York playbills under the management of Brock Pemberton.

There were two other plays in Miss Jerome's manuscript basket which will probably be snapped up by the impresarios. One of them, first called "The Enchanting Hussy," now bears the title "Cointreau." The other deals with the romantic exploits of the American naval hero, John Paul Jones. She is at present writing a new work around the biography of another historical character whose identity is not yet revealed.

Leading Players in "Pride and Prejudice."

The leading players in "Pride and Prejudice" also deserve indentification. Here are a few facts to jog playgoers' memories:

Muriel Kirkland [Elizabeth Bennet]: She has been prominent in New York casts for the last ten years, but has not toured often. Her Chicago appearances include "Strictly Dishonorable," at the Adelphi; "The Greeks Had a Word for It," at the Harris, and "Squaring the Circle," at the Blackstone [last winter].

Lowell Gilmore [Mr. Darcy]: He has had three seasons with the Theater Guild in costume and period plays. He acted Darnley with Helen Hayes in "Mary of Scotland"; the Lord in the Induction scene of "The Taming of the Shrew," with Lunt and Fontanne, and Maj. André in "Valley Forge" [not seen in Chicago].

Robert Conness [Mr. Bennet]: A veteran who started in the early years of this century in Augustus Thomas' "Alabama." He has appeared with various stars such as Mary Mannering, Blanche Walsh, Mme. Nazimova, and Louis Mann. His latest engagement was in "Elizabeth the Queen."

Molly Pearson [Mrs. Bennet]: She came from England about twenty years ago in the Scotch comedy, "Beauty Pulls the Strings," and has been a prominent comedienne ever since. Her last New York engagement was in "Lady Precious Stream."

Run for Classic.

"Pride and Prejudice" will remain at the Harris theater for a run. The week of Oct. 19 will be the last that the play will be under the American Theater Society subscription plan.

IN VICTOR HERBERT OPERETTA

Olsen's Band Is Coming to Marine Room

With two assistants he will teach Casino patrons on Thursday, Friday and Saturday between 4 and 6 p. m. without charge.

● Miles and Kover, adagio dancers, replaced Raoul and Eva Reyes, Rhumba dancers, in the Empire room floor show every Thursday. The balance of the bill remains unchanged. It includes Ruth Aarons and Sandor Glancz, table tennis champions, in their exhibition at the ten o'clock show.

FIFTH ANNUAL HOBBY SHOW
Opens Tomorrow—Oct. 19-24, Inclusive
One Week—11 A. M. to 11 P. M.—Daily
STEVENS HOTEL (Exposition Hall)

Q. What is the Hobby Show?
A. It is an exposition of all kinds of material that is collected by private individuals as a hobby. It attracted 48,000 people last year. It has increased every year. At the past ratio of increase it will be 60,000 this year.

Q. Where do these collectors come from?
A. At least 10,000 private collectors and museum curators come from the central west cities where such material is not obtainable.

Q. Why do museum curators attend?
A. Because the best of these collections eventually find their way into the museums. Besides, dealers in curios from all parts of the world use this show as a center of contacting museum men looking for curios and rarities of every kind.

Q. What class of people are these collectors?
A. They are men and women who have leisure time and more money than they need for necessary expenses.

Q. What are the principal collections shown?
A. Antiques, stamps, coins, curios, rare books, oil paintings, autographs, glass and china, models, antique jewelry, antique musical instruments, laces, firearms, Indian relics, old prints, gems and minerals, antique rugs, oriental arts, wood carvings, Lincolniana, textiles.

A. Match labels, cigar bands, advertising posters, old dime novels, circus history, natural history, minerals.

Q. Is the public invited?
A. The public is welcome at a small admission fee of 25c. It makes a wonderfully educational and entertaining show to see the collections and watch the collectors buying, selling and trading.

THE PUBLIC IS INVITED TO BRING FOR SALE to the exhibitors any historical material. Search through your trunks and attics and bring old manuscripts, land grants with presidential signatures, documents, old envelopes with and without stamps, old coins, antique firearms, unusual books, curios, oddities, antique rugs, unusual jewelry, early American dolls, early American pattern glass, spinning wheels, furniture 100 years old.

Such material must be brought between the hours of 11 a. m. and noon each day.

Q. Is there any charge to the public for this service?
A. No.

Q. Why is the Chicago Hobby Show larger than the London Connoisseurs' Exposition?
A. Because the Chicago show is conducted along popular lines and in the spirit of the central west. Here our millionaires make a crony of their gardener if they both have the same hobby—perhaps they both collect antique firearms. The wealthy woman hobnobs with the school teacher when they both collect early American glassware. The Hobby Show is now the third largest annual event in Chicago and of increasing importance to the city. If you have not heretofore attended, it is time you found out what it is all about. No show can steadily increase its attendance without genuine merit. It is the most fascinating show you ever attended.

Sponsored by HOBBIES, The Magazine for Collectors. On sale at all newsstands.
Collectors are urged to attend in the daytime so as to avoid the popular crowds at night.

Some apparently intelligent people tell me that in order to be successful it is necessary to sell liquor in our ballroom.

Would these twisted mentalities dare suggest the sale of liquor in our high schools and colleges?

We have no objection to liquor in its proper place. We have always been opposed to prohibition. Yet we know from years of experience in handling millions of young people that next to our schools and colleges the ballroom of today and the movies have become in part the training camp for the youth of the nation.

Therefore we know liquor has no place in our ballroom where your son and daughter seek dancing and entertainment.

Season's Prospects Bright for City Opera Opening Oct. 31

Success Seen Artistically, Financially

Galli-Curci One of Many Distinguished Artists on Company's Roster.

By Edward Barry.

WITH the opening of the Chicago City Opera company's season only thirteen days away, the Wacker drive offices are humming with two different kinds of activity. One corps is tussling with problems of contracts, schedules, and casting. Another is busy boosting ticket sales and subscriptions. Here are brief summaries of what has been accomplished and announced to date in both general divisions.

From a news standpoint, the second debut of Amelita Galli-Curci tops everything. Her Nov. 17 appearance on the stage of the Civic Opera house, twenty years almost to the day after that tumultuous Saturday afternoon in 1916 when the old Auditorium rocked with the discovery that the great soprano of our time had at last revealed herself, will be the famous diva's first public appearance since an operation for goiter a year ago last summer. Her rôle? That is still a dee[p se]cret, although Mimi in "La Bohême" has been talked of.

Five Renowned Singers to Make Chicago Debuts.

More important even than this, from other viewpoints than pure news value, is the announcement that five internationally renowned singers who have never yet graced an operatic stage in Chicago are to repair the omission this winter. Grace Moore, Lily Pons, Marjorie Lawrence, Gertrud Wettergren, and Friedrich Schorr compose the new quintet. Others of equal fame under contract for one or more appearances are Jepson, Rethberg, Burke, Martinelli, Melchior, Bonelli, Tibbet, Thomas, List, and Pinza.

Even better known to this town are Tito Schipa and Giacomo Rimini, who are both returning this year. The familiar names of the great Rosa Raisa and Ed[ith] Mason still decorate the roster. So do those of Tokatyan, Bentonelli, Chamlee, Morelli, Baromeo, and a host of others who helped make last year's stormy season a success.

Among the newcomers are Vivian Della Chiesa and Janice Porter [both on important radio programs], Elizabeth Brown [who broke into big time from the University of Chicago's production of "Svanda" last spring], and Betty Jaynes. This last is a lassie of 15. She entered the limelig[ht th]is summer as soloist at a Grant park concert.

Noted Hungarian Artist Imported by City Opera.

Stephano Ballarini, who, despite his name, is billed as a Hungarian, comes to the company from Europe, where his handling of various baritone rôles is said to have won wide praise.

Information on actual schedules and casts is meager. "Die Walküre" will be intrusted to Marjorie Lawrence, Lauritz Melchior, Emanuel List, and Friedrich Schorr. "Jack and the Beanstalk" [a new work by Louis Gruenberg of "Emperor Jones" fame] to Matyas, Diano, Barova, Huehn, and Love. Jepson plays Louise in the opera of that name; Bentonelli and Claessens, Julien and mother, respectively.

The latter work is due Nov. 14. Della Chiesa's debut as Mimi in "La Bohême" comes the next night. The date of "Walküre," with its spectacular cast, has not yet been announced.

In addition to "Jack and the Beanstalk," there is a good chance that all or most of the following novelties and revivals will se[e] the stage: "Gianni Schicchi," "The Bartered Bride," "Otello," "La Juive," "Lakme."

The opening bill is "La Fiamma," with Raisa, Bentonelli, Barova, and Morelli, the same cast which gave two successful "Fiammas" last year. It will be a pre-season, nonsubscription presentation on Oct. 31.

The subscription performances start Nov. 2 and fill each Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday night and Saturday afternoon until Dec. 12. There will be occasional Thursday and Sunday operas and at least one on Tuesday. Galli-Curci's second debut, Nov. 17, falls on that night.

Now about the seat sales, which are not going badly. If a company can dispose of one-quarter of its space in the form of subscriptions, then the pre-season work has been well done. The Chicago City opera people have already reached the 25 per cent mark and expect to touch 30 by next Wednesday, when the subscription drive closes. They are already $25,000 above last year. Season tickets [six weekly performances] cost $4.50 to $24. Individual seats will sell from 75 cents to $4 when the box office opens next Saturday.

Footnote: The opera company is holding open house next Saturday from 1 to 6. For 50 cents you can meet singers, watch a rehersal, snoop around backstage, and listen to the several short lectures which will punctuate the afternoon.

Musical Novelty Comes to Orchestra Hall Today.

A genuine musical novelty comes to Orchestra hall this afternoon. Mercado's Tipica Mexican orchestra, with singers and dancers in tow, moves into those dignified surroundings for two hours of gay, sentimental, colorful Latin music.

This is the first American tour of Mercado's orchestra. Judging by his program, the director believes in variety, for there are hardly two numbers in a row without a change of some sort. Instrumental music gives way to a singer, the singer to a dance team.

The latter consists of Luis and Josefina Ijeda, who have an appearance in Radio City music hall to their credit. They danced in Columbia university's Mexican program, too, which puts the stamp of authenticity on their performances of southern routines. The whole show will be brightly and lavishly costumed.

Ganz and Reuter on Same Program This Afternoon.

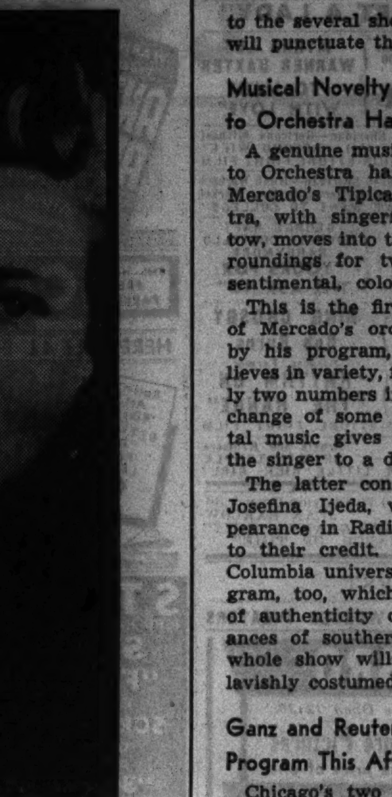
Chicago's two famous Rudolphs—Ganz and Reuter—work together this afternoon in the Blackstone theater, the former as guest conductor of the Illinois Symphony orchestra, the latter as soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto. For the purely orchestral portions of the program Mr. Ganz has settled on the Berlioz "Carnival Romain" overture, Tschaikowsky's moving "Romeo and Juliet" fantasy [which plays such an important part in the movie], the Beethoven Third "Leonore," and a work by Max Wald, new to Chicago. "The Dancer Dead—a pagan epitaph" its composer calls it.

Edmund Kurtz, new principal cello of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, appears as soloist this Thursday and Friday in the Dvorak concerto.

Four operas not yet given by the San Carlo company this fall come to performance before Oct. 26, the last day of the season. Rossini's merry "Barber of Seville" brightens the Auditorium stage tomorrow evening. "Rigoletto" is due Wednesday, "La Tosca" Friday. On Monday, Oct. 26, "Samson and Delilah" will be sung as the first downtown offering in Northwestern university's History and Enjoyment of Music course. The public is invited, even urged, to come.

CHICAGO WAS KIND

Janice Porter, a southern girl who decided to try her luck here last spring. A nice soprano voice won her a good spot in radio, then a contract with the Chicago City Opera company. Her name appears on the long roster of singers, some world famous, some just making a start, who promise the town a gala six weeks' opera season this year. The first performance, Respighi's "La Fiamma," comes a week from Saturday, Oct. 31.



Many Recitals Scheduled for Coming Week

Amy Neil, distinguished Chicago violinist, will have the assistance of Agnes Conover, pianist, and Mildred Cable, soprano, in a concert to be given today at the Medinah club, 505 N. Michigan avenue, for the benefit of the blind. The music starts at 3.

A joint recital by Sylvia Libkin, soprano, and Bruce Grimes, bass, opens the Kimball hall season this afternoon. There are several groups of solos, and the duo "La Ci Darem" from Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

George Sinanian, a violinist, who won first prize at the National Conservatory of Paris, plays a recital this afternoon in Thorne hall. He starts with the "Devil's Trill" of Tartini.

The Metropolitan Community church of which J. Wesley Jones is musical director, is holding a music festival this week to celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of the church's famous choir.

The first concert of the Chicago Artists' association's new season is scheduled for Tuesday night in Curtiss hall. Nelle Richmond Eberhart and Charles Wakefield Cadman, librettist and composer, respectively, are to be the guests of honor.

David Van Vactor, flutist, and the Philharmonic String quartet play at the Chicago Woman's club Wednesday afternoon. All five artists are members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

The Winnetka Music club opens its brilliant 1936-'37 season with a recital by Lauritz Melchior, the great Danish tenor. The other artists in this year's series are the American duo-pianists, Vera Brodsky and Harold Triggs; Marian Anderson, contralto; Albert Spalding, violinist, and Myra Hess, pianist.

The Chicago Bach chorus is already busy with preparations for the first concert of its season, scheduled for Nov. 29. There are openings in the choir for singers who can qualify. Drop in at rehersal some Thursday evening at the recital hall on the seventh floor of the Auditorium building, or write Theodore Lams, the director, at 1230 Hood avenue, Chicago.

The Musicians' Club of Women will sponsor recitals this season by two world famous artists, Ezio Pinza and Ruggerio Ricci. Mr. Pinza, the bass-baritone who sang the name parts of "Mefistofele" and "Don Giovanni" with the resident opera company here last year, is to make his recital appearance in Orchestra hall on Nov. 22. The violinist will be heard March 8.

The Jooss ballet is returning to the United States this year. Chicago saw the famous troupe in two performances last February and will have three such opportunities a few weeks hence. There is to be an evening showing on Nov. 3 and an afternoon and evening, Nov. 8.

The Temple Emanuel sisterhood, which sponsored last season a series of four concerts in the north side temple, is planning a similar enterprise this year.

Suburbanites Really Crooks in This Movie

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

Just a nice, cozy, domestic picture about some pleasant suburbanites!

That's the sort of film you think "36 Hours to Kill" is going to be as you watch the opening scenes.

But it fools you!

Before you can say Jack Robinson, or equivalent, you're hurtled into melodrama, enacted aboard a speeding train, and have made the acquaintance of crooks, gunmen and ladies in distress. It is all very exciting, even if, at times, the action does overstep the line of credibility.

Villain-in-Chief of the Piece Is a Public Enemy.

The villain-in-chief is a public enemy, whom you first meet hiding with his sweetheart and a stooge in a suburb, disguised as a young married man who loves flowers. He learns that under an alias, "Little Boy Blue," he has won a fortune in a sweepstakes lottery.

He decides to take a chance and collect. Which decision brings him aboard the aforementioned train and into plenty of grief.

It becomes his fate to meet a G-man masquerading as a newspaper reporter, and to fall in love with the same girl, to whom the latter has lost his heart.

His penchant for this girl spells final curtains for him at the hands of the madly adoring moll he'd left behind him.

And so, zippily, to a sensational and satisfactory finale.

Brian Donlevy, Douglas Fowley Play Roles with Snap.

Brian Donlevy as the hunter, and Douglas Fowley as the prey play with plenty of snap. Gloria Stuart is luscious as the nice girl, and Isabel Jewell is competent—and pathetic—as the discarded flower.

See you tomorrow!

IT MAY BE LOVE

This may be love—but, judging from the expressions on the faces of the embracers, it's the sort of love that poets describe as "such sweet agony." Gloria Stuart and Brian Donlevy look thus in "36 Hours to Kill." State-Lake.

Double-Headers

"DOUBLE-HEADERS" are a feature of the current stage season in New York. Two Hamlets and two Napoleons are on the schedule, and another duplication seems likely. The already announced "Charlotte Corday," by Helen Jerome, may find rivalry in "Charlotte Corday," by Kingsley and Jeanette Benedict, a couple of film scenarists. It is intended as a vehicle for Anna Sten.

Play for Grace George.

In November William A. Brady will present Grace George in "There Was I," adapted by herself and James Forbes from Louis Verneil's comedy, "Le Mariage de Maman." The play was seen last July at the Westport [Conn.] Country playhouse.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Dear Miss Tinée: For gosh sakes, Mae, go see "Satan Met a Lady" [unless you already have seen it], and see the silliest, most assinine, conglomeration of amateur make-believe you ever viewed in your life. This picture positively is the worst insult to the moviegoer's intelligence ever perpetrated, and to think that such a splendid actress as Bette Davis lends support to the numskull who directed it! As long as I live I never shall forget the snickers and jeers that came from the audience that witnessed this atrocity. The entire performance reminded me of children playing "cops and robbers."

Another splendid actor, Arthur Treacher, by his performance made a veritable jackass of himself. And as for Warren William—words fail me. He acted as if he were the rankest amateur of all and, as bad as Wini Shaw was, Warren was even worse.

I can prove that I am in complete possession of all my mental faculties, but after leaving the theater I wondered whether something had snapped inside me or if I really saw what I did. I can't understand how the producers ever could hope to ram this down the throats of the moviegoers. AMI NUTZ?

Editor's note: And they call me a severe critic! Zowie!

Dear Miss Tinée: For the benefit of the public at large, will you kindly suggest to those producers who insist upon interpolating a bit of astrology into their films that they please, please, please hire one or more competent astrologers to pass upon the script before it is released?

I recently saw "Parole," an excellent picture spoiled by some bad astrology. In this picture, Boss Mallard, who is interested in astrology, subjects the paroled convict, whom he intends to use for certain nefarious purposes, to the following examination:

Mallard: "When were you born?"
Whalen: "In March."
Mallard: "O, you're Aries. I'm Scorpio. We should get along together very well."

A statement calculated to make any honest astrologer tear his hair.

For the benefit of Hollywood, only those born after March 21 belong to Aries; those prior thereto belong to Pisces, in which latter case the statement of Boss Mallard would have been substantially correct.

Many people today are interested in astrology, but if we are to get it in pictures, let's get it right. The above is not the only instance.

Thanks! LADY LIBRA.

Editor's note: Maybe they were only kidding.

NOT REALLY A TRAGEDY

Binnie Barnes and Victor McLaglen look here as if it were not too much of a tragedy to find themselves together. They have important roles in "The Magnificent Brute." (Palace.)

Divorce Suit Attracts New Interest in Friendship

By Special Correspondent

London, Eng.

WHEN a bachelor with a brilliant reputation as a gay blade among the ladies starts running around with a married woman, to the complete exclusion of all other feminine aspirants to his attentions, people will talk, no matter what social level is represented by this familiar situation. If it happens in the slums the tongues of Mrs. Hawkins and Mrs. O'Grady will clatter away across the clothes lines; if in the suburbs, there will be lively gossiping at bridge parties and the golf club; if in "society," there will be cynical epigrams at cocktail parties and, maybe, some tittle-tattle by newspaper columnists.

But if the hero of the theoretical romance stands in the white light that beats upon a throne of far-flung empire the whole world, or a large part of it, will start talking with impudent democratic vigor. There will be shush-shushing among diplomats, courtiers, and press censors, of course, but the human race, which dearly loves a scandal or the threat of one in somebody else's house, will whisper and gossip and grin until the incident, possibly trivial and ephemeral, will begin to seem like a matter of international concern.

This is a condition to which the British Empire, with its globe encircling dominions and colonies, is trying to adjust itself, with characteristic racial phlegm covering its social embarrassment. The house toward which the finger of gossip is pointing is that of the royal family of England; the gay blade of the sophisticated incident is his Britannic Majesty Edward VIII., new to the throne and not yet formally crowned.

The incident reached the point of legal record on Oct. 14 when its heroine, Mrs. Ernest Aldrich Simpson, filed suit for divorce from her husband in the English courts.

You Americans who are telling each other the story with much more candor than your British cousins will doubtless remember that the Edward VIII. used to be the young man called the prince of Wales, who was known to some of you informally, when he enjoyed the hospitality of the great English speaking republic, as David Windsor. Possibly you will remark that David is running true to form and will praise him for his frankness in playing the game, whatever it is, openly and aboveboard. His sense of the etiquet that the situation demands appears to have an American tinge.

And certainly you will be compelled to admire his taste in the selection of his friend—his great friend, to place the right emphasis upon the word. Your national pride is neatly tied up with this case, for his majesty's favorite companion is an American woman. Like the Miss Patterson who ensnared Jerome Bonaparte's heart, causing much annoyance to his imperial brother, Napoleon, she comes from Baltimore. One may suspect that rousing huzzahs for the tradition of Baltimore belles who bowl over the crowned heads of Europe are even now breaking from the virtuous throats of all loyal Americans.

She is best known as Mrs. Wallis Simpson—"Wally" for short. People who have overheard snatches of their intimate dinner table or nightclub conversation, when Edward is relaxing himself as a private citizen, insist that he calls her "Toby," but the why and wherefore of this nickname is past finding out. And she, when thus encouraged in the simplicity of modern manners, addresses him as "Davy," a Scottish diminutive which has a sweet, caressing sound when murmured by soft, carmined lips.

These two names, when coupled, almost automatically inspire a parody among connoisseurs of American folk songs, thus: "Toby and Davy were——." The rest may be left to the American imagination. Edward himself may know the words, for he is fond of the popular minstrelsy of American cabarets. Perhaps he may be able to teach the Scotch bagpipers of Balmoral castle to play this piquant number on their skirling instruments for "Toby's" amusement.

There has been, thus far, no drama in the story of King Edward and his American playmate. Two years have passed since their comradeship began and nothing has happened to form a plot for a story. Mrs. Simpson has been here and there and everywhere as the guest, the confidante, the holiday associate of the king, always in the open, always under circumstances that may be regarded as satisfactory chaperonage, formal or informal. The significant fact that she has been singularly and consistently favored with public demonstrations of his high regard forms the tale in a nutshell. For example: Unhusbanded, she accompanied the king on his recent luxurious yachting cruise of Mediterranean waters, which included visits to the capitals of Balkan and Levantine states. There were other guests, of course—a smart little clique of the king's best friends; but among the personages of title Mrs. Simpson of America seemed to be the most favored person. This romantic expedition to the seacoast of Illyria [the scene of Shakespeare's comedy, "Twelfth Night"] was the king's first extended holiday since the death of his royal father—a bereavement which he felt deeply—and the ensuing strains of his accession to the throne. Observers noted that for the first time since he became Edward VIII. David Windsor seemed like his old self, happy, companionable, boyish in his zest for life. He was traveling incognito, calling himself the duke of Lancaster; he was among his pals; and of them "Wally" was the best. He seemed to be on a platonic honeymoon.

There may be a touch of unwritten drama in the fact that in the aftermath of this summer excursion of the king's his mother, Queen Mary, made arrangements to leave Buckingham palace, where she had lived for many years. It is known that she frowns upon her son's open friendship with Mrs. Simpson, which seems to stand in the way of the royal marriage which has been expected of him, vainly, for too many years. Her removal to Marlborough house, where she will have only five ladies in waiting instead of her former nine, may be merely an affair of official routine in the readjustment of the monarchical establishment; but, on the other hand, it certainly lessens the chances of her meeting Mrs. Simpson—a matter on which she seems to have taken a negative position.

Now, then, to answer the burning question: Who is this Mrs. Simpson? The public curiosity about her origin, her background, her ability to charm a king, her status in life outside of her relation to Edward VIII., extends all over the English speaking world. She has no secrets; her life has been like an open book; and the facts in her career have been freely printed; but the curiosity remains ungratified.

First of all, she is a thoroughbred American woman, of the cosmopolitan "society" type. Second, she is no mere girl, but a woman of experience who has arrived at what are often called "the years of discretion." Her age is exactly that of the king. Both are 42. But they both follow the modern style; they look younger and act younger than they really are and, perhaps, try to delude themselves with the idea that Father Time isn't catching up with them rapidly. If this is a true romance it is not one of youthful folly. Both of them, as the moralists of the preceding generation were wont to say, "are old enough to know better."

"Wally" is Mrs. Ernest Simpson, wife of an English gentleman, a few years younger than herself, whom London calls a typical "city man." He is engaged in the shipping business, has a seat on the Baltic exchange, and can be found in his office almost any day between 9 and 5 o'clock. More of him later. He effaced himself from the problem for several months, behaving like a true Briton in a difficult situation, pretending to be unconscious of it all. Recently, however, he separated from his wife and permitted himself to be sued for divorce on charges not yet revealed. They can only be "statutory," however; and this euphemism means that allegations of misconduct with another woman will be made.

During her girlhood in Baltimore Mrs. Simpson was Bessie Warfield, the daughter of T. Wallis Warfield [the T. stands for the queer first name of Teackle] and Alice Montague. The father was a member of an old Baltimore family whose progenitor emigrated from England in 1662. At the time of the revolutionary war the head of the house, Charles Alexander Warfield by name, announced that the family's motto henceforth would be "We tolerate no kings." There is a neat touch of irony in that democratic legend.

Her mother came from one of the First Families of Virginia, and was known before her marriage as "one of the beautiful Montague sisters." Her American ancestry had such distinction that tracing the clan back to the various noble Montagues of the English peerage was not believed to be necessary.

Soon after the marriage Mr. Warfield became an invalid and was compelled to seek the salubrious air of the Blue Ridge mountains—a fact which suggests tuberculosis. There he died when the present Mrs. Simpson, only child of the marriage, was 3 years old. He had failed to accumulate an estate and had inherited little. His widow moved back to Baltimore in what are often called "reduced circumstances." She had many relatives who were well-to-do or wealthy, but she was an independent spirit who refused to live on any one's bounty. Therefore she adopted a typically American method of meeting her economic situation; she opened a boarding house.

At this point English people who adopt a critical attitude toward Mrs. Simpson's place in the sun of royalty begin to hiss.

This is rather cruel, but it reflects upon the rancorous soul of the people who make the remark rather than upon Mrs. Simpson. That boarding house was a deed of gallantry on the part of a young widow with a child to rear. Moreover, it was a comfortable, well managed house, frequented by gentlefolk. It caused Mrs. Warfield no loss of caste among the first families of the Severn and the Potomac rivers.

From 1900 to 1908 Mrs. Warfield managed and lived in this establishment—a stone and brick house with iron-railed stoop, characteristic of Baltimore domestic architecture, at 212 East Biddle street, between Guilford and Calvert streets. The house still stands there as a link between Mrs. Simpson's regal present and her simple American past. Her life there ended with her mother's second marriage in 1908 to John Freeman Rasin, a Baltimorean of good family. The event was described in the society columns of the Baltimore newspapers, which stated that the maid of honor was "the beautiful young daughter of the bride."

Bessie Warfield made her debut into society in 1914 with appropriate ceremonies. The event was given more than ordinary emphasis in the city's press through an announcement by her uncle, S. Davies Warfield. He was one of Baltimore's leading citizens, a man of substance, and president of the Seaboard Air Line—a railroad, not an aviation concern. When parties for Bessie were the order of the day he sent to the newspaper a letter to this effect:

"The report that Mr. S. Davies Warfield will give a large debutante ball for his debutante niece, Miss Bessie Warfield, is without foundation, in that he does not consider the present a proper time for such festivities, when thousands of men are being slaughtered and their families left destitute in Europe."

Nevertheless this sound old fellow thought well of Miss Bessie. In his will he stated that he was leaving nothing to his nieces and nephews because they were all in "comfortable circumstances," but he made a special exception in the case of his "favorite niece, Bessie Warfield." A trust fund of $15,000 was his bequest to her.

Then, as a debutante, Bessie fluttered about among all the parties and balls and suppers that were given by the Baltimore smart set. The dancing mania which had swept America shortly before the great war started was then at fever point, and Bessie, soon to drop that homely name in favor of her father's Wallis, fox-trotted, one-stepped, bunny-hugged, and turkey-trotted with the liveliest young men of the town. She also Charlestoned and Castle-walked, and went through the rhythmic shuffling called "ballin' the jack."

These were the ceremonies of maids in the marriage market, and young men contemplating matrimony usually wore their dancing shoes with their business suits in order to spring from office chairs to thé dansants at 4 p. m. In 1916 she had her great white day of orange blossoms. A recent graduate of the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, Lieut. Earle Winfield Spencer, in the aviation service, was the lucky man. They were married in Christ church, Baltimore, with bridegroom and ushers in full dress navy uniforms. Bessie, or Wallis, marched down the aisle to the altar on the arm of her Uncle Sol Davies, the railway president.

This marriage took the future Mrs. Simpson to the various stations to which her husband was assigned. She had the typical life of a young naval officer's bride; she lived in Pensacola, Fla., in California, and various other naval aviation centers; she also saw something of foreign ports and began to acquire a cosmopolitan polish. She had no children.

In 1924 she established a residence in Warrenton, Va., for the purpose of securing a divorce. It was a well managed, modern breaking of the marital tie. There was no scandal; no contest. She lived in Virginia during the year that the law required; then brought suit and secured her decree. Spencer, who is still in the service with the rank of lieutenant commander, promptly remarried. "Wally" waited for three years, and then, on a visit to London, married Ernest Aldrich Simpson, British subject, on July 21, 1928.

This new figure in "Wally's" life is an Anglo-American so far as the facts in his career are concerned, but a regular Britisher of manner and appearance, for all that. He was born in New York; his mother was an American, his father an Englishman of Canadian affiliations. He studied at Harvard university in the class of 1919; he served in the great war as an officer of the Coldstream Guards, and after the armistice he settled down in London with his father's firm of ship charterers in the trade to Baltic seaports. Like "Wally," he had been married before, in 1923. His first wife was a New York girl of "society" rating. They were divorced in 1925. The first Mrs. Simpson now lives in New York with her daughter Audrey.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson settled down to life in a handsome apartment in Bryanstone court, a de luxe structure in the Mayfair district of London. His annual income is believed to be about $80,000; and on that one can afford to entertain people of title—if one knows them. Ernest Simpson did; he had the gay, night club tastes that the prince of Wales' London coterie affected, and "Wally" herself had the smart, amusing American style which David Windsor liked in ladies. They fitted deftly into the livelier circles of the London amusement-seeking world, which is a blend of nobility and clever, wealthy commoners. This is the "let us be gay" set, the "charming people" set, the graceful pleasure-hunters of Michael Arlen's fantasies in fiction.

Mrs. Simpson's first meeting with the prince is a matter on which gossips differ. One of the well worn stories fixes this historic encounter at a railway station in Paris, when Mrs. Simpson was traveling with her aunt, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman of Washington, D. C. The prince, seeing two attractive American women in a little trouble with their pile of luggage, helped them to stow it away in a compartment, and was a passenger on the same train. This may have happened, for such casual acts of informal courtesy are characteristic of him, but at the same time it sounds like a "society" journalist's myth of a "pick-up." It is easier to believe that he met the Simpsons in London in some conventional manner. At any rate they became members of the social circle in which he moved most frequently; they met at dinners, at dances, at house parties, and the prince got on famously with Mr. Simpson as well as with his attractive wife. The husband's war service had been in the regiment of which the prince of Wales was honorary colonel; that fact in itself put things on a comradely basis.

The most popular lady among the prince's friends was then supposed to be Thelma, Lady Furness, one of the beautiful Morgan twin sisters, much chatted about in smart set periodicals. She too was the type of sophisticated American woman with a high cosmopolitan polish that seems to make a special appeal to the world's most exalted bachelor.

For several years, apparently, "Wally" was only an auxiliary figure among the women who pleased the prince's eye and titillated his sense of humor. Lady Furness was considered to be the heroine of the comedy, and her reign was expected to be short, because the prince's life had been decorated by a veritable frieze, a long, changing procession, of such social butterflies. She held her position, however, for five years.

There came a time, so the story goes, when Lady Furness sailed away for Bermuda, and "Wally" Simpson went down to the dock to see her off. Thelma's last words over the rail are alleged to have been:

"Take good care of Davy for me."

Mrs. Simpson nodded assent with Mona Lisa's smile.

In 1932 she was presented at court. In 1934 the period of her rise to a featured position in the chronicles of the prince's amusements and travels began. She was a member of his party on the yacht Rosaura, touching at scenic points on the Côte d'Azur. They danced at Cannes, they golfed at Biarritz, they took their aperitifs together at numerous fashionable resorts without worrying about the writers of social chit-chat who keep their eyes open for morsels of fashionable gossip in such places.

Back home, according to these paragraphers, she was an unofficial hostess for parties which he gave in his private residence at Fort Belverdere, Sunningdale. Mr. Simpson was usually on hand to give the right impression; but before the great yacht cruise of last summer, on the luxurious craft Nahlin, he seems to have faded out of the picture with as much discretion as he employed when he was present. He is said to have moved to his club, and is not expected to be a member of the household when Mrs. Simpson moves into her new home—a palatial edifice with a classic Greek façade called Cumberland Terrace house.

The gossips have recently become decidedly free with statistics about the worth of the jewelry that David, as prince, and Edward, as king, has given to Mrs. Simpson. They fix the value of a million dollars upon these tokens of friendship. This information may be taken with the customary grain of salt. Any kind of a trinket becomes worth alarming sums of money, in the minds of paragraphers, when it is given by royalty to a woman.

Here, however, is a matter of absolute record. The new king's first formal dinner at Buckingham palace had the following list of guests: Prime Minister and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin, Lord and Lady Louis Mountbatten, the Right Honorable Alfred Duff and Lady Diana Manners, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Simpson.

The king's second formal dinner contains a striking omission as the guests are paired. Its official list reads:

Their royal highnesses the duke and duchess of York, the First Lord of the Admiralty and Lady Maude Hoare, the former Viceroy of India and Lady Willingdon, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Churchill, THE KING AND MRS. SIMPSON.

The guests on the recent yachting cruise along the Dalmatian coast in the Nahlin—a $1.300,000 craft loaned by Lady Yule—included: Secretary of War and Lady Diana Manners Duff-Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Butler, the Hon. Evelyn Fitzgerald, Lord and Lady Walford Selby, Lady Emerald Cunard, and MRS. ERNEST SIMPSON. On the party's official visit to Vienna the press administration of the Austrian government instructed all newspapers to make no comment on Mrs. Simpson's presence.

After the king's return to England late in September he went to Balmoral castle, official residence of British royalty in Scotland. The Court Circular, a bulletin which contains information that is supposed to come straight from the throne and is perhaps edited under the king's orders when he has time for such minor matters, contained announcements which featured Mrs. Simpson's arrival at Balmoral in the first paragraph. The duke and duchess of York, for opening the Royal infirmary at Aberdeen, were mentioned in the second paragraph. This printed order of precedence was regarded as significant by courtiers. Moreover, when Mrs. Simpson stepped off the train at the Aberdeen station the king was on hand to greet her, jauntily costumed according to his environment in a kilt with a tam o'shanter cocked over one eye.

Among the other guests who assembled at Balmoral on this occasion were the duke and duchess of York, the duke and duchess of Marlborough, the duke and duchess of Sutherland, the duke and duchess of Buccleuch and Queensberry, and the earl and countess of Roseberry. One may be sure, however, that these high-and-mighties did not overawe Mrs. Simpson.

What manner of woman is this who comes out of the American democracy to run around with kings and dukes and earls and prime ministers, calling them all by their first names, no doubt, and making herself completely at home in the ancient seats of British majesty? Well, she is a neat looking lady, sleek, well groomed, with consummate taste in clothes, and a bright, chatty, witty way of talking that Americans call "a line." She has kept her figure slender and her face youthful; she likes outdoor sports and indoor merriment. Her hair is a dark brown; one may suspect, at the age of 42, a touch of tint to keep it so. One cannot call her beautiful without becoming unduly ecstatic over the appearance of the comrades of royalty; but on the other hand, she is easy to look at, and Edward's taste cannot be called into question.

Her only feature that is open to a touch of impertinent criticism is her nose. It has a slight trend toward the aquiline, which adds a touch of orientalism to her otherwise completely American personality.

Pascal said in his "Pensees": "If the nose of Cleopatra had been shorter the whole face of the world would have been changed."

The reference, of course, is to the Egyptian queen's amours with Julius Cæsar and Mark Antony. There is, however, no philosopher who can say what would have happened if Mrs. Simpson's nose had been shorter. The press photographers of the world would have been happier, no doubt, but apparently it would not have made the slightest difference in the alleged romance of "Toby" and "Davy."

In next Sunday's Graphic the story of "His Majesty and Wally" will continue, with some sidelights on their Adriatic trip aboard the palatial $1,300,000 yacht Nahlin.

Men's Lives Ruled by Calendar

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

A MONTH or so ago the newspapers carried a story about some serious disorders in Rumania. The police had found it necessary to fire upon a mob of peasants, thereby killing about a half dozen and wounding a greater number. The peasants had become worked up to a frenzy of indignation over the government's decree replacing the Julian by the Gregorian calendar.

It is easy enough to see the peasants' side of the affair. Rumania has a rather complex system of holidays, and it takes no little planning to adjust one's activities to it. The change in the calendar, which involved dropping thirteen days completely, had thrown the system badly out of gear. The peasants were unable to see the need for discarding those days and could not but feel that there must be a rather sinister purpose behind it.

There was the same sort of trouble in Great Britain nearly two centuries ago when parliament voted to replace the Julian by the Gregorian calendar. To bring English dates into accord with those on the continent it was necessary to declare arbitrarily that Sept. 2, 1752, should be followed by Sept. 14. There were many English workmen who felt that this was an attempt to cheat them out of their wages for the intervening period, and riots broke out when this pay was denied them.

The essential difference between the two calendars lies in their definitions of leap year. The Julian calendar defined the year as consisting of 365 days, except for every year divisible by four (such as 1932, 1936, etc.), which were leap years of 366 days. The Gregorian calendar makes an exception to this exception by limiting to 365 days all years divisible by 100 but not divisible by 400. Thus the year 1600 was a leap year, while 1700, 1800, and 1900 were not.

But what difference does it make, anyway? Very little as far as you and I are concerned; we could live through our entire lives and never notice the difference. But it is a matter of considerable importance to astronomers that the year be defined as closely as possible to the exact time of the earth's trip around its orbit. Otherwise various annual events, such as the vernal equinox and the summer solstice, would occur progressively earlier or later each year, depending on the direction of the error. This annoyance could perhaps be overlooked if it affected only astronomers, but in our complex world precise time measurements are as necessary as precise measurements of length or of weight.

In devising a calendar there are three time units to be considered. The first is the day, or the time the earth takes to turn completely on its axis. Because of the earth's movement around the sun, this time of revolving on the axis is calculated with reference to the sun and not to space as a whole.

The second unit of time we would like to have in a calendar is the lunar month, or the time elapsing between two successive full moons. The third unit is the year, or the time of the earth's journey around its orbit. The difference between day and night and between summer and winter are so much a part of our lives that we have no choice but to use them in measuring time. But when we try to correlate them we run into difficulties.

The first of these difficulties is the fact that the time between successive moons is different according to the time of the year. The reason for this is the fact that the earth's orbit is not a perfect circle, but an ellipse, and as a result our speed around the sun varies according to season. We get around this difficulty by using the average length throughout the year, which we call the mean solar day.

The second difficulty, and the one which makes leap years necessary, is the fact that the day, the lunar month, and the year are what are called incommensurable quantities. This means that when you divide one into another the answer cannot be expressed as a whole number or a fraction, or even as an exact decimal.

The day and the week, on the other hand, are commensurable terms. When we say there are seven days in the week we are stating a truth that will stand for all time. No one will ever find the slightest error in our calculation, because the length of the week is dependent through definition on the length of the day.

But we can never express the lengths of the lunar month or the year as so many days, at least with the numbers we now use. The earth's rotation on its axis and the earth's and the moon's movements on their orbits are three independent motions, and it would be an astonishing coincidence if their ratios were those of whole numbers.

Yet it is the duty of a calendar to express them in this way.

The most accurate astronomical measurements at present indicate that there are 29.530588 days in a lunar month and 365.2422 days in a year. These figures are not exact. To express them exactly we would have to keep on writing down digits to the right of the decimal point until we reached the end of space. Fortunately, however, such precision is unnecessary. The figures given above are accurate enough to fit all practical purposes.

The fact that there are 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 46 and a fraction seconds in each year indicates why we cannot define a year as the same whole number of days. Nor can we conveniently set our New Years this interval apart, because then each Jan. 1 would start almost six hours later than the one the year before, which would greatly upset our clocks. The best way of handling this surplus fraction of a day is to carry it until the accumulated surplus amounts to a whole day and then stick it into the calendar as Feb. 29.

The Julian calendar puts this extra day in every four years. Therefore four Julian years have 1,461 days, or 365.25 days a year. This is .0078 of a day too long. Every 128 years the seasons would have advanced a whole day. Such an error, while nothing to us as individuals, is nevertheless something that should be corrected for the sake of distant posterity.

According to the Gregorian calendar there are 146,097 days in every 400 years. This gives an average year 365.2425 days, which is much better than the Julian day, but still .0003 of a day too long. Our present calendar therefore will advance the seasons one day every 3,000 years. It has been suggested that this glaring defect be corrected by demoting to ordinary years all years divisible by 1,000 except those divisible by 4,000. That is, 1000, 2000, and 3000 would have 365 days, while 4000 would be a leap year. The average year would then have 365.24225 days, and the calendar would hold true for 20,000 years. This matter would have to be decided upon by some international organization, such as the league of nations. However, the problem is not a pressing one.

Our calendar has evolved from that of the Romans, which is shown in Figure 1. Notice that with two exceptions the English names are obvious derivations of the Latin ones. Originally the calendar had only the ten months from Martius to December, and the remaining days of the year were not designated, presumably on the ground that nothing much happened in the winter. About 500 B. C. it was changed to the form shown.

It will be seen that this calendar accounts for only 355 days. To correct for this a thirteenth month called Mercedonius was inserted every few years in the middle of Februarius. The year in which Mercedonius was to appear was decided by the Roman priests, who were also the astronomers. They were governed in their choice by a desire to have the spring equinox occur in the month of Martius.

One fault of such a system was that business men were never sure how many months there would be in the coming year and were therefore hesitant to commit themselves too far in advance. Another lay in the fact that the priests were political appointees. Consequently they were frequently under pressure from the local organization to shorten the year to speed up tax collections. By the first century B. C. the Romans were using two calendars—a religious one, based on accurate time measurements, and a political one, which was several months ahead of time.

When Julius Cæsar became dictator in 46 B. C. he established the Julian calendar, based on Egyptian astronomical observations. It is shown in its original form in Figure 2. Notice that he shifted the new year to Januarius and also that, to honor himself, he changed the name of Quintilis to Julius (we now call it July). At first he gave Februarius its extra day every three years, but this was shortly afterward changed to four on the advice of an Alexandrian astronomer named Sosigenes.

When Cæsar's grandnephew Augustus became emperor of Rome in 30 B. C. the calendar was changed to its present form. Augustus, feeling himself as deserving of honor as his great-uncle Julius, changed the name of Sextilis to Augustus. To avoid the degradation of having only thirty days in his own month Augustus shifted a day to it from Februarius, and then, to avoid having three thirty-one-day months together, shifted a day from September to October and from November to December. Almost a century later the emperor Nero changed the name of September to Neronis, but the old name was restored after the tyrant's death.

In the year 1582 Pope Gregory XIII. proclaimed the Gregorian calendar, based on the work of the astronomer Luigi Lilio Ghiraldi. It became immediately effective in all Roman Catholic countries and was gradually adopted by Protestant nations during the ensuing years, culminating with the English in 1752. During the last twenty years it has been adopted by most of the Greek Orthodox and the non-Christian countries, so that its use is now almost world-wide.

There is agitation going on at present for another change. The fact that there are not a whole number of weeks in a year means that it is impossible without consulting a calendar to tell on exactly what day of the week a particular date will fall. This is a matter of occasional annoyance in a world as highly organized as this is. Figure 3 shows a calendar designed to overcome this fault. Notice that there are a whole number of weeks in each quarter. As a result a given date always will fall on the same week day every year.

A more serious trouble, and one more difficult to correct, results from the fact that there is not a whole number of weeks in a month. This greatly increases the work of employers who must meet both weekly and monthly pay rolls. The suggested solution of this fault lies in having thirteen months of twenty-eight days each, as shown in Figure 4. As a matter of fact, calendars of this type have been adopted for pay roll purposes by many American companies.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

The Bull Terrier Attracts Attention

WHEN white bull terriers go into the judging ring at a dog show one unconsciously stops to look at them for several reasons. In the first place, any all-white dog that is well groomed usually draws a lot of attention. And the white bull terrier is a four-legged snowbank when he is ready for the judging ring. But the abundance of life and energy displayed by the bull terrier is what attracts us.

Many a time we have seen these dogs tugging and pulling to get ahead as if they welcomed the chance to get into the ring to show their good qualities. These agile, strong dogs have plenty of poise. Some dogs may go into the ring with a shy, self-conscious air about them. But never have we seen a white bull terrier being led to the judging ring as if he were afraid to walk down the ailes between the barking dogs on the benches.

The breed comes from England, which is the native country of most of our terriers. It was developed more than a hundred years ago. Very likely the breed was developed by crossing the bulldog with the English white terrier, which is no longer in existence. There is reason to believe that another breed was used (the Spanish pointer) to give the bull terrier larger size.

Years ago the bull terrier was the gladiator among dogs. It was the day of dog fights—when the gentleman sportsman thought it correct and good fun to pit dogs against each other. It was then that the bull terrier made a name for himself. He was taught to be a plucky scrapper, full of courage, ready to fight for himself or his master. And he was bred so that he was strong, very agile, and to never know the significance of the word "quit."

Today the "white cavalier," as he is known to many dog fanciers, is a distinctive, likeable breed. The long terrier head, the quizzical expression, tight lips, sturdy body, well shaped legs, and white coat make him stand apart from other breeds. He is a graceful, active dog. White bull terriers that we have been around or played with always impressed us by their good nature and playfulness. They seem to be ready for a romp any old time. This impression is in direct contradiction to some of the stories about the breed that make the bull terrier breeder either weep or gnash his teeth in rage. Unfortunately, there are those who accuse the bull terrier of being a surly, vicious dog that bites everybody. Bull terrier breeders lose their patience when they hear these stories, because they are not true.

He's a playful dog. He likes children. He is loyal, and nothing from an express train to a charging dog or a bull seems to be able to intimidate this white cavalier. There is no lack of intelligence in the breed, either. Like many other breeds that are active and of good size, the bull terrier makes a better companion and guard dog when it has been trained in obedience.

Bull terriers may weigh up to 60 pounds. We never have seen a small one weighing 15 or 20 pounds. According to the standard of the breed, a male dog weighing around 50 pounds and a female 45 pounds are about right.

In addition to the pure white bull terrier, the colored bull terrier was recently recognized by the American Kennel club. For many years American bull terrier breeders have been attempting to breed the color out of their dogs, so one rarely saw anything except a pure white specimen at the dog shows. Since the recent recognition of the colored type of bull terrier by the A. K. C., however, specimens with color have been shown at dog exhibitions.

A breed which should not be confused with the bull terrier is the Staffordshire terrier, which also was recognized recently by the A. K. C. The Staffordshire is a distinct breed from the bull terrier, although it has been associated with the bull terrier in the public mind for some time. The breed formerly was called the Yankee terrier.

The Question Box

I have an Irish setter. Whenever this dog is out for a walk and we chance to meet another dog she grovels on the sidewalk. As she has never fought or been scared by another dog, I fail to understand why this is done. C. S.

Your dog apparently is shy and hasn't been around other dogs very much. It won't get any better if kept away from other dogs. We suggest you see a trainer and ask him if the best procedure won't be this: Keep the dog in a kennel where there are many other dogs so it will get used to seeing, hearing, and being around dogs. This may help but not completely eradicate the fault.

My children nave a six-week-old female puppy, half chow and half spaniel. I have been told that a chow is a very mean dog and not a good companion for children. Is this correct? I would also like to know how to feed this puppy. MRS. E. S.

We wouldn't worry about the chow blood in your dog. Chows are aloof, reserved, rather undemonstrative dogs that care little about people other than those in the homes where they live. They are loyal and faithful to those they love. We have never heard of nor seen a cross between a chow and a spaniel, so we can't predict how your puppy will turn out, any more than we can tell what any cross-bred will be. We believe that you would get more satisfaction and pleasure out of a pure-bred, and we recommend that persons acquiring their first dog should get a pure-bred.

A feeding leaflet is being mailed to you. It will give you instructions on feeding puppies.

DOG NOTES

Sportsmen are invited to attend the second annual field trial for retriever breeds to be held next Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 24 and 25, on the estate of Dr. Paul Magnuson, about four miles east of Dundee on route 62. Chesapeake Bay retrievers, Labradors, and Irish water spaniels will be run in Derby, novice, and open all-age stakes. The trials, sponsored by the Midwest Field Trial club, start Saturday morning at 8 o'clock. Martin J. Hogan of Barrington, Ill., and Dr. A. C. Gifford of Oshkosh, Wis., will judge the dogs.

A large entry of eastern retrievers is coming to compete against locally owned dogs. Handsome silver cups will be awarded the owners of the winning dogs. Anthony Bliss, president of the Chesapeake Bay Club of America, is entering ten of his Chesapeakes, and Jay Carlisle of New York will have at least eight of his Labradors in the competition.

Dog owners who want concise but complete directions on how to feed a puppy or grown dog will find this information in the 92-page "Dog Book" published by The Tribune. This beautifully illustrated handbook, containing scores of pictures of breeds and much information on caring for the puppy, is sold through the public service office of The Tribune for 30 cents (by mail). Orders with remittances may be sent direct to the public service office, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Indorsed by veterinarians and breeders as an accurate handbook on the care of dogs, "The Dog Book" also advises owners on grooming their pets.

The Western Boston Terrier club will hold a sanctioned puppy match next Saturday at The Fair Store, State and Adams streets, Chicago. All Boston terrier owners who have puppies between the ages of two months and one year are invited to exhibit. John Trotzke Jr., Chicago, will judge.

In Marion, O., a 16-year-old girl was repaid for her attention to Fritz, her pet dog. The girl, Elizabeth Stinson, nursed the dog to health from an almost fatal illness when it was young. Several months later the dog's mistress went to the hospital for an appendicitis operation.

When the girl went to the hospital the dog went along. For thirteen days the dog kept vigil on the hospital steps, refusing to eat for the first ten days, and refusing to leave his post.

Finally the girl came out of the hospital, and the dog raced all the way home alongside her ambulance.

The Rt. Hon. Lorna, Countess Howe, known throughout the dog world as one of England's greatest fanciers and judges, has been accorded the distinction of judging best in show at the sixty-first annual dog show of the Westminster Kennel club.

For many weeks fanciers have been inquiring about the officials for the show, which will be held Feb. 10, 11, and 12, as usual in Madison Square Garden. Out of respect to the A. K. C. and the judges, the committee withheld all information regarding the judges until the list had been officially approved. Now it is disclosed that in addition to Lady Howe several other English and Canadian experts have been invited to work with the leading judges of this country at the forthcoming show.

Mrs. Florence Nagle of Conncara, Sulhampstead, England, noted as a breeder of Irish setters and Irish wolfhounds, will judge those breeds. J. W. Marple of Gately, Cheshire, son of the publisher of Our Dogs and a great authority in his own right, will judge the Brittany, clumber, field, Irish water, Sussex, Welsh springer, and English cocker spaniels, the bull mastiffs, mastiffs, Corgis, Staffordshire, and West Highland white terriers. Mrs. Cyril Pacey of Clifton Hall, Rugby, widely known as an authority on the short-legged terrier varieties, will judge the Cairn, Dandie Dinmont, and Skye terriers.

Pure-bred dog registrations are maintaining their advances over 1935, according to figures released by the American Kennel club, governing body of canine matters in the United States. During the first eight months of this year there were 56,300 individual specimens entered in the stud book registry, as compared with 46,025 for the same period of 1935. The month of August this year had a total of 6,550, compared with 6,500 in the same month of 1935.

The cocker spaniel is now firmly established as the most popular dog of 1936, and it heads all breeds registered with 1,021 specimens for August, against 823 in the same month last year. In the last eight months there have been 8,024 cockers registered. The Boston is the closest challenger with 810 for the month and 6,837 for the eight months. Incidentally, the increased popularity of the cocker is not at a very great expense to the Boston. Despite a slight falling off in some months, total Boston registrations for 1936 should be only a trifle less than their 10,587 recorded for the whole of 1935.

Fewer registrations for August of 1936 in some of the more popular breeds are more than equalized by increases distributed over 44 out of 75 breeds listed by the A. K. C. during this most recent monthly tabulation.

Taken as a group the terrier breeds are the most popular, the varieties of pure-bred dogs in this group having a total of 1,677 registrations. The gun dog breed comes next with 1,580 registrations, followed by the nonsporting dogs with 1,295.

The Secrets of a G-2 Man—Camp Funston Bank Murders

Record of a Crime Mystery That Shocked a War-Time Cantonment

INSTALMENT II.

FOREWORD

Today's story of the adventures of a G-2 man covers the training camp period that preceded America's active military participation in the World war. It is the start of the sequence of personal adventures that will vividly portray the life of a combat intelligence officer and his men at the battle front.

Last Sunday this little-known side of modern war was introduced by a presentation of the whole scope of military intelligence, particularly espionage and counter-espionage. This presentation pictured in a chain of dramatic incidents the problems and methods of the spy and the spy tracker, characters familiar to every reader of war stories, but who are only distantly related to the G-2 men at the front, whose amazing daily exploits will be unfolded in succeeding instalments.

CHICAGO awoke on the morning of April 6, 1917, with more than her usual restlessness. Housewives, trolley passengers, and cab drivers alike were talking about "the war." Everybody felt sure that before nightfall the United States would have declared war against imperial Germany.

That afternoon it came. President Wilson announced the declaration of war against Germany. Many Americans then thought that the United States would be of negligible assistance to the Allies except as a financial backer.

Even United States congressmen agreed with this idea and were alarmed at the preposterous proposal of active participation in the war. In opposition to this attitude, former President Theodore Roosevelt offered to raise a division of 25,000 volunteers for early service in France, and thousands of Americans, including myself, applied for enlistment under him.

For nearly three years I had followed the war with more than usual interest. Since the beginning my family—Scotch and English—had been serving under the British colors. After my father's death late in 1914 I had made repeated attempts to join certain Scottish or English regiments at the front, but no assurance could be given that I would ever reach them. It would have been necessary for me to enlist in Canada and take my chances on a transfer. I wanted to see action.

While awaiting developments I decided there was much that an able-bodied man could do right in Chicago. There was the problem of silencing the radical agitators who opposed America's entering the war. Some of these agitators were German secret agents, but many were I. W. W. members, anarchists, communists, extreme pacifists, and plain cranks.

One of the civilian organizations which helped to fight this sort of thing was the American Protective league, created in the spring of 1917 by several patriotic Chicagoans. Its headquarters was in the federal building, Chicago, for it was a semi-official organization coöperating with the department of justice through the department's Chicago head, Hinton G. Clabaugh, and his assistant, Major Ferbershaw. I was made a bureau chief and given a flying squad of thirty men.

With this force I set to work. Daily and nightly raids and investigations resulting from tips received from the department of justice or other sources kept me busy.

One event which might have had serious consequences was the Grant park riot. A great protest meeting of radicals was held one Sunday afternoon at the Auditorium theater. We were ordered to be there. The crowd was so great that the overflow of 5,000 men and women tramped to Grant park, where a platform was then standing. They were addressed by volunteer irresponsible speakers. Three of us followed the mob and worked our way close to the speakers' stand. When one particularly vicious orator began to incite the mob with treasonable statements I jumped on the platform and grabbed him.

Major General Wood, who commanded Camp Funston in the early months of the war.

A few seconds later I landed on the heads of the people in front. My two companions rushed to me and shoulder to shoulder we battled for our lives. If someone in the Congress hotel, opposite, had not put in a riot call, the results might have been disastrous—to us.

On May 18, 1917, the selective service act became a part of the law of the land. After this development there was no longer much doubt in my mind that the United States was going to war in earnest. After a few more weeks of intensive work among the radicals I entered the officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, on Aug. 27, 1917.

When Nov. 27, 1917, came around, and the three grueling months were up, I was given the rank of captain of infantry and ordered to report within a few days to Camp Funston, Kansas, where I was to command a company in the 353d infantry, known as the All Kansas regiment, then part of the 89th division.

Camp Funston was one of the largest and most efficiently planned of the army training camps. There were about 50,000 men in the camp, comprising the 89th division, the 92d division (a colored outfit), a large remount depot, a medical officers' training camp, and some miscellaneous outfits.

Dec. 15, the day I arrived, happened to be dreary and gray. Approaching the camp, I saw the rows of oblong pine boxes that flanked the dusty highway in front of the detention camp for contagious diseases.

"We're having epidemics of influenza and spinal meningitis," explained the truck driver.

As I settled down to the routine life of commanding my company in its daily marches to the dusty parade ground, or to the rifle range seven miles away, I thought often of the great scourge of disease that had already reduced the ranks to an alarming degree. An incident happened that made me wonder whether Camp Funston's epidemics might in some way be the work of enemy secret agents. I communicated my fears to Hinton G. Clabaugh, head of the department of justice of Chicago, and asked him to take any action he thought best.

A few days later the head of the department of justice of Kansas City came to see me and said that an investigation would be begun at once. That was all I heard of the matter until a few weeks later when a messenger came to the drill field with an order for me to report to division headquarters at once.

"How would you like to do intelligence work, Captain Gowenlock?" asked the acting chief of staf, Col. John C. H. Lee, as I walked into his office. "I want you to be my assistant chief of staf, G-2."

By this time winter had set in for fair, and winters come cold in Kansas. The parade ground, which had been hard and dusty on the blustery December afternoons, was now a flat expanse of trodden snow and ice. Even the house of the camp commander, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, standing on its little hill, was shuttered and bleak in appearance.

Within a few days I had accustomed myself somewhat to my new responsibilities and to the routine of office life at headquarters. Counterespionage was my principal activity. Training troops for the combat intelligence work to come in France was another of the new duties. And I was called upon to help handle many jobs such as the suppression of bootleggers and dope peddlers, even though this is normally the province of the provost marshal.

Sometimes, of course, problems would arise that were not clearly in one province or the other. One such case of a highly spectacular nature fell to my lot during my first fortnight in office.

On the night of Jan. 11, 1918, at Camp Funston the temperature stood at 20 below zero. As I looked out through the frosted windows of my warm room I was glad that no duties required me to go out in that biting wind. Then suddenly the telephone rang. My watch said 8 o'clock.

"I want the divisional G-2 to report to the headquarters of the 354th infantry regiment immediately," barked a brigadier general out of the receiver. "Five men have just been murdered."

At that instant the penetrating yowl of the camp alarm siren rent the silence. Men could be heard stirring in the next room. I swung on my coat and hurried out the door.

Four minutes later I stepped panting into the headquarters of the 354th. A group of high-ranking officers stared gravely at me. The brigadier general spoke:

"Five men have just been murdered in the camp bank, captain. They were hacked to pieces with an ax." Then he added impulsively, "What do you propose to do about it?"

Before I could collect my thoughts to answer, up spoke the chief of staf, Colonel Lee: "Don't you think, general, that the captain should first have a chance to view the scene of the crime?" The general agreed.

As I stepped outside I was joined by Sergts. Clarence Cosby and Bill Dolan, my two best investigators.

The bank building was a small one-story wooden structure located in the heart of the camp in the general area occupied by the 354th infantry. It had been erected as a branch of the Reserve National Bank of Kansas City to receive the deposits of the soldiers.

The interior looked like a slaughter house. Blood had been spattered on the ceiling. Blood tricklings streaked the walls in many places, and the floor was almost entirely hidden under pools of blood in which lay sprawled the bodies of five men, most of them hacked beyond recognition.

Stepping into the room, I discovered that one of the five men was still breathing. An emergency call brought an ambulance, and the man, identified as Kearney Wornall, cashier of the bank, was hurried to the camp hospital at Fort Riley. The other men, also civilians connected with the bank, were dead.

Sergeant Cosby was sent to the hospital with the unconscious Wornall, but soon returned with the report that the surgeon at the hospital had said the man would probably not regain his senses for several hours, if at all.

By now, however, our investigation was under way. We were trying to find a witness to the crime. The nearest to a witness yet contacted was the sentry who had discovered and reported the tragedy. This soldier had been walking his post, which took him directly past the front door of the bank. On one of his rounds he saw the shadow of a man inside the bank, who was apparently hammering something on the floor.

"I didn't investigate at the time," explained the sentry, "because I thought the man was killing rats."

But after thinking the incident over he returned to the bank about ten minutes later and saw the bodies of the murdered men. The murderer had escaped.

From this and other information we calculated that the crime had been committed within a period of about twenty minutes and at a time of the evening when soldiers were in the habit of going in and out of the bank. On the floor behind the long counter were scattered many bills and coins. The safe was open and obviously had been looted. This plainly indicated a motive.

"It looks like the work of a professional criminal from outside," observed one officer.

Personally I could not see any professional thief murdering five men in such a crude and conspicuous way for the sake of money. To me this was the work of either a madman or of an amateur bandit who had suddenly decided to kill the witnesses to his robbery because he feared he had been recognized.

But theories were useless. Something must be proved. One of the first clews found was a series of footprints outside the building. Then, about ten feet from the bank, lay a $1 bill on the ground. Beyond that were other bills at short intervals for some twenty yards. Here the trail stopped.

Returning to the bank, the general asked:

"What do you recommend, captain?"

"I recommend, sir," I said, "first, an immediate roll call of all units, with instructions that the clothing, equipment—particularly hand axes and pistols—and the living quarters of each man be carefully checked and examined. Second, an order prohibiting anyone from leaving or entering the camp until further notice. Third, a strong detail to conduct a mop-up raid on Army City"

"On the night of Jan. 11, 1918, my telephone rang. 'Five men have just been murdered in the camp bank,' a voice said."

All of these suggestions were carried out. Within a few minutes the bugles were sounding assembly and the men were forming their companies in front of their barracks.

I personally directed the raid on Army City. It was my opinion that the criminal was either connected with the camp or living close to it. If he were a civilian it seemed obvious that the most likely place to find him, or at least a clew to his whereabouts, was in Army City, a known hangout of unsavory characters.

Army City was one of those freak mushroom towns full of cheap poolrooms, dance halls, and ice cream parlors that had sprung up beside Funston's regimented rows of barracks like a boil on a young man's neck. Its inhabitants preyed on the soldiers and were considered a menace by army officials. Bootleggers, card sharks, dope peddlers, and prostitutes operated there with more than reasonable success.

I established headquarters for the raid in a small restaurant, while Captain Hanna, Lieutenant Schwinn, and about 200 men closed in on the town. According to orders, they brought in every person and thing of a suspicious character—of which there were plenty. But after viewing dope peddlers, pickpockets, and drunken prostitues all night I realized that, despite all the iniquity unearthed, not a single clew to the identity of the bank murderer had been found.

Then a messenger arrived to say that Wornall, the wounded victim in the hospital, had regained consciousness. I hurried to the bedside as dawn was breaking over the icy prairie. Sergeants Cosby and Dolan were waiting at the hospital door.

"He's mumbling, captain. He keeps repeating two words—'army captain, army captain.' The case is getting hot."

In Wornall's room a medical officer informed me that the patient's moments of consciousness came only at intervals. However, he soon began to mumble again, and, leaning over him, I distinctly heard the words "army captain."

"What's his name?" I asked anxiously, searching the injured man's face. No answer came from the lips, but the eyes seemed to say, "I don't know."

"Would you recognize him if you saw him?" I asked.

"Yes," said the eyes.

After that the man lapsed into insensibility again, and the doctor said that it would be unwise to disturb him for a while. But we had at least obtained a clew. If the murderer was indeed an army captain whom Wornall could recognize, he probably was a depositor of the bank.

"Get the list of depositors," I ordered Cosby, "and read to Wornall all the names of captains listed. He might be able to pick out the one we want."

While this line of investigation was under way, I reported back to division headquarters, where a crowd of detectives, newspaper reporters, and police from Kansas City and nearby towns were waiting. Questions, advice, and theories were to be had without the asking. The telephone rang incessantly. Often it was some high-ranking officer asking for the latest developments and suggesting clews to be investigated. In desperation I went to the commanding general and requested that I be empowered to conduct the investigation freely as the general's representative, and responsible to him alone, without interference by any other officer. The general answered without hesitation:

"I see your point, captain. Go ahead. I expect results."

Thus girded, I went to the regimental headquarters of the 354th. The colonel, lieutenant colonel, and other officers of this regiment had been working hard to do their part to solve the crime. The personnel officer gave me a complete list of captains, with some detailed information about each. Running down the list, the officer would comment on the names he recognized: "He's all right. . . . That man's fair. . . . That one's O. K.," etc.

Coming to the name "Capt. Lewis R. Whisler," the officer said: "You can forget him, Gowenlock; he's one of our best company commanders." Asked for further details, the officer went on to say that Whisler had educated himself by studying at night while employed as a railway mail clerk. He had been married and divorced, his young son now living with the mother. He had been graduated from an officers' training camp with honors and was considered a model type of officer. Not dissipated, he was a man who kept to himself and had the reputation of being one of the hardest-working men in the regiment.

Such a picture of perfection made me suspicious. I had once known a man much like that. He was the captain of my college football team, a brilliant student, a leader in extra-curricular artivities, and he was working his way through the university. One day he wrote a note addressed to "God" and jumped out of a fifth-story window.

My instinctive suspicion of Whisler was greatly reinforced by the discovery that during the inspection the previous night a missing hand ax was found in Whisler's possession. I decided to investigate Whisler thoroughly.

Finding the man was not at his quarters, I searched his room. The place was conspicuously neat and clean. Every object was in order. Even a personal diary was found to be kept up to date.

Scanning this little book with especial interest, I saw that it was devoted mainly to Whisler's emotional reactions and his private beliefs. It was obviously written by an introvert.

More suspicious now than ever, I went at once to Whisler's office. There he was, seated at the desk, a well built man of just under six feet whose most striking feature was his cool, unfathomable gaze.

After introducing myself I asked, "Do you know what brings me here, captain?"

"I suppose," answered Whisler without changing his expression, "that it's in connection with the murders."

"You're right," I replied. "My purpose in calling is to check up on your company's axes. One was reported missing at the inspection last night."

"That's correct," he said calmly, "but it's easily explained. I loaned an ax to the workman over at the bank and then took it to build a shelf in my quarters. It is here now."

"May I see it?"

"Yes, if the supply sergeant can identify it from the others," said Whisler.

Then he called in the sergeant and asked him if he could find the ax.

"I think so," said the soldier. "It is probably the last one in the rack. I'll get it."

A moment later the man returned and handed me the ax. There appeared nothing unusual about it. If anything it was polished better than the average. I decided to try a little psychology on Whisler.

"You are to be congratulated, captain, on setting an example to your men. If all the soldiers would clean and polish equipment after using it, the way you have this ax, we'd have a better army. Will you let me look at the other axes?"

No objection was offered, and I examined the rest of the axes. Looking into Whisler's cold eyes, I felt sure that something was squirming behind them. Thanking him for his coöperation, I hurried to division headquarters to talk to the chief of staf about the next move. It was now noon on the day following the murder. Just after I got there Dolan and Cosby came in to report the results of reading the list of bank depositors to Wornall. Both sergeants were excited and plainly had some important information.

The telephone bell rang.

"Captain Whisler of the 354th regiment has just committed suicide," said a voice at the other end.

Hurriedly phoning this information on to the chief of staf, I lost no time in getting to Whisler's office.

"He did it shortly after you left, captain," the sergeant announced. "I was talking in here with one of the soldiers about the murder case and mentioned that I'd heard the man at the hospital was recovering. Capain Whisler came to the door of his office and asked me about it. When I told him he said, 'That means they'll find the murderer.' Then he closed his door and a few minutes later we heard the shot."

Whisler had placed the muzzle of a service rifle against the roof of his mouth and pulled the trigger. The top of his head was blown off.

I felt satisfied that Whisler was our man, but definite proof must be obtained if possible. So the body was taken in charge. Removed to the camp morgue, it was patched up with plaster of paris, the face rouged and made as lifelike as possible, the bloodstained uniform replaced with a fresh one. And then it was taken to the hospital and placed in a wheel chair.

Wornall was not conscious when Whisler's corpse was wheeled to his bedside. We arranged it to look as natural as possible and placed it so that the injured man, when he came to, could not avoid looking directly into the lighted face. Then, with my two sergeants, the surgeon, and an orderly nurse, we waited nervously for the first eyelid flutter.

We knew that Wornall's skull was fractured and that he was hovering on the brink of death. The shock of seeing his would-be murderer might easily kill him. But it was decided to take the chance.

Wornall moved and groaned. Presently his eyes opened and he blinked vacantly as if struggling for consciousness. Would he recognize Whisler? The five of us leaned forward around the little bed, holding our breath and listening for a whisper from the twitching lips. Then Wornall relaxed, shutting his eyes again.

After another long interval the eyelids began to move once more. Again we crouched breathless, watching the pale face of the wounded man as he stirred in his sleep. The eyes opened, fluttered, then closed. A sigh of disappointment was audible, but we continued our vigil as anxiously as ever, and still sat the patched-up remains of Whisler in the wheel chair by the bed.

Minutes ticked by in the bare little room. After nearly another half hour Wornall's eyelids flicked again. The man tried to move. Then the eyes opened slowly. At first the stare was vacant. Then it began to focus on the lighted face of Whisler. Suddenly horror came into the eyes. Wornall tried to rise. We leaned close and heard him whisper, "That's the man."

So the murder was solved.

We had not slept in over thirty-six hours, but one important job remained to be done. The money stolen from the bank—$62,826.21—must be accounted for.

With an officer from the 354th we now searched every inch of Whisler's quarters. Every piece of clothing and personal belongings was examined minutely. The mattress was ripped apart, and even parts of the walls and floor boards removed. Nothing in the way of money was found, but a private compartment in his office contained a blood-soaked uniform and a bloody towel.

During the next three days the search for the money went forward as strenuously as ever. Countless reports had to be investigated. The divorced Mrs. Whisler and other Whisler relatives had to be questioned. The general belief was that Whisler had had accomplices and that the money was smuggled outside the camp. But I was convinced that Whisler had acted alone in the crime and that the money would be found inside the camp. Whisler was an introvert to the point of being a psychopathic case. Not only had he written his diary with great care despite the fact that his daily duties in themselves were exhausting and left him virtually no spare time, but we learned that his former wife had divorced him partly because she had considered him of unsound mind for a year.

Among other papers in Whisler's office was a note the murderer had written shortly before committing suicide. Addressed to a woman friend, it read:

Don't blame yourself in any way; I simply got tired of living and thought I would become a pirate right. I came very near committing suicide so many times, and I hated to without staking it on something. As for the consequences, there is nothing but what we are all training for. Hope you soon forget me and realize how lucky you were to escape me. Lewis.

Three days after the suicide we again examined the walls and floor of Whisler's quarters. In one corner of the wall still stood the book shelf Whisler had built with the borrowed ax. Taking it apart, a removable panel in the wall was disclosed. Behind the panel was a small compartment containing a canvas bag with the name of the Kansas City bank stamped upon it. Inside was more than $62,000 in currency. The final problem was solved.

Weeks later the doctors at last permitted Wornall to talk. According to Wornall, Whisler had entered the bank at about 7:30 p. m. and, addressing Mr. Winters, vice president, said, "I have come to stick up this place."

Assuming the man was joking, Winters replied with a shrug, "Go right ahead."

Whisler was irritated by that and shouted: "I mean it. I'll show you I mean what I'm talking about." So saying, he whipped out his service pistol and, reaching over the counter, knocked Winters down with one vicious blow from the gun's butt. Aiming the weapon now at Cashier Wornall, he ordered him to pick up a long piece of rope which workmen had left lying on the floor. When Wornall had the rope, Whisler commanded him to tie the hands of all the other men behind their backs.

Wornall did so, trembling before the gun in the hand of the frenzied Whisler. Then Whisler tied Wornall's hands and made all five men lie face down on the floor.

Quickly scooping the money out of the open safe, Whisler headed for the door. Just as he reached it he heard two of the men talking. Winters was saying to Wornall, "You know him, don't you?"

"Sure I do," answered Wornall.

Fire leapt into Whisler's heart. He whirled and came back to where the five lay helpless. "So you know me, do you?" he snarled.

"I sure do, you scoundrel," snapped Winters.

Without a word Whisler snatched up the hand ax that happened to be on the floor and slashed Winters with insane fury. Then he sprang on the other men, disposing of them with swift, vicious strokes in their helplessness—splitting skulls and chopping through ribs until he could see no more signs of life among the gory remains. All, of course, had made futile attempts to crawl out of his reach, as was indicated by the positions in which the bodies were found. Wornall alone, by the barest fraction of an inch, escaped death.

THEY DON'T DRINK!

By W. E. Hill

The "I'll-look-after-you" boy. Never happier than when playing trained nurse to a friend who has had a few drinks. Doesn't drink himself, but has "a way with drunks," he'll tell you. If the wife is there, he will say, "Don't worry, Hazel, I'll look after Perce," whether Perce needs looking after or not.

The non-drinking friend with the good memory. Recalls everything that went on the night before, when his pals were in their cups, and holds a post mortem next day. "Gosh," he sniggers, "you certainly looked funny when you slipped on that rug last night. I don't believe Mabel will ask you there again."

The coldly hostile non-drinkers. They watch and wait hoping for the worst, and have a grand time telling how sorry they feel for poor so and so because so and so's boy, Claude, drinks, like a fish. "Took two cocktails at the dinner party, right before everybody!"

The non-drinker who is terrified of drunks. Afraid they will want to fight him, or get too friendly. This type always attracts drunks. They want to know why he isn't drinking, etc., etc.

The temporary good influence. Stopped drinking to reduce, and has been on the wagon for two weeks. Just long enough to offer his friends a swell health talk on how much better his friends will feel if they do the same. Good for not more than six weeks.

The sympathetic drunk. Never touches a drop of anything stronger than ginger ale. Says she doesn't need to, because, she explains, she can get tight just from being with friends who are tight. Just a gift, that's all. Often acts tighter than any real drunk. Sings songs, yells "Whoop-ee," and, just for a lark, will rush out to play "knock-knock" with the elevator boy.

The cocktail hider. She never drinks, but pretends she does so she won't spoil any one's fun. Accepts the cocktail, but manages to hide it under a couch or pour it into a plant, a Dresden vase, an ash tray, or even on the floor behind her. Hostesses are crazy about her.

What's New in World of Airplanes and Air Transportation

How 'Chute Saved Life of Pilot

By WAYNE THOMIS

HERE is one of those stories that all too seldom get to the general public. It is one of thousands of like accounts—gripping and hair-raising tales of actual happenings that are stored away in dusty filing cases at air corps headquarters.

This is the story of an air corps cadet pilot whose parachute saved his life. It is the personal report made by Flying Cadet Lloyd Eyre of the 49th bombardment squadron, G. H. Q. air force, stationed at Langley field, Virginia.

The date of this incident and all information about the prelude to it have been withheld by the air corps. It is stated, however, that Cadet Eyre was flying in a bombing plane—a Martin B-10 or B-12, one would judge from certain descriptive passages in the account.

He was at 10,000 feeet over Denbigh, Va., and was accompanied only by Private Marvin S. Cranfill of the same air corps organization when his story begins. He says that he had banked the airplane slightly to the right and then nosed down about 25 degrees into a power-on dive.

(Acme photo.)

". . . swing violently from side to side, describing an arc of 90 degrees with me as the pivot." (This is not Cadet Eyre, but another jumper whose 'chute oscillated.)

From here on read Cadet Eyre's own story:

"The air speed slowly increased to 220 miles an hour, at which time I eased the throttles back to full off position. As I did that the rudder pedals started vibrating at a high rate of speed. Knowing the plane was in a dangerous condition, I pulled back steadily on the stick to try to level up, but the elevators didn't seem to have much effect. After six or seven seconds, during which the vibrating got worse, everything seemed to let loose. I didn't know it then, but the rear half of the fuselage had snapped off right through the rear cockpit and thrown my passenger, Private Cranfill, out into space.

"The part of the plane I was in whipped over to an upside-down position. As it did so all I can remember is hearing what sounded like glass breaking and the ship vibrating terrifically before I passed into unconsciousness with a hopeless, sickening feeling. It seemed to me that I instantly came to and realized that I was whirling dizzily in an inverted spin. Actually I had fallen about 3,000 feet with the wreckage before regaining consciousness, during which time the wings had snapped off just beyond the motor mounts. But I didn't know the plane had gone to pieces. I thought it was still all intact, except possibly the rudder.

"I haven't any idea what speed the motors were turning at this time. I seemed to be spinning so fast I couldn't see anything. All I could think of was to get out of the plane and get out quick. Due to being pressed against the hood with considerable force, I had a little trouble reaching the latch. When I pulled it the hood opened easily. Then when I reached down and unlatched my safety belt I shot out of the cockpit like a rocket. I went so fast that I can't remember leaving the plane at all. The next thing I knew what that I was out in space, spinning in every conceivable direction, with my arms and legs outstretched to the limit. After a second or two I tried to bring my right hand over to pull the rip cord. But it wasn't as easy as that. I could bend my arm at the elbow, but I seemed to be helpless in getting my hand across my chest.

"I tried once, then twice, and the third time I was getting a little excited. I managed to get my hand where the rip cord should normally be, but it wasn't there. Then I made a frantic effort and reached clear around under my left arm. It was there all right, and, believe me, I got it. I yanked it with such force that it flew out of my hand as it came free and went sailing off to one side through space.

"I was watching it go, with a satisfied gleam in my eye, when all of a sudden, without any warning, I got jerked up with a terrible jolt. For a second it took all the energy out of me. I was just hanging there limp. Then I looked up and there was the good old 'chute rippling in the breeze and working perfectly. I looked on past it to see if I could see the plane anywhere. I can't describe the strange feeling I had when I saw thousands of small pieces, none of them over two or three feet in diameter, hurtling down through the air.

"I had cleared the plane at about 6,000 feet, and my 'chute opened at about 5,000 feet. But I didn't know then that the main piece, the piece I had been in, hit the ground about the time my 'chute opened. I sat there in a daze for a little while, wondering what had really happened. I had been thrown clear out of the zone of falling pieces, so I didn't have to worry about anything hitting my 'chute.

"Then with a flash I remembered my passenger. Where was he? I looked up, and there he was about 4,000 feet above me, safely riding his 'chute down. I felt better then and relaxed a little. Then another thought flashed through my mind, and I fairly froze. Where was I going to land? Was I going to come down in water? I had just been flying over the James river a few minutes before. The thought made a cold chill run through me. I finally managed to bend my neck and look down. What a relief that was to see good dry ground below me!

"Again I relaxed, and as I looked around I saw cars stopped along the roads and people standing out beside them. Apparently they were watching the excitement. Then I noticed my 'chute wasn't behaving very well. I was swinging violently from side to side, describing an arc of about 90 degrees, with me as the pivot. I wondered if there was any chance it would go so far over that it would fold up. Each time it would start swinging from one extreme position to the other the inside edge of the 'chute would sort of cave in. Several times it swung over so far it scared me. I was still a long ways from the ground, and I didn't want it to fold up yet. So I reached up and took hold of the lines and started seesawing against the swinging motion. That worked fine. Within a few seconds I had it quieted down nicely. And then without any warning it suddenly started swinging crossways to the way it had been going.

"I reached around and got hold of another set of lines and stopped the swinging. But each time I would stop it one way it would start the other way. I looked down, and we were still a couple of thousand feet up. It seemed that we were just hanging there in space, rocking. My arms got so tired I couldn't pull any more, so I gave it up as a bad job and let it rock. Strange, but it didn't seem to rock very much after that.

"Then I looked down again. I was about a thousand feet high now, and I could see I was falling pretty fast. I looked to see where I was going to land. I was headed straight for the middle of a heavy patch of timber. I couldn't tell which way I was drifting, so I pulled down on one side of the 'chute to try to guide it over toward the edge of the timber. I was down to three or four hundred feet now, and my efforts at guiding the 'chute hadn't helped at all, so I let go of it. As I looked down those treetops looked like big needles sticking up. I wondered which one I was going to hit. They were so thick I didn't think it possible for the 'chute to go down through them. But luck was with me 100 per cent and I came sailing down through an opening not much bigger than the 'chute. I was trying to look out for tree limbs, but they flashed by so fast I couldn't see them. Then with a bang I hit the ground and fell over in a heap on a carpet of pine needles."

Cadet Eyre suffered for several days from sore thigh muscles where the webbing of his 'chute spanked him when the canopy opened. His nose had been roughly treated when he banged against the cockpit hood, and he suffered from other minor cuts and bruises received before he left the airplane.

Private Cranfill's story is briefer. He says:

"I was surprised suddenly to find myself in the air. My first thought was to get my 'chute open. This was accomplished quickly, although I was jerked severely when it opened. My next thought was to find the ship, and I saw it falling in numerous pieces. As I neared the ground I thought about landing with my legs and body as limp as possible so as not to break any bones. I also tried to slip my 'chute so as to land in an open space, but failed in this and landed in a tree.

"I suffered no ill effects or injuries due to the jump."

Acids in Blood-must be removed by Kidneys
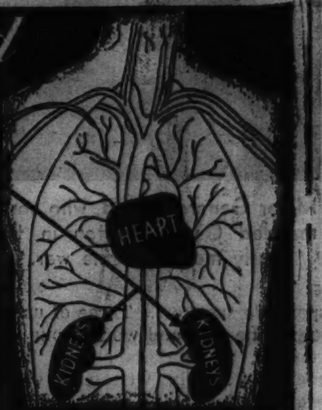
Or your system is poisoned



Your Health is Undermined And You May Suffer from Nervousness, Circles Under Eyes, Lack of Vitality, Getting Up Nights, Dizziness, Leg Pains, and Feel Tired, Run-Down, and Worn Out

There is nothing that can so quickly undermine your health, strength, and energy, as an excess of acid in your blood. Most people when thinking of Acidity think of the stomach. However, the type of acidity that undermines health is that arising in the blood and often caused by worry, overwork, fear, late hours or over-indulgence, thus placing a heavy strain or load on the kidneys.

Nature has provided an automatic method of getting rid of these excess Acids in the blood. This is accomplished by your Kidneys, the most intricate and delicate organs in your body. Each kidney, although only the size of your clenched fist, contains 4½ million tiny, delicate tubes or filters. Your blood circulates through these tiny filters 200 times an hour, or so frequently that in a 24-hour period the kidneys actually filter and purify a barrel of blood, so that the Acids and poisonous wastes may be removed.

Causes Many Troubles

Dr. Walter R. George, many years Health Commissioner of Indianapolis, recently stated: "Modern foods and drinks, nervous strain, worry, and overwork, place a tremendous load on the kidneys. For this reason it is estimated that millions of men and women at times are troubled with poorly functioning kidneys. In fact this condition is often the real cause of thousands of people feeling older than they should, run-down, exhausted, nervous, and worn out."

If your kidneys slow down and do not function properly and fail to remove approximately 3 pints of Acids, Poisons, and liquids from your blood every twenty-four hours, then there is a gradual accumulation of these Acids and Wastes, and slowly but surely your system becomes poisoned. Kidney dysfunctions often may cause many troublesome conditions, such as Nervousness, Getting Up Nights, Leg Pains, Dizziness, frequent Colds and Headaches, Rheumatic Pains, Swollen Joints, Circles under Eyes, Backaches, Loss of Vitality, Burning, Itching, and Smarting, Acidity.

Help Kidneys Doctor's Way

Druggists and doctors in thirty-five countries throughout the world think that the right way to help your kidneys function is with the doctor's prescription Cystex, which is scientifically prepared in accordance with the requirements of the United States and British pharmacopoeia to act directly on the kidneys as a diuretic. For instance, Dr. C. Van Straubenzee, noted European physician, stated: "I consider Cystex one of the most meritorious formulas I have ever examined, and recommend it most highly." And Dr. C. J. Roberts, formerly of the Philadelphia General Hospital, states: "In my years of practice I have employed many medicines and prescriptions to improve the functional action of the kidneys, but in my opinion there is no preparation that excels the prescription known as Cystex." Positive proof of the merit of Cystex is in each package, which contains a complete list of ingredients, so that you can know what you are taking and be told by your doctor or druggist that Cystex is a medicine in which you can place the utmost confidence.

Make This 8-Day Guaranteed Test

If you are rundown, worn out, feel older than you are, or suffer from the conditions previously mentioned, poorly functioning kidneys may be the real cause of your trouble. At any rate it will do you no harm to put Cystex to the test and see exactly what it can do in your particular case. Under the guarantee, in 8 days' time it must do the work to your complete satisfaction, or you merely return the empty package, and the full purchase price is refunded without question or argument. With Cystex there is no long waiting for results, because it is scientifically prepared to act directly on the kidneys as a diuretic. For that reason most people report a remarkable improvement within the first forty-eight hours and complete satisfaction within 8 days. In testing Cystex, you are the sole judge of your satisfaction. You must feel younger, stronger, and better than you have in a long time—you must feel that Cystex has done the work thoroughly and completely, or you merely return the empty package and it costs you nothing. Cystex costs only 3c a dose at druggists, and as the guarantee protects you completely, you can not afford to take chances with cheap, inferior, or irritating drugs or any medicine that is not good enough to be guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for guaranteed Cystex [pronounced Siss-tex] today.

Cash and Connections Are Needed to Start a Book

FOREWORD

● Fully half of all of the adults in the United States are wagering their money on this or that game of chance. America as never before is on a gambling spree. A conservative estimate places the amount of money bet annually at five billion dollars. A survey by The Chicago Tribune, which covered 11,000 miles, required nine weeks, and revealed the situations in a score of big American cities, brought to light astounding conditions among a population eager to get something for little more than nothing. Of all the dollars that change hands in gambling more than two-thirds constitute those bet on horse races. Today's article deals with bookmaking in Chicago, where the bookies accept at least $2,000,000 a day in bets.

By JOSEPH ATOR

CHICAGO bookies are taking at least $2,000,000 a day in horse bets. They ought to be keeping a tenth of that, $200,000. Would you like to get in on the gravy?

Here's what you'll have to do:

First, get yourself a bankroll. More handbooks have gone broke from lack of sufficient capital to carry them over the rough spots when the law of averages takes a vacation than for any other reason. If you aim to book $2,000 a day—and you can't make money on much less—you'll need $6,000 or $7,000.

Second, see your ward committeeman. The Democratic commiteeman, of course. The way things are running in town today a Republican committeeman is a big shot if he can get your dog out of the pound for you. You'll have to furnish the committeeman with one or more jobs—precinct captains' nephews and the like. If he's greedy he may want a piece of your business, too.

Third, go see Billy Skidmore. You'll find him down at his junk yard at 2840 South Kedzie avenue. In spite of reports to the contrary, he is still the guy to see. Otherwise the police captain of your district will get a notice from downtown that someone is making a book at your address, and will he please stop it instanter. Just why the handbook business can't get along without Bill Skidmore will come out later. He deals strictly for cash.

Fourth, go down to 431 South Dearborn street. There you'll find the headquarters of a wire service as well as of the subsidiary which handles the service in Chicago. Service will cost you from $40 a week up, depending on your volume of business. It will come to you by phone, into a loud-speaker for the convenience of your patrons, and gives you the jockies, weights, changing odds, and the call on the race as it is run.

While you're down there you can find out where to buy your rundown sheets, receipts, and other supplies. Incidentally, it's no use trying to get service until the committeeman and Skidmore give you the word to go.

Fifth, come down to the loop and find some bigger book to take your layoff money. On your capital, too big a bet on a long shot which popped would break you. You must have some place to lay off part of the money. If the layoff house—there are places which do nothing else—doesn't know you, you'll have to put up some cash to guarantee your credit.

Sixth, find yourself a shop. The landlord, you'll find, will probably charge you double the rent he'd ask for a delicatessen, and want six months in advance. While we haven't mentioned it before, it's still against the law to run a handbook, and he has to have some security against losing a tenant overnight.

Put out a little money in furnishing your place. Half your customers are going to be women, and they won't come into a dump. For the same reason, don't permit rowdyism or drinking when you get going, or allow bums to hang around the place.

Seventh, hire your help. Assuming that you will be your own cashier, paying off winning bets (you'd better be or you'll be robbed blind), you will need at a minimum a ticket writer, a wall man to mark your rundown sheets or blackboards, and a doorman. The latter two had better be a little bit tough. If you're stuck up you can't go running to the police.

Eighth, circulate around news stands, taverns, and cigar stores of the neighborhood. You'll find most of them lined up already, but get as many newsies, bartenders, and cigar clerks as you can to take bets over the counter or on the corner and phone them in to you. Pay them 5 per cent, cash business only. Give them a piece of change every time they steer a live customer your way. You must get the customers inside your door to make real money on them.

Finally, if any of the above is news to you, get some smart fellow who has made book before. Cut him in on the profits to run your place for you. Otherwise it's a 100 to 1 shot there won't be any profits. A bookie runs up against some of the sharpest chiselers in the world. Making book may be a crime, but it's likewise a highly complex business in which the amateur has no more chance than he has in any other business.

Chicago is the biggest handbook betting town in the country. There are certain qualifications to this statement, it is true. Chicago books handle no more money than the famous Jersey books which handle New York's illicit horse bets. But they handle just about as much, and from less than half the population. They aren't run quite as openly as the books in New Orleans, where the rundown sheets are in plain sight from the street and barkers invite you to the second-floor places, but it's still no trouble to find a book joint anywhere in the city.

Any shopping district which will support a chain grocery will also support a handbook. Look along the street for one of these short-coupled cigar stores—the window full of cigaret posters and a partition cutting off the room eight or ten feet from the door. You'll find a book behind the partition. Or listen for a loud-speaker which is somewhat more raucous than the average radio. That's the service call on a race. You can walk a mile in Hyde Park and rarely be out of hearing of one of them.

As to the number of handbooks operating, that depends on what you agree to call a handbook. It has been said that there are 5,000 or 6,000 books in Chicago. There are probably 5,000 or 6,000 places in town where you can put down a bet. That, however, includes newsboys, cigar clerks, and tavernkeepers who are not making book but are agents for handbooks. They don't hold your money, but pass it on for a commission.

A closer figure on the number of actual handbooks would be 1,500, and that would include a lot of places which, in a common phrase of the trade, aren't making book, but are just trying to make a living. That is, they don't handle enough money to yield more than a fair salary to the single operator. As has been stated before, a Chicago book has to handle about $2,000 a day to do better than break even. An exception to this is the family book, not uncommon in residential areas, where the bookie is assisted by his wife and perhaps other members of the family.

The loop alone has between fifty and seventy-five handbooks. Few of them do less than $5,000 a day in business, and some handle as high as $25,000. The loop bookmakers, incidentally, don't have to do business with Billy Skidmore. Michael Kenna, the "Hinky Dink" of song and fable, runs the First ward without any help, as he has been doing for nigh onto forty years. Drop around to his little cigar store at 311 South Clark street almost any noon hour and you'll get a fair idea of who is making book in the loop.

Mike Kenna runs the loop for two very good reasons. He keeps his word and he keeps his mouth shut. State Senator William Connors, who is an old-timer in the racket himself, has the situation well in his own hands in the Forty-second ward, just north of the river. But elsewhere in the city the usual rule is that you have to see Billy Skidmore.

To paraphrase the famous remark on the Holy Roman empire, if they hadn't had a Billy Skidmore around this town they would have had to invent one. Skidmore's stock in trade is the tightest pair of lips in Cook county. If you want a demonstration that silence is golden, drive out toward McHenry some day and see his country place, complete with private golf course.

Paying off bets at the Washington Park track.

Chicago, during the three decades in which Billy Skidmore has functioned as the No. 1 fixer for gambling and other illegal enterprises, has been noted for its bitter factional political quarrels. No one is ever sure when some official will be taken down with a sudden attack of virtue and try to pack his pals of a week or a year ago off to jail.

Under such conditions it behooves a gambler, a policeman, or a politician to be careful with whom he deals. Gamblers have been known to squeal on politicians, and cops on other cops. But with William the Silent as the insulator the guiltiest conscience in the world is eased by its owner's assurance that all he need do is deny everything and no jury in the city will vote guilty. At least, none has to date.

Because the handbook business in Chicago is so highly organized, this city affords an ideal field for studying its economics and mechanics. By "highly organized" it should not be understood that the handbook business here is in the hands of a single syndicate. It is not, and it is doubtful whether any combination, however powerful in political influence and gang muscle, could gain airtight control.

Years ago Mont Tennes came as close as anyone ever has to being the handbook king of Chicago. Tennes controled the racing service and ran books as well. Today the racing service hasn't an interest in a handbook anywhere in the country. It is content to sell service—sometimes service plus. But even with the additional lever of control of the service the history of Tennes was a long story of shootings and bombings and police trouble, sure indications that he never held a monopoly.

Today an attempted monopolist would have first of all to deal with fifty ward committeemen, most of them with some local favorites bidding for a share of the business. But the best indication that no one has been able to corner the business is the odds which Chicago books give.

The bulk of handbook bets are made at the odds on which the mutuels pay off at the track where the race is run. But almost without exception bookies protect themselves against severe losses on a single race by setting a house limit beyond which they will not go in matching mutuel prices. In most towns this is 15, 6, and 3—that is, the book will not pay more than 15 to 1 on a horse to win, 6 to 1 on him to place, or 3 to 1 on him to show, regardless of how high a long shot runs at the track. Seattle has the stinglest books in the country with a limit of 10, 4, and 2 on eastern tracks. In some towns the limit is 20, 8, and 4, but rarely higher except on small bets.

But in Chicago you can find almost any kind of odds if you hunt long enough. There is no general rule, but limits of 30, 12, and 6 are not uncommon, often with the proviso that unlimited track odds will be paid on bets of $5 or less or $2 or less. Chicago bookies aren't any more philanthropically inclined than their brothers in other cities. They pay the odds because they have to to get the business.

Even in prohibition days, it may be remembered, the Capone gang, far more powerful than any conceivable gambling syndicate, never got a complete strangle hold on the beer business in Chicago. Capone influence stopped short of 55th street; even the St. Valentine's day massacre didn't eliminate all of their competition on the north side, and in the fading days of the racket the terrible Touhys ran them ragged out northwest.

The Capone mob, considering all its connections and investments, is probably the biggest single factor in the Chicago handbook business. "Snorky" is grieving in Alcatraz that no one likes him, but Brother Ralph has been back on the street for a couple of years now, and he is administering both his own bankroll and Al's. A couple of the younger Capones are also buzzing around.

Ralph, as befits the banker of the outfit, keeps as much as he can in the background. He has a legitimate business, selling bottled spring water, which occupies a good deal of his time. The field general in the gambling and night club field is Frank Nitti, cousin of the Capones, who always bore the name of a shrewd financial operator. His lieutenants include "Little New York" Campagnia and Jimmy Adducci, who doubles in brass as a state representative.

"Dago Lawrence" Mangano, Adducci's old side-kick around Madison and Halsted streets, has moved his book into the loop, and there were reports recently that Dennis Cooney had also opened a loop book. For Cooney, best known as the manager of the wide-flung Capone brothels, this is a distinct step up the ladder of respectability.

Minor Caponeites can be found about a score or more of books. In one respect, however, the gang no longer resembles the bloody crew of prohibition days. The muscle is much less in evidence. Rarely in these days is the owner of a profitable spot greeted by the sight of a pair of plug-uglies, hands in bulging pockets, and the words, "Meet your new partners." Today the gang moves in by purchase. It can hardly be said, however, that the boys have reformed completely and take their grievances to the police or the courts for action. The slaying of Messrs. Prignano and Bolton, both well known Chicago politicians, seems to indicate that.

If the truth were known concerning the real ownership and the silent partners in all of the books, night clubs and gambling joints in the city, the Capone crowd would undoubtedly rank first. But so far as open connections go Bill Johnson is the town's biggest gambling operator.

Johnson prefers to run gambling houses, and does whenever he can, but so long as Chicago prefers to bet on the horses, he's willing to run books, too. He will usually be found running from three to half a dozen big places in and outside the city, with games in the evening if the lid is off table gambling.

He is a good business man. He recognizes the importance of keeping a competent staf together. He owns a number of apartment houses. When the heat is on, his dealers live in his buildings and gather once a week for a free meal. They pay off the rent arrears when they go back to work.

Johnson is not a gunman. Gambling, so far as can be learned, is the only violation of law of which he has ever been suspected. He is a pleasant person to meet and is well spoken of by many of our leading citizens, among them Sherif John Toman, who has characterized him as "a sweet man—a mighty sweet man."

Mr. Johnson's largest establishments are usually in suburban Cook county, where the sherif is the principal law enforcement officer.

Of the other better known gamblers or gambling bosses the Hon. Mr. Connors has already been mentioned. Out west there are Marty Guilfoyle and "Lovin' Putty" Annixter, at various times allies of Johnson. Spike O'Donnell—that upright ex-bank robber whom the police are always hounding with their suspicion—is reported to have a piece of some places around 79th and Ashland. The list could be prolonged almost indefinitly, but with little profit. We can move on to the machinery of the business.

As has been said before, the horse betting business is carried on by a vast network, wholly underground, stretching from coast to coast. Its operation resembles very closely the machinery of the insurance business. The analogy is not accidental. Every gaming code in the country has to have inserted in it a provision specifically exempting the insurance business (in Illinois it's section 332 of the criminal code). From the legalistic standpoint the only difference between insurance and gambling is that the former is deemed socially desirable, the latter socially undesirable.

Four different kinds of establishments handle the country's horse bets. They are the ordinary handbook, large or small; the layoff book, the betting commissioner, and the come-back money commissioner. If you bet a dollar or two it probably never gets beyond the book which takes it, although it does sometimes. If you bet $1,000 it will be handled by at least two of the agencies. And if you should bet $10,000 it might well go through the hands of all four types of agency.

'Way down at the bottom of the pile is the street corner agent, the newsboy, the cigar clerk, or the runner. He doesn't make book. He takes his bets in to some handbook, just as as an insurance agent takes his business to a broker. Almost as low in the regard of the gambling trade is the "louse" book. That term as originally applied meant any book which would take a bet of less than a dollar.

Today a majority of the Chicago books numerically are "louse" books. Out on Madison street you can bet a quarter. In the south side colored district you can bet even less. Horse betting has cut heavily into the numbers and policy games, and the players, keeping their long-shot complex developed by the lotteries, will bet a dime on a parlay of four or five horses.

If you want to insure your life for $5,000 or $10,000 any insurance company will write you a policy. But when John D. Rockefeller took out a $5,000,000 policy no company in this country or England would carry the risk alone. The business, and the attendant risk, was split among a number of companies, perhaps a score. The same principle, of spreading out the risk, governs layoff money in the betting business.

Every insurance company has a limit to the amount it will insure a single life or fire or marine risk. Every bookmaker, if he knows his business, sets a limit to the amount he can afford to lose on a single race. The rest of the money he lays off.

The layoff money may go to a larger handbook. If the sum is sufficiently large it may go to a bookie who does little else than handle such bets. The biggest handbooks in Chicago may not have a customer in their doors all day long. They operate in some downtown office and do their business by telephone with other handbooks or with large betters. Some of these books handle $25,000 or more a day.

Chicago handbooks as a group, a leading loop bookmaker says, will easily handle a single bet as high as $5,000. If the amount runs much higher than that the commission men come into the picture. They are in a sense a continuation of the layoff business, but they perform other functions.

No big better ever puts money into the mutuel machines. It's a matter of simple arithmetic. The winning pool, let us say, has $24,000 in it, with the better's horse at 2 to 1. That means roughly that $8,000 has been bet on that horse and that the mutuel players will get $6 on a $2 ticket. But if $10,000 more is bet on the same horse the mutuel price will drop to $3.60. By his own bet the big player has cut his 2 to 1 odds to 4 to 5.

Instead of going to the track he goes to a betting commissioner and gives him his $10,000. That commissioner will call, perhaps, Frank Erickson in the Jersey books, one of the Karger brothers in New Orleans, Oscar Gutter or "Palmer House" Ryan (he's now in France, but his employés have inherited his business) in Chicago, Tony Massena in Akron, Tom Kyne in San Francisco, Danny Sullivan at the Chesterfield in Detroit—there are one or more big betting commissioners in every large city.

The $10,000 is parceled out, $1,000 or $500 in a piece, among the various cities. The process doesn't stop there. The commission men redivide the money locally, offering the bigger books bets of $100 or more. They in turn spread it out in smaller sums. The process may end with some little book in Decatur or Bloomington holding a $5 piece of $10,000 bet half an hour before in New York. Bond underwriters do the same thing every week on a larger scale.

The whole thing is done on credit. Payment is made the following morning at the latest. If a bookie is honest but can't pay, he's out of the business until he can get a fresh bankroll. And if he can pay and doesn't, he frequently comes down with acute lead poisoning.

The bookies, of course, aren't unaware of the motives which cause the big better to put his money out in the books instead of the mutuels. They have a ready defense for it, which is to send the money back to the track. This is where the come-back money commissioner steps in.

Anyone can wire money to a race track, wherever the track will accept wire bets, as most of them do. All you have to do is to go to the nearest telegraph office, pay the price of a telegram and money order, and if your bet wins the company sends you back a money order for the winnings.

But there's no profit in this for the bookmaker. The best he does is break even—with this exception: If he wires half the money he holds on a horse to the track he not only breaks even on that half but his bet helps lower the odds at which he must pay off the money he holds.

He can still make a slight profit, however, if he deals through a come-back money commissioner. Theoretically the race track operators hate all bookies, on the grounds that the books take trade which would otherwise go to the track mutuel machines. Practically, so long as the books are running anyway, most tracks are willing to do business with them. Many of them will not only accept come-back money but pay a small commission for it.

This commission is less than the mutuel take, usually not more than 2½ or 3 per cent. The come-back commissioner takes bets from individual bookies and wires them to the track. He may pay bookies a smaller percentage for the business, perhaps 1 per cent. George "Bugs" Moran was running such an agency in Chicago this summer.

One of the virtues of a good betting commissioner is that he has facilities for getting money placed with fair assurance that it will not be sent back to the race tracks. For such services he usually charges the better a 5 per cent commission.

When they put reverse English on the come-back money procedure the operation is known as "padding" the mutuels. For such a coup a betting syndicate picks a track at which the normal betting volume is small. They pick a horse which is an odds-on favorite. If possible they insure themselves further by fixing the race.

Throughout the country their agents wait until a few minutes before the race and then, in as many books as possible, bet as much money as they can on the horse. If the odds are short on the horse, the bookies may make no effort to lay off the money. Even if they try, the bets are usually laid too late for them to reach the track.

Then, just before the race starts, $5,000 or $10,000 is put into the mutuels on other horses in the race. The horse, a logical even money bet, comes in at a price of 8 or 10 to 1, and the wails of the bookies can be heard from one end of the land to the other. Some of these coups have netted hundreds of thousands of dollars. The operators usually grab their money and go into hiding before the bookies begin comparing notes.

Sometimes a good psychologist can get the crowd at the track to pad the mutuels for him. Such a story and its tragic ending was told one evening in a little bar in Havre de Grace, Maryland. The owner of the place, a pleasant young Marylander, had a book in the town. He borrowed $500 to start it, and at the end of a month paid off the loan and had $3,200 in the bank. Then came the crash.

"One day a fellow asked me to go down to Bowie and bet $400 for him," he said. "Before I left I told my helper that there was a horse running at Tropical Park that day, named Don Guzman, that looked too hot to me. I told him to duck any bets on it that he could, and if any of the regular customers had money, to lay it off.

"So I go down to Bowie and put $100 of my own on the nag there, and it comes in at 10 to 1, and I get home feeling pretty good. Then my wife tells me my man had been trying to get me all afternoon. I go downtown, and he tells me: 'A fellow bet $200 on Don Guzman, and I couldn't lay it off. We're stuck for $2,600.'"

Down at the end of the bar, in a state of mellow melancholy, was a broken-down horse player. He spoke up.

"I'll tell you the rest of that," he said. "I owned half of that horse. When we got him ready to go I was broke, so I wrote a feed dealer and asked him to lay $2,500 around the books, half of it for me. Then, just before the race, I go running through the crowd" (he demonstrated) "hollering: 'Where's the vet? Why can't I get any service around here? My horse has the colic. I want the vet.' So everybody gets off my horse and he comes in and pays twenty-six bucks. I started figuring what my end would be on $1,250 in the books.

"But the trouble was," and he dropped a tear on his badly cracked shoe "the feed man forgot to pay off."

NEXT WEEK.

Admitting that any gambler is a sucker the lottery player is the biggest sucker of them all. Lottery includes the numbers game, policy game, "corn game" keno, tango, darto, beano, and screeno. These lotteries have as many devotees as have the horses. Lottery is the poor man's game. Ninety-nine per cent of all lottery bets come from persons who can least afford to gamble. The numbers game contributes more to gangster war chests than any other branch of gambling. These and other facts about the gambling industry will be told in the next instalment of "We Bet Five Billion," appearing in next Sunday's Graphic.

Judge Priest Turns Detective

By Irvin S. Cobb

The Landrum Kidnaping Is Solved, the Criminal Pays His Debt, and, After the Manner of Most Stories, the Boy Gets the Girl He Loves

CONCLUSION

REYNOLDS' eyebrows went up. "What with this and that, you appear to have been pushing your inquiry into a good many odd corners," he said.

"O, I had helpers," admitted Judge Priest. "You'd be surprised to know how many helpers I had. My black house boy, Jeff, was especially valuable when it came to picking up bits here and there amongst members of his own race. And I don't know what I'd have done without little Wally Bledsoe."

"Young Bledsoe, too?"

"O, yes, indeed. I employed him mainly on distant leads. O, first and last I had quite a staf, including Sherif Birdsong and Brother Coxey."

On that last name Reynolds' eyes widened in indubitable surprise.

"Coxey!" he echoed. "I thought you said he was high up on your list of possible suspects."

"He was, but, as I've explained, only at the beginning, say for the first thirty-six hours or so. He never was a very likely candidate anyhow. And when in fairly rapid succession I learned two things—first, that at the hour when Gabe Pitts vanished he was in the hands of the police, and, second, that he despised and distrusted you almost as fervently as he worshiped 'Ginny Landrum. I knew he could never have been your accomplice in any undertaking whatsoever, let alone one aimed at her."

"I never realized I was the object of his particular disfavor," admitted Reynolds. "How did you come to discover that?"

"By taking a shot in the dark. While he still was being detained by Chief Mallory I slipped out to his shack and searched it—without a search warant. And Brother Coxey, believe it or not, kept a diary. And I found it. And read it. Some time or other you must have hurt his feelings most grievously by ridiculing his creed. He overheard what you said and never forgave you.

"Pardon me for digressing. I promised you a straightaway tale. Well, to get back on the path, I first began to interest myself in you, Bailey, along about the time that Illinois farmer brought the bogus note on Thursday morning. I set a small trap for you then—and you fell into it."

"O, NO, I didn't," broke in the prisoner eagerly. "You set it, but I didn't fall into it. I admit that when you said it was strange the kidnapers did not send along some articles which would prove she really was in their hands I was struck by the soundness of the notion. To make the plan seem more valid, why not let the final clinching letter of instructions be accompanied with an actual belonging of hers? I said that to myself. And I'll admit further that at the first opportunity that afternoon I slipped into her room with the idea in mind of carrying off a trinket or a garment of hers—something that could easily be mailed up north and then mailed back again. But at the last moment I grew dubious. I said to myself that after all you might have rigged a snare. So I went away without taking anything."

"As I found out myself when I was at Landrum's Friday night. You see, Bailey, I found out then how you'd pawed over her dressing table and had also invaded a drawer where she kept her best initialed handkerchiefs."

"But how? I did open the drawer—that part is correct enough—but I didn't take any of those handkerchiefs, because caution overtook me just about then."

"Still, you rummaged among them?"

"Conceded that I did, how would you know that?"

"Son," said Judge Priest almost paternally, "in an emergency powdered ashes out of a corncob pipe can be spread so thinly on a silken surface that you'd never notice them, especially if you were in a hurry. But if you disturbed that silk the proof would be visible in the disarranged film of ash."

"O!" exclaimed Reynolds, jolted. "Well, Judge Priest, admitted that was major slip number one, wherein did I continue to slip?"

"Well, in the order of their development as they came forth before my eyes, number two was due to your error in stretching the long arm of coincidence clear out of joint. Less than eighteen months ago a young woman was kidnaped in Oklahoma. That same night at a point a few miles from where the kidnaping took place an Indian was seen driving a car at high speed, and in the car with him was a young woman whose hands and feet were bound—as several eyewitnesses testified. As a result the search for the kidnapers was diverted on a false trail and valuable time was lost because not until the following day did it come out that the Indian had merely been engaged in hurrying home with his recaptured half-breed daughter, who'd run off, and for the journey he'd trussed her up through fear that she might make a second attempt to get away. You must have read the account of that affair at the time, just as I did, and treasured it in your mind. Well, somehow or other I didn't forget it either, and when that Toledo dispatch arrived I began to do some earnest thinking. You see, this case already was incumbered with honest coincidences, and one more, on top of all the others, seemed to me to be more than the trafic could stand.

"Slip number three wasn't really your fault, although in your primary calculations you may have made a miscue. You'll naturally recall—no need to prod your memory there, since the scheme was yours—that Daley, the garage man at Toledo, was absolutely positive the tied-up red-headed female traveling in the car with the Michigan license plates on it spoke with a pronounced and unmistakable southern voice. I'm afraid your lady friend overplayed her part a little bit there. You should never have picked a northern woman, no matter how clever an actress, to handle that important rôle."

"That was an oversight," conceded Reynolds ruefully. "What else did I do that was wrong?"

"Let's see," said Judge Priest dryly. "I'm trying to keep the record in its proper chronological order. The next obvious break in your crumbling defenses became manifest to me when you were named to take the ransom money to Detroit."

"But it was you named me!" blurted Reynolds. "I don't see——"

"You will see in a minute, I think. I named you for two reasons—first, because by the terms of that final letter you and you alone were indicated as the money bearer. I figure you spent a good many hours framing the language of those instructions. The choice inevitably must fall upon you. But the trouble was you hung back too long before accepting. Your pretended embarrassment was overdone, Bailey, your hesitation just a bit too obvious."

"But by your own interference—by naming me before I or anyone else could do it—weren't you making the trick of getting away with the money all the easier for me? Seems to me it's my turn to criticize your technique."

"Son, you never had a hope. There was delay about getting the money together, wasn't there? I don't wish to boast, but my fine Italian hand was meddling there. There was delay about getting a plane to carry you north, wasn't there?

"Well, I'm about through. I'm coming now to your final mistake—and your most disastrous one. I refer to the matter of Tip Zelner's death last night. I'm afraid, very much afraid, that from the standpoint of your own interests you were too impetuous. Because, living, he might not have hurt you materially. He might have made his bargain without further implicating you in my eyes—and remember, at the moment, you didn't dream that I was seeking to implicate you or had cause to implicate you.

"When I stood over him, and he lying there dead, his dead body spoke to me with a most eloquent tongue, setting my wits to working along the channel which they should have been following all during those minutes that I'd waited. All at once a whole sequence of interrelated and significant facts began to march through my mind and line themselves on the profit side of my private ledger. I looked down at him and I said to myself—and to him: 'You started to me from Bailey Reynolds. He prompted you to come. Why? To that there is now at this moment only one fatal answer. And what has been your prior connection with Bailey Reynolds? Well, to begin with, haven't I heard somewhere or other, at some bygone time or other, that under him you acted as a sort of groundkeeper for certain properties in the neighborhood where you lived? That grouping would include the old Tarvin property, wouldn't it? And in all this end of the state what likelier place wherein to keep a human being as a prisoner is there than that selfsame old Tarvin house?

"Well, I reckon that about winds us up," added Judge Priest. "So, unless you have something else on your mind, I expect I'd better be going."

"I'm sure I'm very much obliged to you, Judge," said Reynolds easily. "Sorry I can't see you to the door. You've been thorough and, I must say, most illuminating. If I'm not detaining you, there is one farewell question I'd like to ask you."

"Yes?"

"As—ahem—a criminal, and taking into consideration that I was in a way of speaking a novice at the calling, what would you say was my most conspicuous shortcoming?"

"Son," said Judge Priest, "it has been my experience—and I've sat on the bench for getting along toward half a century now—that the average deliberate lawbreaker whether he be amateur or professional, is either entirely too smart for his own good or not smart enough. The stupid one leaves the evidence of his wrongdoing behind him. The smart one, in his effort to protect himself, overreaches and manufactures evidence against himself. Does that answer your question?"

"In a way it does. And thank you for being so frank."

"Was there anything else?"

"Nothing that I can think of. Thanks all the same."

"Well, I'll probably be seeing you again soon—here or elsewhere. Good-by until then," said Judge Priest, starting down the jail corridor.

To that there was no reply. Next morning Judge Priest knew why there had been no reply. He knew why Bailey Reynolds had stood there, his hands clenching two steel uprights of the barred door, and in that parting moment had looked upon him with so cryptic a squint in the small, furtive eyes behind the jaunty nose glasses, so self-satisfied a smile upon the smug, complacent face—almost a whimsical smile it was.

For next morning when the county jailer came to Bailey Reynolds' cell with a jail breakfast on a tray he found the real estate man's body stiffly dangling from an overhead steam pipe.

So intent were the lovers upon wringing from the present idyllic moment the uttermost of joy in it that, sitting on the rickety old sofa of horsehair at the back side of Judge Priest's living room, they seemed idiotically oblivious to various freed iron springs which rose through the sagged cushion like mean little snakes uncoiling to prong them. Indeed, it would appear they hardly were cognizant of the girl's father and the girl's father's best friend, who beamed approval of this spectacle from where they nursed their toddies and toasted their shins before a small blaze of hickory sticks in the open fireplace.

The youngsters were quite sure it was the biggest evening of their whole lives—up until then.

FOR April in that latitude it was a chilly evening. It was the evening of the tenth day since the kidnaping, the evening of the third day since the girl's release from captivity. The youngsters were quite sure it was the biggest evening of their whole lives—up until then.

"Judge," presently said Virginia, having just brazenly kissed her fiancé full upon the mouth, "we felt we just had to bring the glad tidings to you first one of all."

"So you've remarked at least half a dozen times sence you busted in like a harricane and broke up my plans fur a quiet evenin' at home," answered the oldster. "Think I'm deef or somethin'?"

"No, and you've proved to the whole nation you aren't dumb, either," she retorted saucily.

"I don't know what the world's coming to," said Landrum with a side wink for Judge Priest. "To think that a properly raised southern girl—at least we tried to raise her properly—and, what's more, a daughter of mine, would shamelessly spoon right before her parent's outraged eyes!"

"Acts mouty happy, don't she?" Lowering his voice to a reedy half whisper, the host spoke across the harth. "Not a trace left on her to show fur what she's went through, neither. Well, that's youth fur you. Thank God fur youth! Thank God fur a lot of things, G. W.!"

"But she's mighty young too," replied the father, also in an undertone. "And so is he! Maybe, Judge, we've made a mistake, her mother and I, letting them take advantage of our feelings over getting her back to sweep us off our feet. Maybe we should have insisted on a longer engagement. How could children of their ages know their own minds?"

"Well, I don't know so well about that," said Judge Priest. "At that age their minds ain't all cluttered up yit with a lot of worthless lumber. Young people today may be a little franker than when we wuz sparkin' about, but strikes me they think clearer. Leastwise they know whut they want and they go git it. . . . I'll bet you a purty, G. W., that 'Ginny's mother wuz set on this match frum the fust minute they sprung the big idea on you two."

"So she was. How'd you guess it?"

"Because she's smarter than you, to begin with. And furthermore because she's got whut they call maternal intuition. And that's exactly whut it is, I reckon. In a case like this I'd trust the jedgment of the other sex quicker'n I'd trust yours or mine, every pop. And I'll trust that boy over there to do the right thing. These past few days I've seen him tested ez with fire, and he showed the pure, clear strain. He's got grit and he's got brains—he proved that the way he handled his end of the job—and he's got character. Yes, and good blood, too." He leaned forward and patted Landrum's knee. "Yes, and with any kind of luck you and your good lady air goin' to have grandchildren you kin be proud of!"

"Well, I'll tell you this much," said Landrum, and cleared his throat of a sudden slight huskiness. "If that first grandchild of mine is a grandson and Virginia doesn't name him after a certain elderly party now here in the flesh, I'll disinherit her. Or, for that matter, if the first child is a girl, Billy would make a fine name for any girl."

For a long minute Judge Priest just sat and blinked hard. Then with some difficulty he extracted from a hip pocket an enormous yellow silk handkerchief and took off his glasses and wiped them. "Got to git me some new spectacles," he remarked. "This here pair git fogged up too easy."

"I guess I'll be trotting along," said Landrum. "Mrs. Landrum is still pretty nervous. She's getting all right fast, but I don't like to leave her alone for too long, especially after nightfall."

Before she went Virginia came over and put her arms around Judge Priest and kissed him and put her tawny head upon his shoulder and in a quick, choky way she said:

"Next to Wally, and next to my mother and my daddy, I love you best in the world. And always will."

Judge Priest's next visitor and his last one for that night was Sherif Giles Birdsong, the latter calling evidently by appointment.

After the hallowed rite of serving him a drink ceremoniously had been attended to by Jeff Poindexter, and after Jeff had withdrawn to partake of a nourishing nip of his own fashioning back in the kitchen, the ancient, looking at his blocky associate over the fragrant rim of a fat tumbler, said:

"All checked up on everythin', I presume, Giles?"

"All checked up on practically everything," affirmed Mr. Birdsong. "We got the report back just a little while ago from that ballistics expert over in St. Louis. The groovin's in the bullet out of Gabe Pitts' head match up with the marks on the bullet from Tip Zelner's body, provin' both shots came from the same pistol. But then we already were dead sure they would prove that. So that don't mean much any more."

"Well, suh, Giles," philosophized Judge Priest, "the late Bailey Reynolds shorely did cut a bloody swath oncet he set his feet on the slippery downhill grade, didn't he, now? Fust off he feels called upon to murder a poor, inoffensive darkey that never'd done anybody any harm. Then he feels it incumbent upon him to shoot down his feller miscreant, Tip Zelner. And fur a windup he hauls off and hangs himself with his own galluses—three violent deaths, besides a brutal kidnaping, is the complete tally of this here sorry affair."

"Or four, if you're willin' to include the midget, Shorty, as a sort of long-distance victim," suggested Mr. Birdsong.

"In a vicarious way of speakin', I reckin Shorty could sort of qualify fur the completed casualty list," agreed Judge Priest. "Any further items regardin' his takin' off been received since press time? All I seen wuz the bulletin in tonight's paper sayin' he'd been recognized and wuz headed off ez he drove that stolen local car into El Paso, Texas, with Broderick, alias Butler, alongside him, and that Broderick got away somehow, but Shorty elected to shoot it out with the police and got pumped full of hot lead."

"Well, they identified him, or rather he lived long enough to tell who he was and tell some other things. I heard that down town about supper time. Gilfoil was his name, and he was a hijacker and all-around bad boy in a piddlin' sort of way from somewheres out on the Pacific coast. In his dyin' statement he said what him and his pals were down here for was nobody's business, but he swore it had nothin' to do with kidnapin' anybody. They think Broderick got across the line into old Mexico. They're supposed to be after him, but not tryin' very hard, I reckin."

"All of which would seem to sort of leave our valiant chief of police further out on a limb than ever, as it were," said Judge Priest. "And likewise change the status of the two survivors of that bunch still locked up here from Mallory's public enemies Nos. 1 and 2 into our county jail's forgotten men."

"I wouldn't hardly say that. Seems both of 'em are wanted somewhere up north—one for jail breakin' and the other one, Synder, or whatever his name is, for shootin' a bank watchman—and rewards posted in both cases. Chief Mallory may have gone off halfcocked, but just the same he's due to collect money for bein' wrong. What'll you bet, judge, that inside of a week he ain't struttin' around town claimin' he knew it all along and accused 'em of snatchin' the young lady jest for a blind whilst he was tracin' back on those scalawags?"

"Betwixt you and me, I wouldn't bet you a cent—not on a dead shore proposition like that."

"Come to think of it," said Mr. Birdsong, "there was something else. Judge, what's going to be your pleasure regardin' the red-headed woman and the slick talkin' man that did all that fancy play-actin' for Bailey Reynolds across country from here clear to Detroit, Michigan? That is, if you know where they are?"

"I know exactly where they are, but before we go into that lemme set you right on one little error. She wuzn't a red-headed woman; wuzn't on the square even in that small detail. She wuz wearin' a red wig. I reckin we could trace that wig to where it wuz bought—and doubtless paid for out of Bailey Reynolds' pocket—ef it wuz worth while, which it ain't any longer. And my pleasure is that in a way of speakin' we're going to let her be—her and her accomplice, who, incidentally, happens to be her lawful wedded husband."

Mr. Birdsong's bushy eyebrows rose almost into his scalp.

"You mean to say that, knowin' where they are, you ain't goin' to have 'em back here to be indicted and tried as accessories before and after the fact?"

"Purcisely that, Giles, purcisely that. In the fust place, sich a costly procedure would put a heavy burden on the taxpayers of this county. In the second place, I mistrust whether we could git a conviction, Reynolds and Zelner both havin' passed on to their jest deserts."

"You mean they're to 'scape off scot free?"

"I DIDN'T say that. They're goin' to be punished, or I miss my guess. They ain't goin' to be arrested, but every wakin' minute from now on they'll be made to live in fear of bein' arrested. Secret service men will be after them like hounds after a pair of harried foxes, never quite overtakin' them but furever seemin' to be about to do so. Ever'wheres they stop they'll git a fresh skeer. They'll be dodgin' their own shadows, flinchin' at every footstep behind 'em, shiverin' whenever the doorbell rings, dodgin' from one hidin' place to another. They'll be put to it to find a place to lay their tormented heads."

"I get your general drift now," said Mr. Birdsong, warm approval in his tone. "Well, ain't that nice? O, by the way, Judge, there is one more question that all along I've been layin' off to ask you. How come you first got the notion of hookin' in this here specific couple with Bailey Reynolds' plot?"

"Giles, one of the main troubles with this ancient skull of mine is that I keep it all messed up with useless odds and ends of information. Oncet I hear a thing, no matter how trivial 'tis, I don't seem to be able to furgit it. But here's one instance where this unfortunate faculty of mine jestified itself. All of a sudden, right after that Toledo service station episode come to pass, I reached into my poor old overcrowded brain, and frum under one lobe of it, where it had been tucked away, ez it were, like a bug under a chunk, I fetched out a recollection ratin' fur back into the past. I seemed to remember one time years and years ago when Bailey Reynolds wuz livin' up north and sowin' of his wild oats—sowin' 'em in a meachin', economical way, no doubt, but nevertheless sowin' 'em—he got mixed up with a cheap actress out of a cheap stock company and run 'round with her and got himself freely talked about, 'specially down here. And then I excavated into another corner of my noodle and dug forth a sequel in that female's known career which seemed to tie in with the fust one. Because it came to my mind havin' heared that after she got married her and her husband both went to state prison in Ohio for blackmailin'. So when things began to happen 'round here, jest on a long chance I telegraphed on to find out the present status of this interestin' pair and promptly got word back they'd both been let out less than three months ago—last January, to be exact. So I shunted young Wally Bledsoe out of this state into Ohio and he made for Columbus, and inside of thirty-six hours he wuz showin' a batch of rogues' gallery pictures to that young Daley from Toledo, and Daley wuz positively identifyin' 'em ez fairly accurate though not particularly flatterin' likenesses of the selfsame couple that he'd waited on in the cold, gray dawn of a certain mornin'. Meanwhile, frum this end, ez a belated idea, I'd also commandeered copies of some more or less incriminatin' and confirmatory telegrams that Bailey Reynolds had been stupid enough to file durin' the past few weeks and days frum our local offices, usin' fictitious names, of course, fur both sender and recipient, but all easy enough to trace back to the proper source."

MR. BIRDSONG emptied his glass with one flourishing congratulatory draft. "Smart kid, that Bledsoe boy," he said. "I didn't give him full credit till this minute."

"Smart ez a whip and goin' to make his mark, you see ef he don't," Judge Priest affirmed. "He wuz here jest a little bit ago—him and his future father-in-law and his future bride."

"Well, I'll be dadgum'!" exclaimed Mr. Birdsong. "You don't tell me so!"

"I might ez well, seein' ez the formal announcement'll be out inside of a day or two. It's to be some time in June, exact date to be settled later. On account of everythin', it's goin' to be a quiet marriage at home, but I'll see to it you git a special invite. You're entitled to it ef enybody is."

"I'll be there if it breaks a leg," said Mr. Birdsong fervently. "Looky here, Judge, that's sure one weddin' where you oughter be the best man."

"And maybe I will, ef Brother Coxey don't pray me out of the job. They tell me he's prayin' better'n ever these past few days."

"And in the meanwhile I s'pose you're aimin' to catch up with your fishin'?"

"Jest watch me. Bright and early in the mornin' I'm embarkin' on a regular fishin' orgy, fust along Moundbuilder creek and then on down to Reelfoot fur a whirl at all those big croppies and yeller cats down there. But fur tonight I've got a different kind of a celebration in view. Ef you've got no conscientious scruples botherin' you, I'd like fur you to join me in same." He opened the hall door and called rearward: "Jeff, O, Jeff, fetch on some more sweetenin' drams—a whole lot more sweetenin' drams!"

He turned to beam upon his companion.

"Giles Birdsong," he said, "I've got a feelin' that the Honorable William Pitman Priest is a-fixin' to get jest a little bit tight."

The Fall of Oscar Wilde

Last Days of a Misspent Life

His Release from Prison and Retreat to France

SYNOPSIS

Today's instalment closes the tragic tale of the brilliant genius, Oscar Wilde, once the idol of London, whose literary career was wrecked by the strange friendship between him and Lord Alfred Douglas. The marquess of Queensberry, Alfred's father, determined to break the friendship, insulted Wilde, and drove him to the disastrous lawsuit with all its appalling revelations. Wilde dropped his suit against the marquess, but too late; he was immediately arrested and thrown in jail. In last week's instalment his sentence to two years at hard labor is told, and his life in prison, with all its punishments and brutality, described. This final chapter begins with Wilde ready to leave prison and tells of his desperate effort to start life anew.

INSTALMENT IV.

By LOUISE BARGELT

Reading Gaol, 1897.

I am completely penniless and absolutely homeless. Yet there are worse things in the world than that. I am quite candid when I say that rather than go out from this prison with bitterness in my heart against the world I would gladly and readily beg my bread from door to door.

I want to get to the point when I shall be able to say that the two great turning points in my life were when my father sent me to Oxford and when society sent me to prison. I will not say that prison is the best thing that could have happened to me, for that would savor of too great bitterness toward myself. I would sooner say that in my perversity, and for that perversity's sake, I turned the good things of my life to evil and the evil things of my life to good.

All trials are trials for one's life, just as all sentences are sentences of death; and three times have I been tried. The first time I left the box to be arrested, the second to be led back to the house of detention, the third time to pass into prison for two years.

Society as we have constituted it will have no place for me, has none to offer, but Nature, whose sweet rains fall on the unjust and the just alike, will have clefts where I may hide and secret valleys in whose silence I may weep undisturbed. She will hang the night with stars so that I may walk abroad in the darkness without stumbling, and send the wind over my footprints so that none may track me to my hurt; she will cleanse me in great waters and with bitter herbs make me whole.

Wilde paced his cell for long hours as the day of his release approached. A few of his friends sent word to him that a little money had been collected for his needs when the moment came that the clothes he had worn on his conviction should be given back to him and he should also receive the half-sovereign—the wages he had earned from the prison during his "two years at hard labor"!

Wilde knew that his return to the world would be painful and humiliating, and he was trying to fortify himself against what he felt was inevitable:

The fact of my having been the common prisoner of a common gaol I must frankly accept. I must accept it as my punishment.

Many men on their release carry their prison about with them into the air and hide it as a secret disgrace, and at length, like poor poisoned things, creep into some hole and die.

The poor thieves who are imprisoned here with me are more fortunate than I am. The little way in the gray city or green field that saw their sin is small—but everywhere I shall turn my name shall be written on the rocks in lead. I have come from a sort of eternity of fame to an eternity of infamy.

I believe that I may be given enough to live on for about eighteen months, so that if I may not write beautiful books I may at least be able to read them; what joy can be greater! After that I hope to be able to recreate my creative faculty.

If I can only keep from feeling bitterness! Prison life makes one rebellious. The most terrible thing about it is not that it breaks one's heart—hearts are made to be broken—but that it turns one's heart to stone.

Everywhere I go people will recognize me—know all about my life as far as its follies go. I must again assert myself as an artist. If I can only produce one beautiful work of art I shall be able to rob malice of its venom and pluck out the tongue of scorn by its roots.

After his prison release Wilde went first to Dieppe, in France. For a time he kept his own name and tried to brave it out, but the English residents threatened to boycott restaurants which should admit him, and he decided to change his name to Sebastian Welmoth. He retreated to the little village of Berneval-sur-Mer and for a brief period seemed physically and mentally fit. His body was in fine shape, he was enjoying a sense of freedom; this was the last happiness he was ever to know.

"I'm really happy again," he declared. "I want to stay here always. I'm afraid to trust myself in Paris. I never want to see that city—I might go back to things I don't desire. I only want to work and capture success again with my pen."

Oscar Wilde, from an old-time photograph. Note the luxuriant locks and the rich fur collar of the coat, which were among the vanities of the poet and playwright.

He set to work in grim earnest for a few brief months. He worked on "De Profundis," the finest piece of prose he ever did, and which he had started in prison. He completed "The Ballad of Reading Gaol." He felt convinced a new and better life was ahead.

"I am no longer ashamed of having been in prison," he said. "I often used to be in more shameful places. I am deeply ashamed of having led a life unworthy of an artist. But when I reckon all that is left to me—the sun and sea, many books, a few good friends, a brain and body to which health and power are not denied—really I am rich when I count up all I have."

These are perhaps the most tragic words Wilde ever penned, for neither his brain nor his body had any real health or power left. His joy was short-lived. He was soon to see with the clarity of vision sometimes given to the doomed that prison and the whole catastrophe of which it was the climax had broken his will power; it was to let in with a rush the welter of hereditary and early influence which were to complete his undoing.

He was not content for long with the simple country life of Berneval. He had been hoping that his wife, Constance, and their two boys would join him. But her family insisted that she must wait a year and put her husband on a twelve months' probation.

Once again Wilde came to a turning point in his life—and took the wrong turn. He accepted an invitation from Lord Alfred Douglas to visit him in his villa in Posilippo, Naples. Berneval was growing chill and the sea was overhung with gray mists. A call from "Bosie" to the land of warmth and sunshine could not be resisted. He yielded to the friend who had been unwittingly responsible for his final downfall when he urged him in 1895 to stake success and reputation on the Queensberry suit. Once he wrote to Lord Douglas:

I feel sometimes as if you had always been merely a puppet, worked by some secret, unseen hand, to bring terrible events to a terrible issue.

The "unseen hand" was not Lord Douglas; it was only Wilde's inherent weakness, but this he would never admit.

The visit proved to be catastrophic for Wilde in the light of later, swift-moving events. When Constance Wilde heard of it she gave up all hope of her husband's reform and the possibility that he might abandon his old habits and settle down to creative writing. When Alfred's mother heard of it she issued an ultimatum that she would stop her son's allowance unless he separated from Wilde immediately. Lord Alfred departed precipitately, not, however, before he honestly tried to make some financial provision for Wilde. In his book, "My Friendship with Oscar Wilde," he says of the episode:

Obviously there was nothing for me to do but leave him. We were neither of us in a position to raise a penny. I left him in my villa with three months' rent paid in advance. With ordinary care the 200 pounds I got for him would have kept him in Naples, where everything was amazingly cheap, in comfort for five or six months. But Oscar remained only for a few weeks in Naples and then went to Paris.

In Paris Wilde lived on the money his friends collected for him. He felt it was only fair they should support him, and he wanted to be supported in good style. He wanted to live as luxuriously as he had in the days of his success, and he begged and wheedled and cajoled money first from one man and then another. Robert Ross and Frank Harris gave him money regularly. His wife sent him a few pounds each week. Lord Douglas also donated considerable sums from time to time, but Wilde's mounting demands finally angered him. He exploded to Frank Harris:

He seems to think I owe it to him. How did I know the Queensberry case was going against him and he'd be thrown in prison? Why doesn't he work? He's doing nothing but drinking and eating all day and all night. He's getting fatter and more bloated all the time. Fat and bloated and lazy—that's what he is!

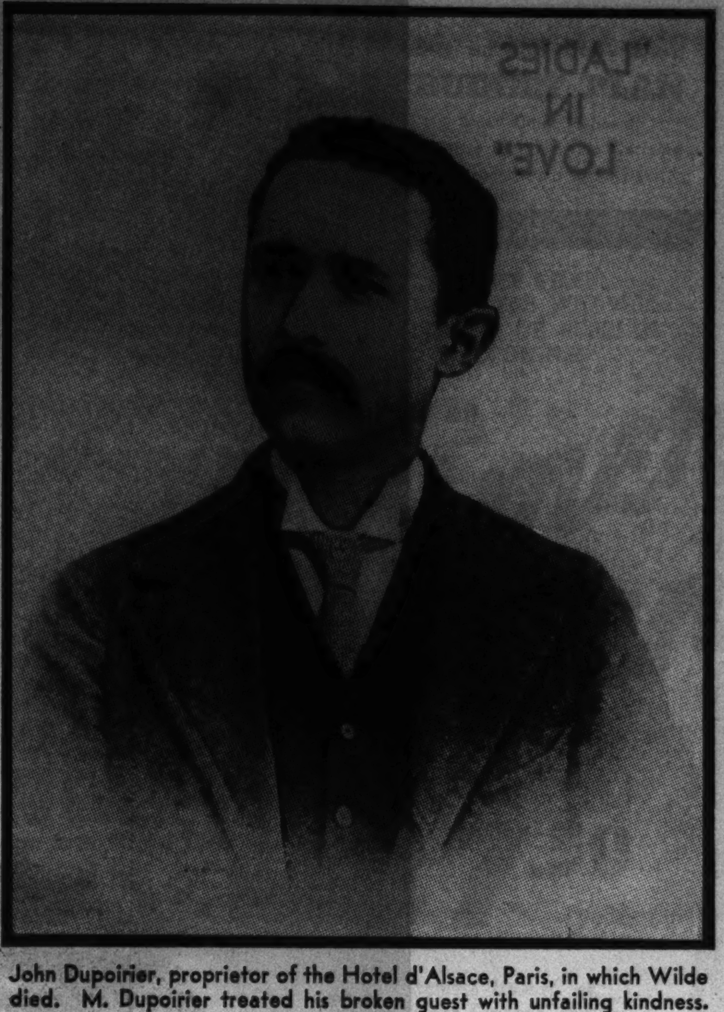
At last Harris made one frantic, final effort to put Wilde on his feet. He took him on a trip to the south of France, hoping that the miracle would happen and Wilde once more would start to write. He tells how he urged Wilde to pull himself together and "come back":

You are forty-odd years of age, and the keenest sensations of life are over for you. Turn back while there's time, write your plays, and those who really count will give you another chance. No one sinks to the dregs except by his own weight, and no man is happy who has not freed himself from the whip of passion. When will you do that?

"Never, I hope," Wilde answered. "Life without desire would not be worth living. The sting of pleasure for me grows keener with the years."

And at the end of the trip Wilde declared definitly that he was through trying to work or to recapture success:

It's no use. Don't bother me any more about writing. I'd rather talk. What have I to write about, anyway? I'm a man who has lost his way.



John Dupoirier, proprietor of the Hotel d'Alsace, Paris, in which Wilde died. M. Dupoirier treated his broken guest with unfailing kindness.

Harris gave up after this. Wilde returned to Paris and plunged once more into all his old habits. He knew by now that he was in the grip of a fatal disease and had not long to live. The man who had left Oxford giving such fair prospect of fairer things to come; who had written sparkling plays, the "wittiest plays ever seen on a modern stage," "Lady Windermere's Fan," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "An Ideal Husband"; whose drama "Salome," popularized after his death, has the reputation of having run for a longer consecutive period in Germany than any other English play, not excepting those of Shakespeare; and whose "Ballad of Reading Gaol" was even at this time circulating throughout most of the countries of Europe and being translated into most European languages, was beginning to waste rapidly from the ravages of a terrible disease.

In the last year of his life, 1899-1900, he began to grow careless of his appearance and look shabby and down at the heels. He suffered almost constant pain which only morphia could relieve. Occasionally, under the influence of the absinthe which he drank now in increasing quantities, he would return to his old gay, sparkling self. His doctors told him that he must stop drinking wine and fortiori spirits, and also the use of tobacco. But he only shrugged his shoulders and asked, "What have I to live for?" He had never practiced self-denial, and declared that if he could not eat and drink and smoke he no longer cared to live. "The end cannot come too soon."

I remember when I was at Oxford saying to one of my friends as we were strolling around Magdalen's narrow, bird-haunted walks one morning in the year before I took my degree that I wanted to eat of the fruit of all of the trees in the garden of the world, and that I was going out into the world with that passion in my soul. And so indeed I went out, and so I lived. My only mistake was that I confined myself so exclusively to the trees of what seemed to me the sunlit side of the garden and shunned the other side for its shadow and gloom.

Failure, disgrace, poverty, sorrow, despair, suffering, tears even, the broken words that come from lips in pain, remorse that makes one walk on thorns, conscience that condemns, self-abasement that punishes, the misery that puts ashes on its head, the anguish that chooses sackcloth for its raiment and into its own drink puts gall:—all these were things of which I was afraid. As I had determined to know nothing of them, I was forced to taste each of them in turn, to feed on them, to have for a season, indeed, no other food at all.

Wilde learned well the secrets in the shadowy side of the garden. The only tragedy was that after having tasted all of the fruit in all of the gardens he could never put them behind him.

By November of 1900 Wilde began to look very ill. He was living in the small Hôtel d'Alsace. He had lost weight rapidly in the preceding months; his flesh was livid and his conversation often rambling and harrowing. He still went out for occasional rides with Reggie Turner, who remained with him until the end, and still insisted on halting the victoria every few hundred yards to have a drink of absinthe. When Reggie, who had been warned by the doctors against giving him either absinthe or champagne, would remonstrate, Wilde would retort with a flash of his old humor that he intended to die as he had lived—"beyond his means."

How He Died in a Paris Hotel

Wilde's speech grew thicker; morphia by night and champagne by day did not help to keep it clear. He raved childishly against his friends when they came to see him because they would not give him enough money to settle all his debts, and then wept with despair when they departed. He was alone these last weeks excepting for Reggie Turner and Robert Ross and the proprietor of the hotel, John Dupoirier, who treated him with unfailing kindness. Frank Harris and Lord Alfred Douglas did not reach Paris until the day of the funeral.

Wilde spent long hours in a chair by his little window staring out across the Paris he had always loved. There were moments when he showed astonishing flashes of his old gayety and wit, but for the most part his mind seemed to travel back over the sorry years and he was lost in bitter reflection. He dwelt often on his punishment, plumbing it in retrospect to the bitter depths.

"I used to think myself a lord of life," he muttered once to Turner. "But I hurled myself down a precipice and have never been able to pull myself out of it. I was punished enough by society, God knows—but look at how individuals have punished me ever since. I never would have believed men could be so savage. If I had run away, as Harris wanted me to before the trial, taken that yacht he had waiting for me, got free of the Thames, and reached the high seas, I'd be a free man today. I wouldn't be dying by inches, scorned and hated. Now I can only bow my head to my suffering and go on tasting lees and dregs to the end."

He died on the afternoon of Nov. 30 after having lain unconscious for many hours. His body, ravaged and rendered unsightly by a dread disease, had given out at last, its tissues weakened and destroyed in the pursuit of those indulgences he was never able to give up.

It was a bleak, cold day when a few friends, among them Lord Alfred Douglas and Frank Harris, Robert Ross and Reggie Turner, followed his body to its grave in the little cemetery of Bagneux on Dec. 3. A simple laurel wreath at the head of the coffin bore the inscription:

"A tribute to his literary achievements and distinction."

Nine years later his body was exhumed and Robert Ross, always a devoted friend, placed his remains in a new coffin and removed it to Père Lachaise cemetery, where a monument by Epstein was erected: "To the memory of Oscar Wilde."

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—With Hollywood directors and casting directors again complaining about a scarcity of young leading men, one would think that it would be an easy matter for a personable young fellow to break into films.

"If ever there were golden opportunities for talented young men, now is the time. The gates of opportunity are wide open, with studios more willing to give tests than ever before," says George Cukor, director.

So they all say. It sounds so easy, but there are many young fellows who haven't found it that way.

Robert Cummings, Paramount's young find who played the boy from Texas in "So Red the Rose," and impressed all filmdom with his performance and screen personality, still would be "outside the gates looking in" if it hadn't been for his ingenuity and persistence.

The adventures Bob had while trying to convince stage and film magnates that they could not get along without his talents read like a "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" tale, but he has his scrapbook to prove it.

Elder Cummings Always Wanted Son to Be Singer.

Like so many of the popular young leading men, Cummings is from a small town, Joplin, Mo., to be exact. His father, like Robert Taylor's, is a doctor. The elder Cummings had earned his way through medical school as a singer and always had wanted his son to be one.

To please his father, Bob took a song and dance course by correspondence while he still was living in Joplin. "Must have been a good course in spite of what they say about correspondence courses. Several other actors I know took it, too. It was all I had in the way of training when I went into the Ziegfeld Follies as a song and dance man," says Bob with a grin.

The song and dance stuff wasn't the limit of this young man's ambitions. He went from Joplin to New York where he attended the New York Academy of Dramatic Art and graduated with a nice diploma all done up in a ribbon. Then he tried getting a job, any job, on the stage. What he finally got was a little job in a theatrical agency.

After four months of that the using his eyes and ears, Bob had made some pretty definite plans which first involved talking a pal out of $400. With this he embarked for England. He had noticed that English actors were much in demand and he wasn't going to allow a mere accident of birth to keep him from his rights.

Arriving in Perfidious Albion, the source of leading men, Bob bought himself a motorcycle and began his planned routine. He followed road shows around the countryside, talked to the actors in the hotel lobbies, studied their accent, saw the show, and then returned to his room at midnight to practice his stuff in front of a mirror. This went on for weeks with Bob never missing a night.

Finally, passing through the small resort town of Huddlesford, where the nobility and royalty were wont to go for mineral baths, he noted a small theater proudly boasting the tile of "His Majesty's theater." The caretaker explained to him that it was used only for command performances when the royal family and court came down for a few days.

The big idea broke through at last. Bribing the caretaker to put up his name in lights, he got a cameraman to take pictures of the theater, with "Blade Stanhope Conway" in Shaw's "Candida" blazing forth over "His Majesty's theater."

He wrote between sixty and seventy letters to New York agents enclosing pictures of "Blade Stanhope Conway," the "famous English juvenile, star of His Majesty's theater," etc., etc. Then he bought a first class ticket back to New York.

Arriving there he was frightened by the mail that had poured in at the address he had given. Agents' offices magically opened to the name. He secured his first rôle as the Hon. Reggie Fanning in Galsworthy's "The Roof" with Henry Howell and Ann Forrest as leads.

There was some trouble about salary at first. He'd never even been backstage before, and when they asked him what he wanted he became so panicky he was afraid to say anything. He would have taken $35, but when they offered him $150 a week he grandly waved them aside and told them that the main thing was the experience he would get acting on the American stage.

Cummings next went to the Ziegfeld Follies of 1933 where he was teamed with Vivian Janis, doing song and dance stuff on the strength of the correspondence course and the Cummings brash. He stayed with the show on the road as well, played in the Earl Carroll Vanities, and with Miss Janis sang "I Like the Like of You." They sold each other with that song and got married. They still are, and Miss Janis is with him in Hollywood, though as yet she's had no film break.

Paramount Talent Scout Suggests Screen Test.

The Ziegfeld Follies on tour played the Los Angeles Biltmore and a talent scout suggested that Bob take a test at the Paramount studios.

Studio executives said: "You're too English. Your accent limits you. We know from experience that when one has such as accent one can't lose it. No, we're sorry; we like your work, but you're too English for us to give you a contract."

"I'm an American," he hollered. "I don't have to talk this way." But they were adamant. So the man without a country went back to New York.

Thoughts of Hollywood film money and the dream of having a pretty little home in the hills inspired Cummings once again and when the show closed in Hartford, Conn., he and his wife went back to New York, bought a station wagon, loaded it with supplies and, accompanied by their mothers, started to hit the auto camp trail for the golden west.

Herzbrun, the agent, made a last try for his client and sent him over to Paramount again, this time to be tested for the rôle of the Texas boy in "So Red the Rose." The executives remembered him from the earlier test and told King Vidor, the director, who liked him in the test, that the boy was English. "We know him. He's an English juvenile. He's not from Texas at all," they told Vidor.

"I guess I know a Texas accent when I hear one. I was raised there, and I say that boy's from Texas," said Vidor.

"He was an Englishman this morning, now he's from Texas, what is this?" yelled Lubitsch, supervisor on the picture. "Let's get this fellow in here and we'll talk to him. We're holding up an expensive and important production with all this nonsense. Surely we're not going to let this young fellow make fools out of us!"

The conference was held, with young Cummings holding up on sheer bluff. "I come from a ranch outside San Angelo, Tex. My parents live there now; and if you don't believe me you can wire them right now," he exclaimed.

They took his word for it and let him do the rôle. His success in it was immediate, and he now is being groomed for leading rôles, at present playing the romantic lead in Joe Cook's comedy, "Arizona Mahoney." Bob says he's sorry he had to be such a liar, but "they wouldn't have it any other way," he remarks with a grin.

"LADIES IN LOVE"

Simone Simon (pronouncafirstalikalasta) is here seen as she appears in "Ladies in Love." (Chicago.) There are three other leading ladies in the film—Loretta Young, Janet Gaynor, and Constance Bennett.

Mantle Finds English Actor Superb Hamlet

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Another pair of English actors, members of the younger set, provided our theater excitements this week. They were John Gielgud, a nephew of the Terrys and the mother country's favorite Hamlet of the moment, and Maurice Evans, a gifted young character actor, who first came to us a year ago when he played Romeo to Katharine Cornell's Juliet and remained to create something of a stir as the Dauphin in her revival of "St. Joan."

We speak of them as young actors, and so they are, though Mr. Gielgud recently hurdled 30 and Mr. Evans is a bold 35. Mr. Gielgud came as a solo importation made by Miss Cornell's husband, Guthrie McClintic, who has been wanting to present the Gielgud Hamlet in America for some time. Mr. Evans was brought over by Max Gordon to play the rôle of Napoleon Bonaparte in a biographical drama called "St. Helena," written by the R. C. Sherriff who wrote "Journey's End," and a collaborator, Jeanne De Casalis, a London actress and wife of Colin Clive, actor, who frequently has played in America. . . .

John Gielgud Is Handsome and Has Aquiline Profile.

John Gielgud is a good looking boy [handsome, you'd call him, in certain views], with a profile more aquiline than John Barrymore's and less formal, spare of frame, of average height, with light brown hair and a voice that commands the resonance, occasionally the fogginess, and always the clear articulation of the better English actors.

He made his entrance seated, so to speak. Following the battlement scene and the soldiers' report of the ghostly visitations, the lights fade. Being raised again, we are in the council chamber of the castle. The king and Gertrude are taking up the matter of post-coronation audiences. At the right of the stage sits Hamlet, silent, austere, staring straight before him, a veritable statue of a sad young man. And so he sits, motionless until, following the dismissal of Laertes, the king addresses him:

"But now my cousin Hamlet, and my son——"

"A little more than kin, and less than kind," mutters the unhappy prince. With an effort that is illy concealed, he now is exchanging explanations of his melancholy with his queenly and worried mother, leading into the first soliloquy after they have left him.

Actor Creates Essence of Perfect Characterization.

Memories are tricky, but I think I never have heard the moving speech beginning "O, that this too, too solid flesh would melt" so feelingly read as Gielgud reads it. Here the very essence of grief is expressed, a boy's grief over the loss of a beloved father, a boy's impassioned resentment that his mother has so degraded that memory, a boy's hysterical anger that these things could be in the sight of God and men. The very essence of perfect characterization also is manifested because in the reading the cheeks of the actor appear to blanch, the eyes are moist with tears, the flexible voice rises in modulated protest or sinks to intimate, confiding cadences. . . .

It is this youthful intimacy that is the most impressive factor of the Gielgud Hamlet, the feeling he is able to create in you that you are seeing the young prince of Denmark for the first time, not as an actor's exhibition but as the boy himself caught in the midst of his misery. I recall the Forbes-Robertson Hamlet as the most moving and satisfying performance of the rôle during my playgoing experience. I still remember the resonance of the Forbes-Robertson voice, the eloquence of the reading, the gentleness and humanness of the interpretation. But my worship was for the actor, my wonder fired by the discovery that he could read a part I had heard others read a dozen times before and still give me more of "Hamlet" than I ever had heard before.

Gielgud's Youth Impresses in the Role of Hamlet.

With Gielgud the wonder is as great, but it is based rather in the discovery of a Hamlet so youthful and so true to the expression of youth you marvel now that the maturer Hamlets of the past could ever have so impressed you. Forbes-Robertson was in his middle fifties when he first saw his Hamlet. Sothern was 60-odd when we last saw him in the rôle. Mantell was all of 60. Hampden has played the Dane at all ages. Raymond Massey, whose appearances were numbered, was 35 but looked older.

Gielgud in makeup at 31 could easily be accepted as the young collegian of Wittenberg home for the coronation festivities. He still is a frightened, excited boy as he receives the charge of vengeance from the ghost of his father. And as his anger mounts his grief seems likely to consume his very vitals. There is a brilliant subterfuge in his simulated madness as he approaches the scene with the players.

These he catches in the act of "sawing the air" in rehersal before he reads them the speech of advice, which is given with consummate naturalness. And now in the preparation for the performance of the play, wherein he hopes to catch the conscience of the king, he is vibrant with a youthful and an impatient excitement. . . .

The scene here is so built that the court is seated at the back of the stage, at the top of a flight of steps. The players act "The Mousetrap" on the floor below, on the forestage, with their backs to the audience. Hamlet, choosing his place at Ophelia's side at the left, is too excited to hold it and is up and down the stairs during the recitation. Finally, at the climax, when the king betrays himself by his guilty and shocked air, he [Hamlet] is bounding gleefully from elevation to elevation, his point proved, his excitement is fairly hysterical.

Cousin Eve Finds Return Voyage Uneventful One

Japanese Alps at Sunset One of Scribe's Last Impressions of Orient.

By Cousin Eve.

IT'S a long, long trail from Shanghai to Chicago over wastes of dark blue water and the arid acres of our western states. The stately Japanese liner plowed ahead on leaving China, luckily escaping a furious typhoon, and safely making the shelter of the Inland sea. Here for hours we calmly sailed above submerged volcanic peaks and along shores surpassingly beautiful. We stopped awhile at commercial Kobe, again at dawn at Shimizu for a cargo of tea. A flat tender eased up, loaded with huge square cases wrapped in matting, and coolies stowed it aboard in the pearly light. All that day we sailed along south Japan in a glassy sea reflecting mirror-wise the mountainous coast. Finally came the great moment shortly before we reached Yokohama, when the sacred mountain, Fuji, stood forth. Present at a dinner I attended one night in Japan were eight men all of whom had climbed Mount Fuji. Several had been up twice. Most of the year Fuji's conical upper half is white with snow. This season the great peak was black, but none the less majestic and impressive.

Spends Last Evening There at Fuji Hotel.

It was hot in port at Yokohama and I had a yen to make a scamper up into the mountains for the night, having twenty-four hours. There is a famous hotel, the best in Japan, the Fuji, at Miyonoshita. And while the ship's purser told me I couldn't possibly make it and would miss the ship, an Englishman said it would be a crime not to go as I could so easily do it with time to spare. So traveling light I left Yokohama at 3:30 and at 5 o'clock was taking tea on the terrace of the Fuji while meditating upon the grandeur of the Japanese Alps spread out around me, and reviewing the wild dash by bus up from the train line twenty miles away. The Japanese are inordinately proud of this Fuji hotel. And indeed it is an old-fashioned place, well done, and tucked snugly among the mountains, but with nary a view of Fuji, which was quite a jolt to me. A short drive to Hakone gives you plenty of Fuji, though. There it is, the beloved, beautiful idol of Japan!

There is much talk nowadays to the effect that the Japanese make poor colonists, and that the territory seized by Japan never will become entirely Japanese. The reason for that is that the Japanese worship Japan. Why should they leave their beautiful, adored country when they can settle down round grandfather's tomb and in their declining years visit the 1,001 temples of Japan? Every Japanese schoolgirl pays a small weekly insurance, so when she is old she may visit these temples and prepare her soul for its long voyage. I walked out from the hotel with a bride and groom from New York's smart set. They were doing the world trip on a freighter. We inspected the great blue swimming pool on top of the mountain, the white peacocks, the tennis courts, and lastly the fish ponds where the gold fish were, honestly and truly as big as mackerel. They really were appalling, those fat red-gold and those silvery white leviathans of black pools, fed from a waterfall.

Arrives at Ship Three Hours Before It Leaves.

Japanese food is excellent, and people of many nations were scattered at the scores of small tables dining.

I arrived safely on the ship with three hours to spare. A crowd of foreign diplomats had come aboard to send off appropriately the departing Spanish ambassador, Señor Mendez Vigo, and his handsome young wife. Japan was ringing with this diplomat's recent public statement that he could not represent a communistic government, such as the present usurpation of power in Madrid represents and, therefore, he would be on his way. Such a send-off as they had!

On the long ocean and train journey I became a friend of the Vigos, who were charming, unaffected people, full of fears for the terrible plight of their beloved land, and returning to—they knew not what scenes of desolation. Señor Vigo is the second son of the Marquess Vigo, a typical, high-nosed, aristocratic don, and his wife, a slim, black-eyed beauty of great allure.

We had two Tuesdays one week crossing the 180th meridian, but otherwise our journey to Honolulu was without incident. Here, as loud brass bands crashed and Hawaiian singers chorused greetings on the pier, I saw a handsome couple coming aboard among many others. A tall man in white linen uniform and military kepi, smart and distinguished, and a petite, beautiful woman. It was Col. and Mrs. Clifford Corbin! They had come, it seems, to take me over to Fort Shafter for the night, an almost story book adventure in beauty. We drove along lovely open roads, by the sparkling sea, under flowering trees, and finally into the handsome semi-circle of grand houses that face a great parade ground not a stone's throw from the Pacific. There Gen. Hugh Drum and his high officers dwell. Col. and Mrs. Corbin had not been on a military post for sixteen years, having latterly had Chicago, Paris, and Washington, and were greatly enjoying this experience. Theirs is a delightful house with wide furnished verandas, and great trees full of tropical birds that waken you bright and early if the bugle doesn't.

Dolly, Edith Ann Corbin Are Glamorous Beauties.

The Corbin girls, Dolly and Edith Ann, are two glamorous beauties who have taken Honolulu by storm. Edith Ann, just 18, not yet officially out, secured a rôle for herself as ingénue in the local stock company theater, with a hefty salary, while her older sister had barely arrived when she took on the Junior League shop.

I saw Marquis de Veyrac for only a second, and he returns to Chicago this month. He is the undisputed beau of Honolulu and gives marvelous parties, with hula-hulas to dance, and all the young and lovelies as his guests.

The Walter Dillinghams I did not see, as they were across the island making a desperate fight for Mrs. Charles Adams, who was gravely ill. The Dillinghams have four houses, and in September they left La Pietra for a cooler region. Before sailing I had a letter from Mrs. Dillingham saying that her mother was better.

Honolulu is marvelous. Let no good American lose sleep lest the Hawaiian Islands be unprotected by Uncle Sam. It wasn't Sunday or I could have gone to inspect the glorious new arsenals artfully disposed, wherein are sufficient munitions to last our army, navy, and air forces 100 years. Beautiful roads abound, and the number of our troops stationed in the Hawaiian Islands would surprise you, really.

One became quite fascinated with Honolulu. Fancy, never needing a coat or a fur piece! And all those nice queer fruits for breakfast, the papaia, the mango, the pineapple.

The only real excitement after Honolulu was the Zephyr train, a vivid yellow streak of lightning. We watched it respectfully from a siding.

Nobody Is Thinking of Anything but Elections.

Chicago, more than ever interesting. Nobody thinking of anything but November and the elections. There are people who expect a great, gay winter, but how do they get that way? I fail to find any November receptions in my mail for fashionable debbies. The great Christmas ball for Mrs. Freeman Hinckley's Eleanor has been canceled, and other balls are shy.

In another year Barbara McClurg will be brought out in Chicago with her sister. The family is at present in residence in Boston.

But failing deb parties, fashion shows are absolutely rampant. Next Wednesday afternoon and evening at the Stevens the St. Luke's Fashion show has its tenth birthday. Tea by day, dinner at night. One adores going to that amusing exposé of handsome girls in the season's gladdest rags. Its success has netted $250,000 for St. Luke's hospital, and everybody in Chicago society who can walk attends. A novel feature of this year's program is a history of St. Luke's hospital. "Snappy reading," according to Mrs. Robert McCormick Adams, and not a mere roster of aches and pains. As the beautiful Janet stressed the drama in old Clinton Locke's impassioned plea from the pulpit "for a Christmas place to care for the sick," I became as keen about the birth of St. Luke's hospital as if it happened yesterday and not seventy-two years ago.

The first hospital was a house of seven rooms. One thousand five hundred dollars was raised for maintenance, and Mrs. N. K. Fairbank, first president of the woman's board, led the grand march at the charity balls given to aid the hospital. Bicycle teas at the Saddle and Cycle also were featured to raise money in the gay nineties.

Mrs. Ralph James Gives Fashion Show Luncheon.

Mrs. Ralph James' large luncheon in the Wedgwood room at Fields' was a nice party, about sixty stars of high society being seated at a half-moon shaped table. During luncheon mannikins strutted by in short skirts, short sleeves, short coats with extra wide shoulders, those being the novelties of this year. The mannikins were of all ages and sizes, not merely skinny young things, and a tall white haired, matronly model in black velvet with a sweeping black lace train had the most applause of all. Among the guests were Mrs. Patrick Valentine, Mrs. Charles Garfield King, Mrs. Robert Thorne, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Ralph Shaw, Mrs. John Crerar, Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, Mrs. John Pitcher, Mrs. David Cooke Jr., Mrs. Arthur Small, Mrs. Robert Dunham, Mrs. Nathaniel Owings, Mrs. Warren Fairbanks, Narcissa Thorne, and Mrs. Nelson Barnes.

The Fashion Friday luncheons at the Lake Shore Drive hotel have been near riots. Fashionable girls are models and Miss Frieda Foltz has turned away scores of patrons too late for tables. On Tuesday morning music displaced mannikins at the Lake Shore Drive when the Russian trio was heard at 11 in a series of six morning concerts at which the most enchanting chamber music was played. The Russian trio goes to New York this season with its leader, Mme. Mesirow Minchin.

The sight of Orchestra hall all dolled up with rosy mahogany velvet seats, new floor carpeting, new velvet hanging, furnaces, and air conditioning was a tremendous surprise.

Ronald Tree of England Distinguished Visitor.

Of strangers within our gates, Ronald Tree of England, lunching with the English Speaking union and talking on British politics. Mr. Tree is a grandson of that grand old millionaire, Judge Lambert Tree, whose great house stood in large gardens in Cass street where Medinah temple now stands. His only son, Arthur, married Ethel Field, only daughter of Marshall Field. And their only son is this Ronald Tree. His wife was a young widow, Mrs. Henry Field, whose maiden name was Nancy Langhorne. Her first husband was a younger brother of the present Marshall Field III., and died soon after the wedding.

Other distinguished visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gade of Paris, who will be at the Ambassador East for a part of the winter. They have come from Boston, where Mr. Gade attended the Harvard tercentenary, a glorious celebration to which Harvard graduates returned from all parts of the earth. So many Japanese have graduated from Harvard that their government sent 126 of their choicest art treasures on to Cambridge for exhibition. I saw them being carefully packed in the Tokio rooms of the Society for International Cultural Relations. Six of the pieces were loaned by Hirohito, emperor of Japan, but were too highly venerated there to be shown outside of Boston. Miss Alice Gade will join her family at Thanksgiving in Chicago.

Gustav Stolper, former budget man of the German reichstag, was another celebrity of the week, speaking at the Council on Foreign Relations, lunching at the Palmer house on Tuesday. The subject was "Devaluation and Stabilization," and, because it was a heavy theme, many were foolish and didn't come, for Dr. Stolper's hits at the French were to laugh. Said he: "The French are ever ready to spill their blood for the fatherland, but not to spill their money." One-half of the French population are farmers free of debt.

Referring to monetary agreements between England and France, Dr. Stolper remarked that "'gentlemen's agreements' last only as long as those who sign them remain gentlemen!"

Paris Pattern Peplum Frock Has Dainty Touches of Lace

No. 5159—The Paris pattern for this dress is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Here's a Paris dress that has the latest details and lines of the great dressmakers. Lace touches are supremely smart on simple winter frocks and this model has a collar and cuffs of lace. They make the frock dressy, yet without them it is a delightfully practical model.

This dress has a smart peplum around the hips, which is open in a V at the front and back, and which is attached only to the belt and may be removed, so you can make the dress without this detail if you prefer. The V-shaped front is slenderizing, and if you tend to thickness around the waistline it will do wonders for you.

You may make this model of almost any material and it will be successful. The original was made of violet colored silk crêpe, with collar and cuffs of ecru lace. Created simple dark blue with the collar and cuffs of white lace it would be charming and conservative.

Society Gives Attention to Benefit Events

St. Luke's Fashion Show and Service Club Revue on Calendar This Week.

By Judith Cass.

THE brisk fall weather, which brings energy and pep after the hot summer breezes, is being welcomed gratefully by several scores of the town's busiest women, for this week will see two of the most important events of the fall season: the St. Luke's fashion show on Wednesday at the Stevens hotel and the Service club revue on Friday and Saturday nights at the Goodman theater.

The wedding of Miss Barbara Hutchins to John Jay Borland II. on Tuesday at the Fourth Presbyterian church will be one of the most fashionable of the fall season, and the wide circle of friends of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hutchins and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Borland will fill the church at 4:30 o'clock that afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins will give a reception afterward at their home in Astor street for their daughter and Mr. Borland.

Society Girls Being Trained Carefully for Mannequin Roles.

For over a month Mrs. John W. Gary, president of the women's board of St. Luke's hospital, and a large committee of the town's influential women have been checking and rechecking lists of the young society girls and young matrons who will take part as models in the gigantic show. These young women are being carefully trained in the art of walking gracefully to show the clothes to the best advantage. Some of them, such as Mrs. Louis E. Hart Jr. [Beatrice Burnet Hersey], Miss Durie Malcolm, Mrs. A. Russell Erskine Jr., Miss Virginia Parker, Miss Frances Weary, and Mrs. Louis C. Sudler, who have been taking part in the fashion show for several years, already are accomplished mannequins. Others, Miss Adair Orr, Miss Betty Keith, and Miss Narcissa Thorne, debutantes of the season, and some of last year's debs must learn the tricks of turning around gracefully, and of appealing to the audience with a sunny face as well as with a lively step.

The models met at the Fortnightly club one afternoon last week to drill with a professional instructor. What he demanded of the girls was "plenty of individual punch," and that is what the hundreds of ticket holders will get on Wednesday afternoon and evening in the grand ballroom of the Stevens. St. Luke's has the reputation of giving a wonderful fashion display, and this year will prove no exception, especially since the feature of the afternoon and evening will be "The Santa Luka Sails." Profiting from the popularity of cruises last winter, the committee will show clothes for every day, and every time of day, on a smart midwinter cruise. Some of the sketches in this feature have the following fascinating titles: Souvenirs in Santiago; At the Races in Havana; On the Sun Deck, and Moonlight in Martinique.

These Lovely Women Will Lend Services as Models.

The models will have only one rehersal at the scene of action, so to speak, and that will be on Wednesday morning, the same day of the performances. At 9 o'clock sharp they all will have the opportunity of "getting the feel" of the long runway on which they will promenade later in the day for the benefit of the hospital. None of the models will be allowed to leave before the afternoon performance, for directly after the rehersal they will be made up by professional experts using the latest in cosmetics before they don the latest in fashion.

The young women who will sing and dance in the Service club revue have been rehersing for the last month for the opening Friday night of their annual musical show. Their costumes arrived last week, all new and sleek and, although the directors try to keep them a secret, the news always leaks out somewhere about the colors and designs of the dancing clothes chorines will wear.

Good news is that the former Thelma Jensen, now Mrs. Robert O. Hereford, will be one of the singing stars again, and George Niese, who scored a hit in last year's show, is returning to lend his voice and his dancing feet to the current revue. After the performance Saturday night the "stars" and the choruses will attend a supper-dance to be held at the Bal Tabarin, and to which the audiences also are invited.

Also on Saturday night the South Shore center of the Infant Welfare society will give a dance at the Palmer house for the benefit of the Russell Square station of the society. The party is called, appropriately, the Infanta ball. Mrs. Henry Kennedy is social chairman of the center.

Alliance Francaise to Open Redecorated Rooms Saturday.

The clubrooms of the Alliance Française, which have been newly decorated, will be opened on Saturday morning with a talk by Rene Weiller, French consul general in Chicago. From 1 until 6 o'clock on Saturday the Chicago City Opera company will give a reception for the artists who will appear with the opera this year. The season opens Oct. 31.

On the calendar for Thursday is a lecture by Olin Downes in the morning at a rehersal of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, to which ticket holders for the Thursday and Friday concerts will be admitted. Mr. Downes will speak at 10 o'clock in Orchestra hall. A tea and reception will mark the opening of the forty-seventh annual exhibition of American painting and sculpture at the Art institute on Thursday. Representatives of thirteen women's clubs that have affiliations with the Art institute will decorate the tea tables and serve tea at the institute in the afternoon.

SHE'S RECENT BRIDE

Mrs. Hubert Hastings Burke was Miss Theodosia Breckinridge Clark until her marriage on Oct. 3. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stuart Clark of Evanston in whose residence the ceremony was read in the presence of the families and a few friends. [Ray Photo.]

Editor Will Give Lecture Series Before Winnetkans

PAUL HUTCHINSON, editor of Christian Century, is beginning a series of twelve lectures on international current events Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock at Community house in Winnetka. The Winnetka League of Women Voters is sponsoring the series. Mr. Hutchinson is an authority on the subject, having spent a great deal of time in China and Europe, writing articles which have appeared in well known magazines. Tickets may be purchased at the door or from Mrs. A. D. Jenkins, 780 Rosewood avenue, Winnetka.

Bryan Guinness and Second Bride Are Touring World

LONDON — A few years ago one thought all the Guinnesses were safely married with appropriate weddings in St. Margaret's, but now, after a few years, they are beginning all over again on second marriages. It would be a tremendous family party if the Guinnesses held a reunion with all the past and present spouses and offspring.

The Hon. Bryan Guinness, elder son of Lord Moyne, until recently Walter Guinness, took Elizabeth Nelson as his second wife. He is the father of two delightful little boys by his first marriage to Miss Diana Mitford, who married when she was only 18.

Bryan Guinness and the second Mrs. Guinness are taking a year for their honeymoon during which they are going around the world. As a symbol, even though it was unintentional, Mr. Guinness was photographed coming out from the Chelsea registry office wearing the knapsack. By easy stages the couple expects to tour the continent and then journey on to China and Russia.

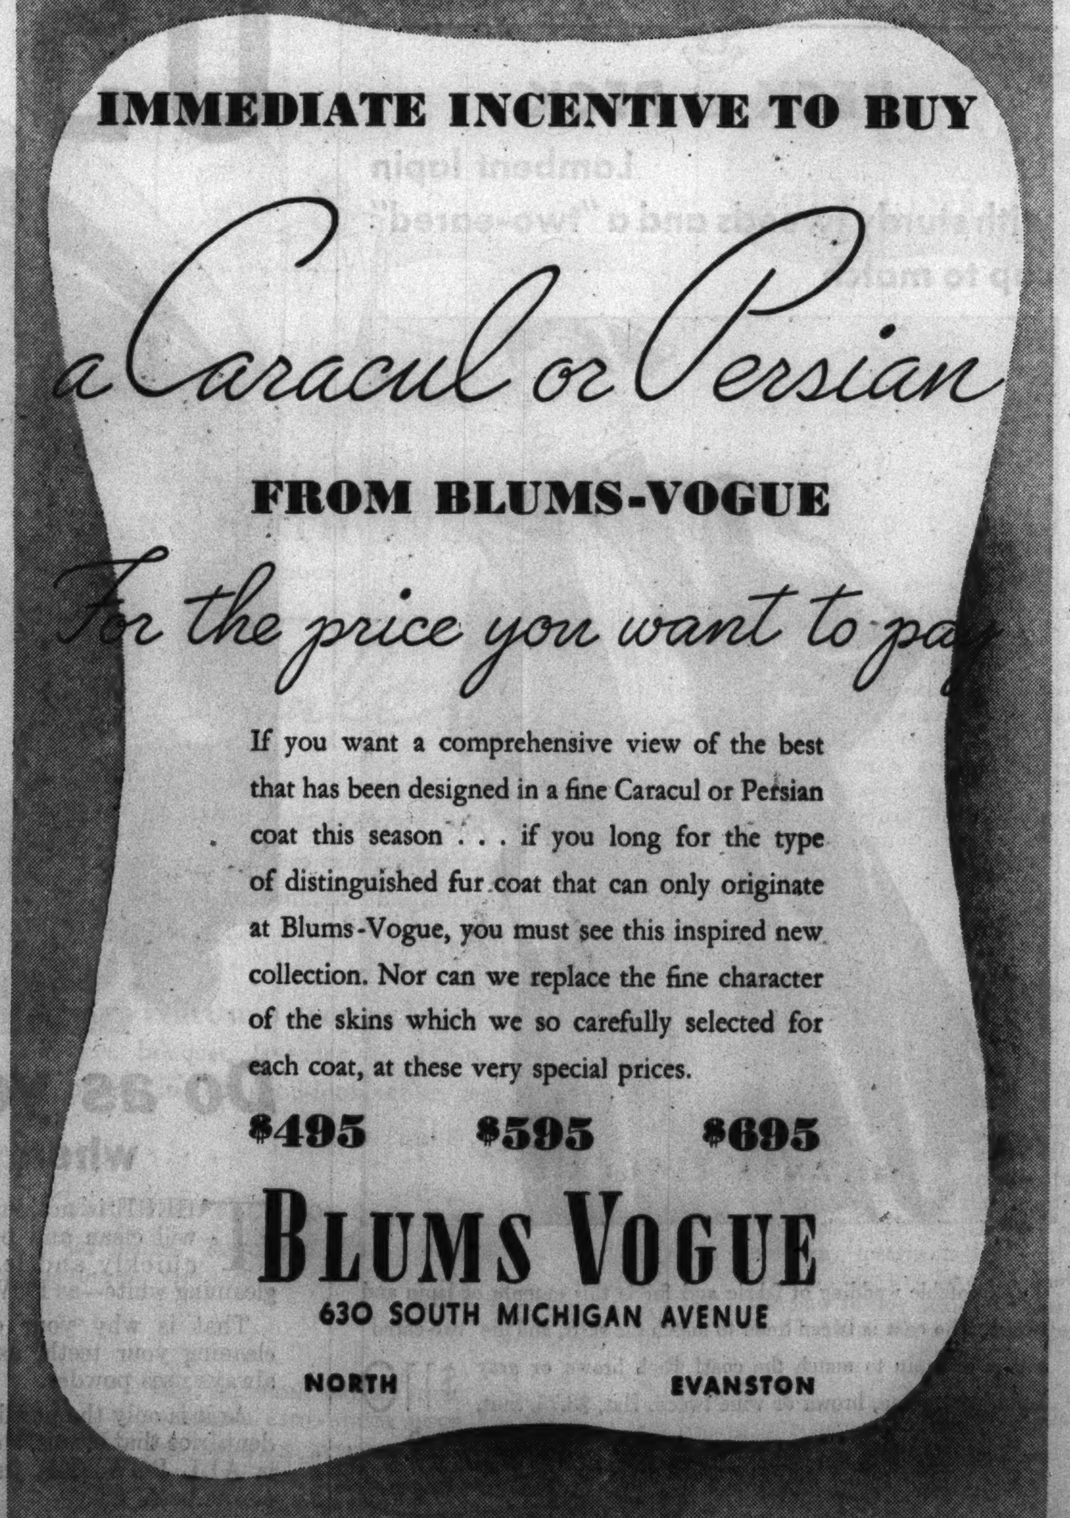
Miss Gilson, who is assistant professor of economics at the University of Chicago, spent the summer of 1935 in Finland, the following winter in England, and the last spring and summer in France, Germany and Switzerland.

A similar itinerary furnished material for observations which Dr. Arne L. Suominen will make in a talk before the Finnish Circle of Knowledge at 7 o'clock this evening at the home of Mrs. Elli Gustafson, 5000 North Lincoln street. Other members also will speak informally. Eli Johnson is president of the group, which is interested in studying and discussing world events and new developments in the arts and sciences.

Crusade May Rid British Graves of Blase Angels

LONDON — Councillor T. F. H. Wilson of Wallasey, addressing the National Association of Cemetery and Crematorium Superintendents, began a crusade for more dignified headstones. He particularly attacked monuments "surmounted by blasé angels in white nighties" and, from the ovation he received, it seems the "trade" is with him. Others told of families putting almost their last dollar into the fund to buy a headstone and it was in these cases that the maximum of ornateness was demanded.

It was maintained that the war graves on the continent were the best examples to follow, and the meeting closed with a vote for headstones of greater simplicity and dignity.



Tuxedo Park's Golden Year Is Break for Debs

New York Society Suspects Annual Autumn Ball Will Be Something Special.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK Since this is Tuxedo Park's golden anniversary year, society suspects the park's annual autumn dance for debutantes will be inordinately splendid. This excellent party is to be held at the clubhouse next Saturday night, and every debutante who belongs by birth, breeding, and bankroll to the ne plus ultra stratum of Mayfair is ready and rarin' to go.

Oddly enough, this dance in what probably is the most exclusive suburb in the east is the opening gun of the winter debutante season in town. Society never does anything about its winter crop of buds until Tuxedo Park has held its official christening.

Autumn Ball to Bring Deb Season Into Full Swing.

After the autumn ball there'll be a ream of debutante luncheons at the smart hotels and during the last ten days of November enough dances to keep every one happy.

Of course, there'll be a smattering of dances during the fore part of December, too. But the majority of debutante parties is held during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, when the collegians are home to man the stag lines.

This whole week-end at Tuxedo will be extraordinarily gay. The autumn ball is to be preceded by a large dance on Friday night given by Mr. and Mrs. E. Roland Harriman for their deb daughter, Elizabeth, and for Priscilla St. George, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. St. George.

It happens that Mrs. St. George is chairman of the autumn ball this year, and Mrs. Harriman vice chairman. The Harrimans have a huge country place at Arden, which is outside the park enclosure but certainly a social entity of Tuxedo.

Elizabeth is one of the half dozen heiresses who are included in this season's list of debutantes. She's a granddaughter of the late E. H. Harriman, who amassed one of America's great fortunes in railroading. Elizabeth also is a cousin of Kathleen Harriman, a daughter of William Averell Harriman and the late Mrs. Eugene H. Pool. Kathleen is a debutante this season, too.

Kathleen and Sister Mary to Come In from College.

Both Kathleen and her older sister, Mary, who made her bow last year, will come down from Bennington college, where they're enrolled, to take in the Tuxedo week-end gayeties.

No debutante is more colorful and more certain of a successful first season than Priscilla St. George. She is a great-granddaughter of George F. Baker, the Wall street titan who died several years ago. Priscilla also is a granddaughter of the stately Mrs. Price Collier, who, in turn, is a sister of the senior Mrs. James Roosevelt. This makes Priscilla a second cousin of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Priscilla also is certain of a fine party in her honor on Nov. 28. The present George F. Baker, who is her granduncle, and Mrs. Baker are giving a supper-dance in her honor at their beautiful house on the northwest corner of Park avenue and 93d street. This house has an unusually large and handsome ballroom, and is the one in which the Baker daughters, now Mrs. Tommy Tailor and Mrs. Johnny Schiff, made their respective bows to society at splendid parties some seasons ago.

Angie Duke has been Priscilla's best beau since her subdebutante days, and every one is certain that they will marry when Priscilla has had a season or so in society and Angie has finished his education. Angie, who is the son of the ever-youthful Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson and the late Angier Duke, has just fallen heir to another million dollar trust fund. This pushes his fortune up to something between six and seven millions.

This latest million comes from his grandmother, Mrs. Benjamin N. Duke, who died in September. Her will directed the establishment of million dollar trusts each for Angie and his younger brother, Tony; for their aunt, Mrs. Mary Duke Biddle, and for their cousins, Mary Duke Biddle II. and Nicholas Duke. A few months ago it was established that the trusts left Angie and Tony by their father had grown to a cool five million apiece. So both young men are matrimonial catches, indeed!

Round of Gala Events Is Planned for Priscilla.

But to get back to Priscilla and the Tuxedo ball: During the coming week-end Priscilla's grandmother, Mrs. Collier, plans a tea in her honor, and her parents are giving a big dinner for her before the Harriman ball. And certainly Priscilla will be present at Mrs. Henry Morgan Tilford's dinner party on Saturday night before the autumn ball.

Mrs. Tilford's dinner party is part and parcel of the autumn ball ritual. Certainly, only the grade A debs ever make the autumn ball, but Mrs. Tilford goes a step beyond that and even hand picks her dinner guests from this superselect list.

There are three burning ambitions in every deb's life: To be invited to the autumn ball, to make the Junior league, and to be permitted to subscribe to the Junior Assemblies. This trio establishes her once and for all as grade A. And if she can make the autumn ball the other two ought to come easy.

Established society in both New York and Philadelphia will unfurl its red carpets and open its best champagne should the Baron and Baroness Amaury de la Grange really decide to bring their debutante daughter to the United States with them when the baroness comes home to visit her venerable father, Henry T. Sloane.

Amsi de la Grange, who is the debutante, was formally presented to society in Paris in June. Should she come to Manhattan with her parents, many of Mr. Sloane's older friends, who ordinarily wouldn't so much as notice the deb season, undoubtedly would entertain for her.

And then Amsi's auntie, Mrs. George D. Widener of Philadelphia, certainly could be expected to whip up something pretty special in the Rittenhouse square district.

The Widener clan does have a debutante of its own, by the way, this season. At least Mrs. Pete A. B. Widener is presenting her daughter, Joan Peabody, this winter. Mrs. Pete is the daughter-in-law of Joe Widener, head of the clan, and you can be certain that the Wideners will do everything to see that Joan has a memorable first season.

London Little Season to Open on Gala Note

Three 'Dancing Duchesses' Are to Be on Hand for Shows, to Attend Parties.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON Society in London gauges the brilliance of its social seasons largely by the number of royalty's public engagements. By standards it looks as if the coming "little season" will be a burst of fireworks after the restrictions of the half mourning which ends this month.

Our "dancing duchesses" all will be in town and on the job; the duchess of York, the duchess of Gloucester, and the duchess of Kent, all of them young, all of them extremely popular, and all of them on hand to open shows and exhibitions and to attend dances. No less important is Princess Elizabeth, who does almost as much as the others by attending children's affairs and giving the necessary fillip to the charity functions in which, at such an early age, society children take part.

Queen Mary to Make First Public Appearance in November.

Queen Mary will make her first public appearance in November, and it is understood that the princess royal will be in town to take her share. However, both mother and daughter seem to be scheduled for the more conservative "sale-of-work" sort of functions, while the duchesses attend the dances.

The new shuffle in royal residences has begun! If you were standing outside of Buckingham palace, you would have seen a horse van remove the last two pieces of furniture which Queen Mary is taking with her to Marlborough house. They were her inlaid writing desk and her needlework cabinet, which she used in her old home and which went with her, virtually, to her new one.

Homelike Atmosphere Being Confined to Private Apartments.

The homelike atmosphere which Queen Mary has aimed to create in Marlborough house has been confined to the private apartments on the first and upper floors. Even if the bedrooms do not each have a separate bath, they at least now can boast of "running h. and c." in each. They will be occupied next spring by guests for the coronation.

Of its 200 rooms, many are state apartments, designed by Sir Christopher Wren during his 76th year, to the whims and wishes of Sarah, duchess of Marlborough. She obtained the site from Queen Anne for a cash payment of about $10,000 a year rent for fifty years. It cost $250,000 to build and was occupied by the Churchills [the duke of Marlborough's family] for the first century of its life and then was bought by the crown for $1,000,000 and has for the last hundred years been the home of royalty.

The mural paintings of Marlborough's victories still adorn the grand staircase, and the four rose tapestries which King Edward VII. refused to sell for half a million dollars still hang in the drawing room. Also King Edward's little joke remains in the library.

Women Now Buy Clothes to Suit Different Moods

"PSYCHOLOGICAL" styles to fit the moods of modern women as well as their figures is a Paris inspiration. It is claimed that in every 24 hours the modern woman indulges in more activity than her grandmother would have undertaken in a month and that the multitude of activities brings on a multitude of moods. There is, for instance, a dress for the analytical mood in business or shopping, and for the gay humor of sports and for evening hours when the modern Eve wants to look as feminine as a flower.

Smart Hand Knitted Dress for Informal Daytime Wear

By Jean Macdonald.

HAND knits may be worn anywhere these days. They are seen at morning lectures, afternoon bridge, teas, and even at the cocktail hour and in the evening.

The French blue fine angora two piece hand knitted model illustrated today is an attractive dress for general informal daytime wear. It is more detailed than most hand knits and is especially effective in the new angora wool. The tiny, turnover purled collar matches the ribbing at the waistband and bottom of the skirt. This same pattern is carried out on the sleeves, while the body of the sweater is done in the old stockinette stitch, with the pattern reversed in the front to give the illusion of a vestee.

This new fine angora is not as expensive as the heavier quality yarn. A soft, luxurious garment may be made for under $10, which is considerably less than the cost of an angora garment which was knitted three or four years ago.

HOW TO ORDER.

If you wish instructions for knitting the two piece angora dress with purled sleeves, illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Motor Salon Is Attraction in French Capital

Society Flocks to Paris for Important Show Opened Recently at Grand Palais.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS In spite of the stress of world events, there is much social animation in Paris at the moment. Everyone who is anybody, that is, those who find their names in tout Paris, the social register of the capital, and others from many countries, make a point of being here for the motor salon, which recently opened at the Grand Palais. It was feared, for a moment, that the hotel strike might cause some trouble, but it quickly blew over and is a new proof, if one were needed, that it is difficult to take liberties with the tipping system. That the client knows to his cost.

Be that as it may, the Ritz bar, which is quite a rendezvous of cosmopolitan society in the late afternoon, is presided over by Frank Meier, whom everyone knows merely as Frank. For some time there has been considerable interest in his book, just off the press, and called "The Artistry of Mixing Drinks." The curious will find in it several hundred recipes, but Frank says most of the fancy cocktails seldom are demanded. His clients prefer the old standbys, such as Martinis. Quite a number of the drinks were devised by Frank for celebrities, and the intriguing names he has given them often cover merely a slight variation of some well known formula.

Although the autumn weather has been ideal for shooting, tout Paris is all here, what with the opening of the schools, and a breathing space before the late autumn activities.

Lord and Lady Decies [Mrs. Henry S. Lehr], who have been extending hospitality at their house in the Rue des Saints-Pères, are leaving soon for the Bahamas, and expect to be away several months. Lady Decies has just completed another book, a successor to "King Lehr and the Gilded Age."

Charles Grey, formerly of Chicago, and his wife, the former Cornelia O'Connor Wallace, recently had their baby, James, christened at the American Cathedral Church of the Holy Trinity, and in the afternoon gave a reception at their residence in the Avenue des Tilleuls, Auteuil.

H. Gordon Selfridge's daughter, Vicomtesse de Sibour, who goes in a great deal for aviation and big game hunting, is at the Ritz, on her way back to London.

Miss Anne Morgan, who has returned from the cure at Marienbad, has sailed on the Normandie. Before returning to America, she spent some time, as usual, at Blerancourt, where she and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and the late Mrs. Anne Murray Dike carried on extensive relief work during the war, and where, since then, they arranged a museum of Franco-American coöperation which has many interesting relics of Lafayette, Washington and other historic figures, in a setting of particular charm.

How to Often Quickly Clear Up Your Skin

WITHOUT LAXATIVES, YEASTS OR HARMFUL DRUGS so you'll be able to go to the places and do the things your clear skinned friends enjoy.

Laxatives — yeasts and internal treatments are often nothing more than useless makeshifts. Pimples are usually caused by germs that enter the skin from the outside and consequently require a penetrating, germ destroying and healing external treatment.

It often takes that sensational, germ destroying new NAC Volatized Sulphur and Vitamin "F" Cream you rub on at bedtime and the new NAC Prescription Powder that you use instead of face powder to aid in the healing and to harmlessly mask, or cover up, these ugly blemishes during the day, make them less noticeable, to get the skin cleared up quickly and make you feel on the up and up.

Drive for New Members Key of P.-T. A. Week

Illinois Organization Begins Today to Enlist 150,000 More Parents in State.

By Ruth DeYoung.

POLITICIANS fill the air with bombast about dangers to the home and the school, but it really is the mothers and fathers and school teachers banded together in that great organization, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, who take these problems the most seriously.

MRS. EDWARD W. JACKSON.

Beginning today Parent-Teacher week is to be celebrated throughout Illinois with special emphasis on the building of membership. Every association affiliated with the state organization will make an appeal for new members, and not only mothers but also fathers will be enlisted.

"Dad is coming into his own," says Mrs. Edward W. Jackson, chairman of membership for the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers. "The national association boasts more men as association presidents and committee chairmen than ever before.

Natural to Expect Fathers to Be Interested in P.-T. A.

"The interest of men in this work is only natural," Mrs. Jackson continues. "Fathers are parents and their responsibilities do not end when they have provided the material things necessary for a family's comfort and well being.

"A man's point of view is of great value in any discussion, and in these momentous times, when there are so many public questions connected with the schools and the community, his experience and training have made him an invaluable asset to the organization. The old pun, 'Pa tags along,' has long since been replaced by a newer and more up to date slogan, 'Pa takes action'."

As a slogan for this P.-T. A. week Mrs. Jackson has chosen: "Meet the challenge of citizenship with a P.-T. A. membership." The goal in the state is 150,000.

Pastors will announce the week's observance from pulpits throughout the state this morning, and Gov. Horner has issued a proclamation in which he says: "As a vital force for education and public welfare this organization has become nation-wide in its influence for good."

Illinois P.-T. A. Influential in Building Juvenile Court.

The Illinois Parent-Teacher congress may claim with pride that it was through the efforts of the P.-T. A. that juvenile courts were established and the probation system set up. Mrs. Arthur R. Williams, state president, explains that in forty-six countries of the world there now are organizations of the Federation of Home and School, the affiliate of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

As attention is directed toward the school, the Chicago Woman's Aid has scheduled an address by Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of the Chicago public schools, for Tuesday noon in the club quarters, 185 North Wabash avenue. Dr. Johnson will tell his plans for the Chicago public schools in coming months. Mrs. Samuel E. Hursch, chairman of the education department, will introduce Dr. Johnson.

Victor Yarros to Address Group of Woman's City Club.

Of further importance this week will be the opening meeting and luncheon of the education and philosophy department of the Chicago Woman's club. Mrs. Henry Hoyt Hilton, chairman, will introduce Victor Yarros, who will speak at 1:30 on "Changes in Thought Since the War."

MRS. HENRY HOYT WILSON.

The cancer research committee of the Chicago Woman's club is to have another of its valuable series of lectures this winter, with the first to be heard at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. Dr. Max Cutler, director of the junior clinic at Michael Reese hospital, will discuss "Present Lines of Research in the Cause and Cure of Cancer." Other speakers during the series will be Dr. H. E. Robertson, professor of pathology at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn.; Dr. F. L. Rector, field representative for the American Society for the Control of Cancer; Miss Edna Foley of the Visiting Nurse association; and Dr. W. W. Bauer, director of the bureau of health and public instruction of the American Medical association.

Victor Yarros will address another important gathering of women this year when he discusses "The Present Political and Social Unrest in Europe" at the civic forum luncheon of the Woman's City club at 12:15 on Friday. Mr. Yarros has just returned from Europe, where he had an opportunity to study the situation first hand.

Women Voters to Hear Talk by Prof. Quincy Wright.

Prof. Quincy Wright of the University of Chicago will discuss American foreign policy in Europe at the school of foreign affairs of the Cook County League of Women Voters next Saturday noon in the Palmer house. This will be the first session this year of the school, which takes up various aspects of international policy. Prof. Wright will continue his discussions on Nov. 28 when he takes up American foreign policy in the far east.

The civil affairs and civil service department of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Woman's Organizations will sponsor a joint meeting at 1:30 Friday in the federation headquarters with Mrs. Lucy Palermo and Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill as principal speakers.

Mrs. Palermo, chairman of the Italian Youth Recreation league, will describe the activities of the league organized last spring to meet the recreational needs of children living in congested Italian communities. According to Mrs. Palermo, Italian children are third on the list of juvenile offenders. With this record in mind, Mrs. Palermo says the league is putting forth every effort to provide special activities for these children as crime prevention measures. Mrs. O'Neill is to discuss the status of civil service in Illinois.

American Show Is Art Event of Coming Week

Annual Exhibit of Painting and Sculpture to Open Oct. 22 at Art Institute.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE most eagerly anticipated event of the coming week is the opening on Thursday, Oct. 22, of the 47th Annual Exhibition of American Painting and Sculpture. Last year this exhibition, in which Doris Lee's "Thanksgiving" was awarded the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and prize, thus stirring Mrs. Logan to violent protest and the founding of her "sanity in art" movement, was well stocked with neurotic and unpleasant paintings. Not a word has been dropped as yet as to what we may expect in the current year's issue of the show, but we are all eyes and prepared for anything. A mild exhibition is as apt to be unsatisfactory as is a wild one. We have been supplied with so much strong drink in these shows for the last several seasons that anything rational probably would be a great disappointment.

The prizes to be awarded are the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and $500; the Norman Wait Harris silver medal and prize of $500; the Norman Wait Harris bronze medal and price of $300; the M. V. Kohnstamm prize of $250; the prize of the Chicago artists' annual ball of $200; the Martin B. Cahn prize of $100, and the William M. R. French gold medal, established by the Art Institute Alumni association for a painting or work of sculpture executed by a student or former student of the institute.

Chicago Artists' Ball to Be Staged Around Van Gogh.

The Chicago artists' ball, which is scheduled for a little later in the winter, will this year be staged around Van Gogh. Everything will be connected in some way with the Dutch painter whose work, forty-seven years after his death, is arousing public interest on two continents.

The jury on paintings for the American exhibition consisted of Edmund Archer, John Steuart Curry, Jerry Farnsworth, Meyric R. Rogers, and Thomas E. Tallmadge. There were two juries on sculpture, the New York jury was made up of C. Paul Jennewein, Oronzio Maldarelli, and Albert Stewart. The Chicago sculpture jury, Raoul Josset, Carl Milles, and Lorado Taft joined forces with the painting jury at the Art Institute last Tuesday and Wednesday to make the final selection of works to be exhibited. Director Harshe is the authority to select 100 paintings and a small group of sculpture.

Knowing the trend of the times one is convinced that the exhibition will deal generously with the "American scene" and social classifications. There will be a lavish use of minor keys in color and major keys in anatomy. Blocky humans will engage in various activities. The cemetery has not yet lost its charm, nor the alley. The dump heap will come into its own. And yet, perhaps, these contemporary characteristics of a good American show will not be present. Perhaps there will be likable portraits of dignity and beauty. Perhaps there will be magnificent landscapes and marines. Perhaps there will be gorgeous canvases of real merit. Perhaps craftsmanship, sincerity, imagination [unfed by neurotic dreams], force, and ability will rule. Perhaps. . . .

BIG CITY NEWS

This is a characteristic composition by Dale Nichols, whose one man show of paintings and commercial art is creating a sensation at the Drake hotel this month. The exhibition is under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts.

Question of Rental Policy Problem of Show Sponsors.

An interesting question is stirring in the minds of those connected with the making and showing of pictures and sculpture, the question of rental policy. It is well explained in these lines: "The loss of a market for contemporary art in the last few years has increased the burden of the artist. The need to exhibit his work has become that much more of a problem. The American Society of Painters, Sculptors, and Gravers formulated the rental policy, whereby a small fee, 1 per cent of the value of the work with a maximum fee set at $10, is to be charged as the basis of a monthly rental to be paid by museums and galleries exhibiting contemporary art."

The exhibition budgets of museums include payment for insurance, packing and shipping, rents, advertising, reproduction, printing, lectures, salaries, and other items, but so far no budget which takes care of the further item, the artist whose work is being shown, has been made by the majority of our museums. Some may argue that the cost to which the museum goes to put on a show, as outlined in the factors mentioned above, should be worth something to the artist. After all, one does not get reproductions, lectures, or insurance for nothing if one's work remains in one's studio. But the artist's argument is that without his work there could be no show, and that he on his part has been put to trouble and expense in creating his picture or sculpture.

Fee Asked for Most of Traveling Exhibitions.

There now are fifteen institutions which have paid rental fees. They are the Carnegie Foundation, the Philadelphia Art alliance, Randolph Macon college, Women's clubs of East Orange, the Whitney museum, the University of Minnesota, the Rochester Memorial gallery, the Grand Rapids Art gallery, the Albright gallery of Buffalo, the San Francisco museum, the Roerich museum, the Yale club, and the Baltimore museum.

The American Federation of Arts lists in its new handbook a number of exhibitions and the rental price of each. These are traveling exhibitions. Some are free to member chapters of the federation, but for most of them a fee is asked. The plan is an excellent one, and the federation has accomplished an extraordinary amount of good in bringing cultural advantages to all parts of the United States. It is mentioned here as being in accordance with the artists' desire to rent their individual work. Fees vary in the American Federation of Arts' plan. They run from as little as $2 to as high as $400. The $400 fee is asked for two exhibits sent out by the Museum of Modern Art in New York, one of cubism and abstract art and the other of "the Art of the Marvelous and Fantastic," "representing an attitude toward subject matter of which Surrealism is the most absolute expression."

The Van Gogh exhibition was rented by the Museum of Modern Art to the various institutions at which it was shown.

The point seems to be for the contemporary artists to make up their own shows and rent them to galleries. How much the artists would have left after paying the various expenses connected with such an enterprise it is impossible to calculate. How much the rental would reimburse them is another doubtful calculation. The Chicago Art institute might have had to pay $1,600 for the American show opening Thursday had a rental policy been in effect. If an artist could claim up to $10 a month, and if most of them did, a comparatively small exhibit would run at once into real money. The problem is a rocky one, not to be settled quickly. Granted the painter creates the picture, the gallery promotes it. Which is the more valuable act? Why not ask the artist to pay the gallery for its accommodations?

News of Interest to Lovers of Art.

But the thicket grows denser the further one penetrates.

The Carnegie International opened last Thursday to continue through Dec. 6. Of the 323 paintings in the exhibit 95 are by United States artists. England has 55; France, 55; Germany, 33; Italy, 37, and Spain, 48.

There is a delightful exhibit of water colors by Frances Foy in the Marshall Field galleries. The paintings are chiefly of flowers, except for one beautiful composition in greens of ivy and moss. Miss Foy paints with a freshness and originality that are as fascinating as her sensitive use of color and her notable craftsmanship. She is an outstanding artist of rare ability. A series of thirty magnificent etchings by Charles Dahlgreen are also at Field's. They were made in the Yosemite and do its beauties full justice. Both exhibits are unique.

"Banks Fisherman," by Gordon Grant, is the winning print in the Chicago Society of Etchers' exhibition in the Roullier gallery. It received the majority of votes and carries off the $500 prize.

England in Fall Finds Antiquarian Enthusiasm High

LONDON

Each autumn London is flooded with reports of both amateur and professional antiquarian expeditions. Next to extending the natural life of historical traditions, the Englishman likes to link his island with the past.

His eagerness to prove that a high state of civilization in England antedated the Roman occupation is bred, perhaps, of the schoolboys' indignation on learning that Cæsar called them barbarians. Mussolini rubbed this in only recently.

The ancient monuments commission has been digging up the Shetland Islands and discovered the remains of a Scandinavian settlement which dates before the bronze age. The most interesting object among the many unearthed was a system of weights. Mousa Island has been dug up also, and the best preserved Teutonic fastness in Europe was found. It has a circular site about 50 feet in diameter and is built of middle sized schistose stones beautifully cemented together. All discoveries in the Shetlands link England with the Vikings.

The Society of Antiquarians rounded off three summers of work recently with an excursion to Maiden castle, a prehistoric fortress near Dorchester. Three hundred famous men and woman antiquarians attended, and the excavations were explained by the keeper of the London museum.

Maiden castle, to give it an absurdly modern name, is the finest earthwork of its kind in the country, dating back 4,000 years. It is a complete stone age town on a vast hilltop. Near it also are the Maumbury Rings of about the same date.

Swords Worn by Better Class in Colonial U. S.

IN colonial America swords were worn by the better class of people when in full dress; cocked hats, broad brim hats, and, as luxury, a sort of hat called a black beaverette. The coat was long, straight, coming below the knee, with a low collar showing the white neckcloth fastened with a silver buckle behind. The shoes were square toed with enormous buckles, sometimes of silver. The lower classes wore knit yarn caps of bright colors with a heavy tassel.

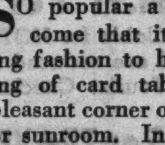
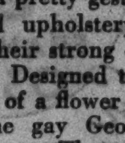
The Vogue for Victorian

WITH its gracious curves and the excellent carving so typical of the period, furniture of quaint Victorian elegance is being eagerly sought for many of today's most sophisticated interiors. Smyth's present some bedroom furnishings that are charmingly in the Victorian spirit—and a group of three pieces in solid walnut is only $150. The rosebud hand carvings have a characteristically naive charm.



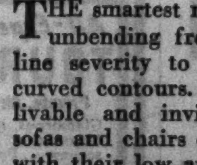
Always Ready for a Game

SO popular a pastime has bridge become that it's now a smart decorating fashion to have a permanent grouping of card table and chairs in some pleasant corner of the living room, library or sunroom. In their distinctive designs and finishes the new card table ensembles are fully worthy of their new place of honor. One of the smartest new sets at Smyth's, with a walnut topped table and antiqued white base, is priced at $29.75.



The New Fabrics Say It with Flowers

IT'S a pretty gesture the newest drapery and upholstery fabrics are making, with their strong emphasis on floral patterns. Designed to bring all the radiant charm of a flower garden into your home are the gay Georgian motifs of large bouquets. There are also many exotic modern interpretations of the floral theme. Smyth's lovely glazed chintzes in the new flower designs are as inexpensive as 45c, 55c, 65c and 95c a yard.



Softer Lines in Upholstered Pieces

THE smartest modern furniture is now unbending from its austere straight-line severity to the softness of gently curved contours. And how much more livable and inviting are Smyth's new sofas and chairs of modern inspiration—with their low arms, nicely scaled down in size and delightfully curved. A particularly stunning example is a sofa with luxurious fur-like covering at $144, and the harmonizing chair is $75.50.

Mexico Decides to Tell World of Its Wonders

Will Hold a World's Fair, Somewhat Similar to Chicago's, in Autumn of '38.

By John Cornyn.

MEXICO CITY.—[Special.]—One president, two ex-presidents, all the 28 states, and the machinery and prestige of the Mexican government are behind plans now well on the way to hold a world's fair in this city in 1938.

Pascual Ortiz Rubio, one time president of Mexico, is head of the fair organization. President Lazaro Cardenas, it is related in governmental circles, has promised the committee his persona support and coöperation. The name of ex-President Abelardo Rodriguez, several times over a millionaire, is connected with plans for the extension of the field of action. Rodriguez is one of the best organizers in Mexico.

Along the Lines of Chicago's Fair.

The exposition is to be organized along lines similar to those of the World's Fair in Chicago, of which an extensive study already has been made. But the field and the nature of the show will necessarily be very different from those of Chicago. The organization will be built up and developed with the express intention of directing the attention of the outside world, and especially the United States, to Mexico. The motto will be: "Come and see us." And this central idea will be emphasized in the extensive publicity campaign now in preparation. Mexico is to be advertised as the wonderland of the tourist, who is assured that he will see gathered here the archæological and other wealth of ancient and modern Mexico.

The exposition is to be housed in an ornate Maya city, which is to be an exact reproduction of one of the famous Indian capitals of Yucatan, probably Uxmal, which is more characteristically Yucatecan than the more famous Chichén Itzá, which was subject to strong Toltec influence. Thus the visitor is to be kept under the spell of Mexico's past from the time he enters the f ir grounds. Moreover, this Maya city is to be used as an advertising and drawing card to attract those who may be brought under the influence of this country's romantic history.

The Maya buildings are to stand on the historic grounds of Chapultepec, in the shadow of the famous pile of buildings until late years the official residence of the presidents of the republic. The park, with its millennial trees, its wonderful walks, and its traditions, is to be thrown open to visitors, who may wander for a mile and a half through a veritable forest which was old at the time of the conquest of the Aztec empire more than four centuries ago, and which is today traversed by intricate, shady paths and romantic driveways.

Guests to Be Taken All Over Country.

The exposition is to be held in the fall, when the rainy season is over, so that the international highway may be in fine shape for the transportation of the visitors. Modern stopping places are to be provided at convenient spots between Laredo and Mexico City, and every provision is to be made for looking after cars and tourists on the way. The highway, which now enters the capital through winding streets, is to have a new entrance. Guerrero street, one of the main thoroughfares here, is to be extended several miles north, allowing for a straightway approach to the center of the city from behind Guadalupe instead of through it, as now. When this is finished the tourist may, unaided, follow the highway into the heart of the capital.

But the guest need not stay in this city. Bus, railway, water, and air services are to be so organized that he may reach all other places of interest. Planes will be ready to take visitors daily to Chichén Itzá, and from there buses will afford transportation to additional places of interest in Yucatan. Improved air service to and from southern Mexico and Central America will be provided, with the double object of bringing visitors from there and of carrying to the southland those already in Mexico.

The schools, colleges, and universities are to be enlisted in the campaign to advertise the fair and create an international college spirit throughout the Americas. Student organizations, which are strong and influential in this country already have promised their support of the plans.

It is proposed to direct toward making known the aims of the fair the increasing volume of advertising issued by railways, steamship companies, airlines, and tourist agencies. The government tourist organization, working through the Mexican consuls in foreign countries, will begin a far-reaching campaign to place Mexico and the exposition before the eyes of tourists in all lands.

NEAR THE HEART OF THE OLD HAWAIIAN KINGDOM

A moonlight view of the ancient City of Refuge, off the kona (western) coast of Hawaii, largest of the mid-Pacific islands. The district, although a stronghold of native life, is readily accessible to visitors. As usual, Hawaii will be one of the favorite stopping places on this winter's cruises to the orient and around the world.

Please tell me something about the physical appearance of Lerwick, capital of the Shetland Islands.—G. J. R.

Like so many other European cities, Lerwick is divided into an old and a new town. The former, dating back about 350 years, consists of Commercial street, which forms the main business thoroughfare and is paved with flagstones throughout. It is narrow and crooked and was obviously evolved from an ancient footpath which followed the indentations of the original seashore. The new town has a number of wide, well laid out streets and handsome villas. Many of the buildings are made of native stone, giving the town a rather bleak appearance.

When will the Holland-America line's new ship be placed in service, and what will it be called?—F. S.

The liner is scheduled to make her maiden voyage in the spring of 1938. She will be named the Nieuw Amsterdam.

What was the "gloryhole" on old-time ocean liners?—M. Q.

It was the stewards' quarters, the designation dating back to the time when those quarters were little more than a dungeon. Nowadays the stewards have much better accommodations.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

JOIN a cruise and see the world! It is the one best way to travel. No other method can measure up to it for fun and for the opportunity of going everywhere and seeing everything at a minimum of worry and effort.

Webster called a cruise "a sailing to and fro, as for exploration or for pleasure." Add to his definition the thrill of exotic scenes, social contacts, varied recreations, ease, and relaxation, and you begin to understand why it is that each year more and more Americans are taking to the ocean for their holidays.

● This writer returned recently from the Raymond-Whitcomb cruise to western Europe aboard the S. S. Paris. We visited 24 ports in nine countries, made numerous trips inland, took in just about everything from Madeira to Norway, and did it in less than six weeks. By the ordinary means of travel it would have required several trips, or one trip of rather formidable length and repeated changes, to cover this territory. And there wouldn't have been half the enjoyment.

Previous cruises to the West Indies, the Caribbean, and South America had given us the idea that this is travel perfection. Now we are more firmly convinced than ever.

● There are those who prefer to go on their own, and to stand up against the discomforts of getting visas, crossing international borders, and standing in line for tickets, reservations, and whatnot. That may be all right for some, but this traveler prefers to let the other fellow shoulder the inconveniences.

On a cruise such as the one we took everything was arranged for in advance. Once we had got our passport and packed our duds, there was nothing to do but embark on the Paris and prepare for a tour without a care.

Even the threats of inflation and daily variations in the rate of exchange failed to trouble us. Payment of a lump sum at the start of the trip carried with it the guarantee of freedom from all financial bother. It made little difference to us whether the franc hit the top or the dollar hit the bottom.

● This winter the Empress of Britain, the Reliance, the Franconia, and the Stella Polaris are to take several thousand travelers on cruises around the world. In addition, all the leading steamship lines and travel agencies will have cruises to the West Indies, South America, Central America, the orient, and the Mediterranean. The season promises to be heavier than ever before. Already the reservations are pouring in.

We wish we were going to be one of the passengers. In the light of our experience, we can't imagine a better vacation.

Atkins Welcomed.

Leslie C. Atkins, the Anchor Line's new passenger manager for this territory, was welcomed to Chicago the other day at a cocktail party at the Knickerbocker hotel. The party was attended by a large crowd of steamship and travel agents and other well wishers.

These Islanders Fierce Looking, but Mild Acting

By Mason Warner.

GAVUTU, British Solomon Islands.—We sailed from Makambo at 7 a. m. and arrived at Gavutu at 7:30. The ship lay at the pier all day while copra was being taken on board and stores for the islanders were unloaded.

The Malaita is frankly a "copra boat," built especially for the Solomon Islands trade. The carrying of passengers is a side issue, designed for the accommodation of the planters and traders of the islands. She is only 312 feet long and forty-seven feet beam, equipped with an oil burning, 1,800 horse power Deisel engine that churns her along at twelve knots, storm or calm; a steady going ship with a crew of sixty-one, including a Scotch skipper and a Scotch engineer, both in the best Kipling tradition. The cabins are large, clean, and comfortable, and the food deserving of praise.

Frizzled Hair Dyed a Startling Red.

At Tulagi we took aboard eighty-four "cargo boys," natives ranging from 16 to 40 years, the majority in their 20s, but looking older. Many of them had the outstanding frizzled hair, popular in the Fiji Islands, and treated with lime and dyed a startling red. Wearing nothing above and little below the belt, they were a bit fierce and wild looking at first glance. The cargo boys proved a happy-go-lucky, shouting, chuckling crowd who went about their work with alacrity and no shirking. They were not large men, but were sturdily built, well muscled, and handled a 140 pound bag of copra with easy grace.

These boys stay on the ship until we reach Faisi, the last port of call in the Solomons. We leave them there and take on a crew of "Guinea boys" at Kieta, the first port of call in New Guinea. We pick them up again on our return trip at Faisi.

Not Allowed to Step Ashore.

Up until a short time ago the Solomon boys worked cargo for the entire cruise, going through to Rabaul and returning to Tulagi without change. But recently the islanders have been getting into so much trouble with the natives of New Guinea, leading to serious clashes and fights, that the New Guinea government protested against bringing foreign black boys into the territory. When put to work, however, the Guinea boys proved less intelligent and capable than the islanders, so a special dispensation was granted, permitting the Malaita to carry through ten boys who operate the winches and the launches, with the distinct understanding that no Solomon boy is ever to step ashore in New Guinea.

As an example of Solomon hospitality, I cite an incident at Gavutu. Capt. Charles Bignell placed his island schooner Valerie and its crew of four at the command of the Malaita's passengers and we went to visit the mission at Mboli Pass, fourteen miles away. It is a flourishing institution, under the direction of the Rev. E. A. Codd. The native women and children in the village looked neat and healthy, the clean babies particularly showing the advantages of modern medical care and nursing.

The village occupied low land on the beach and I asked the Rev. Mr. Codd if they were troubled with mosquitoes. "O, yes," he replied, "but everybody has more or less fever in the Solomons. I assure you it is not violent, and lasts only five or six weeks."

On the way back from Mboli Pass one of the native crew of the Valerie became pretty well acquainted with me. He was a savage looking fellow, with outstanding hair that gave his head the appearance of a thirty inch ball of fire. He had a limited English vocabulary, picked up while employed as a houseboy at Tulagi.

He was intensely interested in my movie camera, and I passed it to him for inspection. He pointed it, looked through the finder, and exclaimed in pleased astonishment:

"My word!"

Yes, just as if uttered in a London drawing room.

I showed him my fountain pen. "Charming," was his comment.

Next he wanted to examine my watch. It met his approval, for he declared it was "lovely."

He told me his name was Billy Josefa Honge, and that exhausted his command of English. So I attempted "pidgin" and asked:

"Billee, you belong mission?"

"Ah, no," was his reply. "Me belong wicked fellow. Me go to hell." It was said with the most cheerful resignation imaginable.

Capt. Bignell told me later that Billy could not see his way clear to pay 10 per cent of his earnings as tithes to the church.

The schedule of the Malaita on the up trip calls for stops at twenty-four ports, including Rabaul. On the return trip we will call at thirteen or fourteen ports, according to the quantity of copra awaiting shipment, but six of them will be return calls at ports made on the up trip.

A FANTASTIC FIGURE OF A PLUMED SERPENT

The weird-looking creature with the staring eyes and huge teeth is one of the figures carved on the Temple of Quetzalcoatl. The temple has been unearthed at San Juan Teotihuacan, about 25 miles from Mexico City, and not far from the gigantic Pyramids of the Sun and of the Moon. Quetzalcoatl, meaning "Feathered or Plumed Serpent," was the name of one of the most revered gods of ancient times.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

IN KEEPING with the Florida winter resort season, which in recent years has been starting earlier and extending over a longer period, at least two of the railroads operating out of Chicago will place their crack southbound trains in service this year three weeks ahead of the usual schedule.

J. V. Lanigan, passenger trafic manager of the Illinois Central, announced yesterday that the Floridan would start running Dec. 10. A similar announcement, with the same opening date, was made for the Florida Arrow by H. E. Newcomet, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad. Heretofore the service has not been available before Jan. 1.

The Pennsylvania also let it be known that its first "Off the Beaten Track" excursion into the heart of the autumn foliage in Indiana was so successful that another one would be held a week from today. The itinerary from Chicago will include Van, Monticello, Culver, and Plymouth.

Cliff Hastings, manager of the Oak Leaves Travel bureau in Oak Park, returned last week from a six weeks' trip to England and France. Due to the increasing volume of business, Mr. Hastings found it advisable to establish branch offices in London and Paris. The London bureau is now operating at 3 Holles street, and the Paris office at 24 Rue Canmartin.

With moose more plentiful than for several seasons, and with bear in such numbers as to constitute a menace to sheep and young cattle, hunters in the Metagama district of Ontario this year will reap rich rewards from their favorite sport, M. U. Bates, guide and hunter, said last week. Moose appear to be staying closer to the settlements than formerly, Mr. Bates related, and farmers in the district have already registered many complaints with the provincial authorities about depredations committed by bears.

"Madrid and the Spanish Tragedy" was discussed by Dudley Crafts Watson Wednesday afternoon in his series of weekly lectures at Old Heidelberg inn. When Dr. Watson was in Spain two years ago he talked with Primo de Rivera, the Spanish dictator, on several occasions and on his return to this country predicted the catastrophe which now grips Spain. Dr. Watson's second talk of the afternoon was in a lighter vein, "Smorgasbord to Coffee at Copenhagen."

A five day train journey across India will be but one of the travel variations for those globe trotters who sail from New York next Jan. 9 aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain. The trip will be from Bombay to Sanchi Tope, Delhi, Agra and the Taj Mahal, and Fatephur Sikri.

While business generally will respong to the decree reëstablishing the lira at its 1927 level of 19 to the dollar, the most marked effect will show in greatly increased travel to Italy, in the opinion of Aroldo Palanca, general manager of the Italian Line for the United States and Canada. Since 1927 the traveler in Italy has not felt the benefit of currency exchanges to the extent now existing, as the dollar purchases nearly 50 per cent more in the Italian market, which by governmental decree must remain constant. The cost of vacationing in Italy has now been cut virtually in half.

Temporarily changing from crossings to cruises, the Europa of the North German Lloyd and the New York of the Hamburg-American Line have been scheduled to make pleasure voyages at New Year's time, the former a 5 day trip to Nassau and Bermuda, and the latter for four days of cruising with a call at Bermuda. The Europa will leave New York Dec. 29, arrive at Bermuda on Dec. 31, and then proceed to Nassau, where she is due on Jan. 2. The ship will return Monday morning, Jan. 4. Sailing from New York on Dec. 31, the New York will visit Bermuda on Jan. 2, and return by noon Monday, Jan. 4.

HAPPY, CONTENTED GERMANY.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—To the Travel Editor: Recently I returned from a trip to Europe, including a stay in Silesia. That is a charming part of Germany. I found that tourists are beginning to leave the beaten track and are going to eastern Germany.

I visited a number of the spas and spent several days in Hirschberg and the Riesengebirge, the health resorts of Kudowa, Altheide, Reinerz, Landeck, and Salzbrunn. Each place had its individual charm and special health restoring qualities, radio-active thermal springs, mineral peat baths, and other curative baths and treatments.

I was especially delighted with Germany and enjoyed the hearty welcome and hospitality extended to me by the people of that country. Wherever I went everybody was anxious and eager to show me everything of interest. In the course of my six months' tour I visited more than sixty cities. I was greatly impressed with the cleanliness and order and discipline. The people were contented and happy. In all the time I was in Germany I did not see a single beggar. Everybody is fed, clothed, and sheltered, regardless of race, religion, or political views.

ALMA VORDISCH.

ALONE ON THE LOOKOUT.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—To the Travel Editor: I have read "The Voice of the Traveler" since its beginning, and find it not only interesting, but informative and educational as well. Congratulations, and thank you for some very pleasant Sunday reading.

Now, I am not a traveler in the true sense of the word, having never been outside of this country, and to only a few of the highspots of America, but I have been to Mount McGregor, in New York state, where Gen. U. S. Grant spent the last two months of his life, and the sight impressed me as thrilling and magnificent. Never have I read of any one else having been there; so I am wondering if I am the only one among your contributors to feel so elated over the scene from "The Lookout."

When Chicago Was Young

The Elegant Eighties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Dec. 18, 1887.

DEAR JULIA: Weren't you interested in the accounts of Whittier's 80th birthday celebration? The day seems to have been observed not only in New England, but in many other parts of the country. An excellent thing to do, I think. Soldiers and statesmen have had more honor than the literary man, and it's time the poets were noticed a bit.

I suppose the critics wouldn't believe that Whittier is in the front rank as a poet, but I always have loved everything he wrote. Even if "Maud Muller" isn't a great poem, it does draw an accurate and memorable picture of simple country life in New England. And then there's "Snow Bound." Sitting by the library fire, Will and I always like to read that poem, whenever there's a heavy fall of snow. We recall, at such times, how it impressed us when we first read it in 1866, the year it came out. I have read that it brought Whittier $10,000, almost the first real money he had earned with his pen. He had given much of his time to writing for the anti-slavery cause, before and during the war and for this, of course, he received little pay. Not only that, his espousal of an unpopular cause kept him from being invited to contribute to the magazines for which other poets were writing.

His songs were mainly of the oppressed and the humble until after the slaves were freed. I think often he must have been tempted to write on more popular themes, but his Quaker blood kept him true to his purpose. It is good to see him so honored and beloved now.

What has been the romance of his life . . . this bachelor poet? Don't you think he was dreaming of a love that died ere it blossomed when he wrote:

Ah, well, for us all some sweet hope lies
Deeply buried from human eyes,
And in the hereafter angels may
Roll the stone from the grave away?

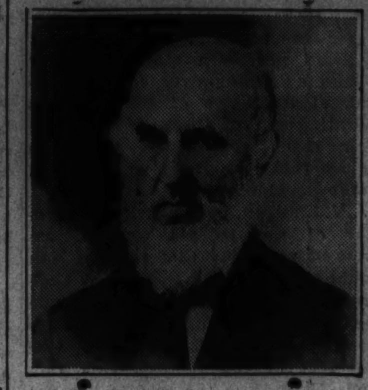
What is your favorite quotation from Whittier? I have just put this question to Will, who replies: "All of 'Snow Bound,'" and he compares the description of the family as it sat by the harth to the paintings of the Dutch artists, so clearly does each figure stand out. When I press him for a line or two from "Snow Bound," he says:

Life is ever lord of death
And love can never lose its own.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes' tribute to the Quaker poet in the Boston Advertiser's special Whittier edition is touching, isn't it?

Lonely, how lonely, is the snowy peak
Thy feet have reached and mine have climbed so near!
Close on thy footsteps, mid the landscape drear,
I stretch my hand thine answering grasp to seek,
Warm with the love no rippling rimes can speak.

I can't bear to think that Dr. Holmes is climbing, too, the snowy peak attained by Whittier. The autocrat . . . so witty, as well as so wise . . . his writing shows a touch of melancholy now. It reminds us that age and death come to us all. May we be as ready for the change as are these two great poets of America, both of whom have done so much to raise our thoughts and feelings to higher levels!



John Greenleaf Whittier, the Quaker poet.

Almost time to say "Merry Christmas." I have sent your little gift and hope it will reach you safely. My presents this year were bought, for the most part, at a bazar held at the home of the H. H. Porters on Erie street. A number of society girls arranged it . . . Grace and Fannie Farwell, Harriet Isham, Katherine Porter, the Misses Corwith and Harriet Hammond. The proceeds, about $2,000, were given to the Home for Self-Supporting Women, a worthy charity. Now, with much love, I am, yours as ever.

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Whittier lived five years after the date of Martha's letter [he died in 1892], Oliver Wendell Holmes surviving him by two years. Both attained the age of 85, for Holmes was two years younger than the Quaker poet. What is your favorite quotation from Whittier?

A delightful day was spent last week with the Woman's club of Lincoln, Ill., the only town named for Abraham Lincoln during his lifetime.

A letter from Richard Fischer, Chicago lawyer, who, in college days, paid some of his expenses by playing in Johnny Hand's orchestra, is so interesting we must quote a part of it:

"I played in his orchestra at the homes of the Armours, Swifts, Marshall Fields, and others on the social roster. No one ever called him 'Mr. Hand.' It was 'Johnny' everywhere he went. He himself was not a really great musician, but he had a marvelous personality and a faculty for surrounding himself with the best talent available. His instrument was the violoncello, upon which he was by no means a great performer. If the orchestra was sufficiently large to justify it, he wielded the baton, but even then, he often turned over the 'stick' to one of his musicians and mingled with the guests, in those days a somewhat unorthodox performance which hardly would have been tolerated by any one else.

"Two sons of Johnny Hand are actively engaged in the profession of music. Armin [Col. Hand] is leader of the American Legion band, winners in many a contest, and Arthur is a violinist in the Chicago Symphony orchestra."

Airplane Takes Part in Ancient English Custom

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON Few people, as a nation, cling to tradition as do the English, but now and then tradition is altered to suit modern needs.

Such was the case recently when Hoddesdon urban district council "beat its bounds" in accordance with the ancient custom of showing the world just where their authority begins and ends. This council has absorbed some of its neighbors and in the ceremony of beating its new and enlarged bounds, air, land, and water travel was used to traverse the 13½ miles of boundary.

By land, members of the council in squads, armed with long willow whips, beat the boundary for 8¼ miles from Great Amwell, the favorite haunt of Izaak Walton, along the old Roman road and through the forest to the River Lea. At this point the water parties in row boats beat the banks of that tortuous waterway until they joined the land party. It took a bit of managing, and in order to make the undertaking comply with all traditional and legal requirements under the local government act, the surveyor for the council flew in an airplane low over the entire course, directing the parties by signals.

Mrs. F. M. Miller Hostess to Opera Box Committee

THIS week's meeting of the opera box committee of the Chicago City Opera company will be held at the residence of Mrs. Franklin M. Miller, 1500 Lake Shore drive, instead of at Harold F. McCormick's Rush street home because of his illness. The meetings are on Wednesday afternoon. Last week Mrs. Edmund J. Doering entertained the members of the committee in her handsome Astor street house. Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis presided and Miss Anna Fitzu and Mrs. Roy Flannery poured tea and coffee following the meeting. Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick served spiced wine. Miss Fitzu spoke that afternoon and 15 year old Betty Jayness sang.

British Married Officers Move to Modern Quarters

LONDON A sign which read, "All Flats Let," seen recently, brought regret. Upon inquiry one learned that they were the St. John's wood barracks, or married quarters of his majesty's forces.

It seems the war office has been taking a leaf from the notebook of a civilian architect. These flats are streamlined and modern to the last button. Jubilee house, it's called, and there is nothing left for which a soldier's wife could ask. Built-in wardrobes, built-in glass fronted "dressers" [being a dining room fixture], the best design of bathtub, basin, gas stove with independent hot water coming from the living room fire, balconies, and rubbish chutes, doing away with the eternal "dustbin." All the furniture is provided, as well as gas, light, and fuel. In contrast to the dreary quarters seen at Aldershot and other places, the new "married quarters" make a soldier's wife's life look pretty happy. This is the first unit of several the government intends to build.

At the time of their birth, and for some time afterward, they were bathed only with Olive Oil. Because science has found nothing so gentle, nothing so soothing for delicate skin as Olive Oil!

AND EVER SINCE, ONLY PALMOLIVE

Then came the time for soap and water baths. And how carefully the specialists in charge selected a soap gentle enough for the Quins' unusually sensitive skin. They selected Palmolive . . . the gentle soap made with Olive Oil. Out of all the soaps available, Palmolive was chosen exclusively for the Quins' daily baths.

WHAT A LESSON FOR EVERY MOTHER . . . FOR EVERY WOMAN!

Mother! Should that precious baby of yours, or any of your children, be bathed with any soap less gentle, less soothing than the one chosen for the tender skin of the little Dionnes?

And you too, Lovely Lady . . . you who want to keep your complexion soft, smooth, alluring through the years! Why not give your skin the matchless beauty care that only Palmolive's secret blend of Olive and Palm Oils can give? Why not use this gentle Palmolive Soap exclusively for your own face and bath!

READ WHAT DR. DAFOE SAYS:

"At the time of the birth of the Dionne Quintuplets, and for some time afterward, they were bathed in Olive Oil . . . When the time arrived for soap and water baths, we selected Palmolive Soap exclusively for daily use in bathing these famous babies."

They can do more FOR YOUR SKIN

If your skin seems "Acid"

DON'T be discouraged—here's help for you! Remember how Milk of Magnesia helps an internal acid condition. Just so these Milk of Magnesia Creams act on the external fatty acid accumulations on the skin, helping to refine the texture and to correct unsightly faults.

MILK of Magnesia has long been valued by skin specialists for its refining, beautifying action on the skin. But only now has a way been perfected to hold this ingredient on the skin long enough to be truly beneficial—in two remarkable new-type face creams developed by the Phillips Company, original makers of the famous Milk of Magnesia.

PHILLIPS'
Milk of Magnesia TEXTURE CREAM

The very look and feel of this lovely greaseless cream give promise of what it will do for your skin! Just as Milk of Magnesia helps an internal acid condition, so, in this cream, it acts on the external fatty acids on the skin which may often be associated with loss of fine, firm texture and such blemishes as coarseness, enlarged pores, oily shine, blackheads, and rough, scaly skin. Try it; see how it works to beautify your skin.

Soothes, protects. It gives a new kind of protection against the mixture of dirt and natural oils which furnishes a fertile soil for bacteria, and helps to preserve a firm tone and fine texture.

A New-Type Foundation. Here's a delightful new experience for you! Phillips' Texture Cream preserves that freshly-powdered look for hours because the Milk of Magnesia prepares the skin properly—softening, smoothing away roughness, correcting oiliness so that it takes make-up evenly and holds it longer.

PHILLIPS'
Milk of Magnesia CLEANSING CREAM

Try this Milk of Magnesia Cleansing Cream just once and it will be your cleansing cream always! The milk of magnesia gives it an ability to cleanse far beyond that of ordinary creams because it not only loosens and absorbs the surface dirt and make-up but neutralizes the fatty acid accumulations. Liquefies instantly and wipes off easily. Leaves your skin really clear, and so soft and supple!

EYESTRAIN thrives on poor lighting! It is a real and dangerous foe of childhood. It saps nervous energy and often causes physical upsets and defective vision. It is largely responsible for the fact that one out of every five children of school age, on an average, has something wrong with his eyes. By college age, two out of five are affected.

Follow these sight-saving rules: Have your children's eyes examined regularly by a competent eyesight specialist. Have your home lighting checked by your lighting company. When your children read or study, be sure that they do so in plenty of good light . . . such as the light provided by newly developed I. E. S. Better Sight Lamps.

Be careful about the kind of bulbs you buy. Inferior bulbs often waste as much as 30 per cent of the electricity they use.

In fairness to your children's eyes, and your own, insist on bulbs made by General Electric. They don't waste electricity, and they STAY BRIGHTER LONGER than inferior bulbs. G-E makes 480 tests and inspections during manufacture to guard against the smallest imperfections—to safeguard your eyes and your pocketbook.

Keep plenty of these good bulbs on hand . . . especially the larger, sight-saving sizes. Get a fresh supply from your dealer tomorrow . . . and look carefully for the mark GE on the end of each bulb.

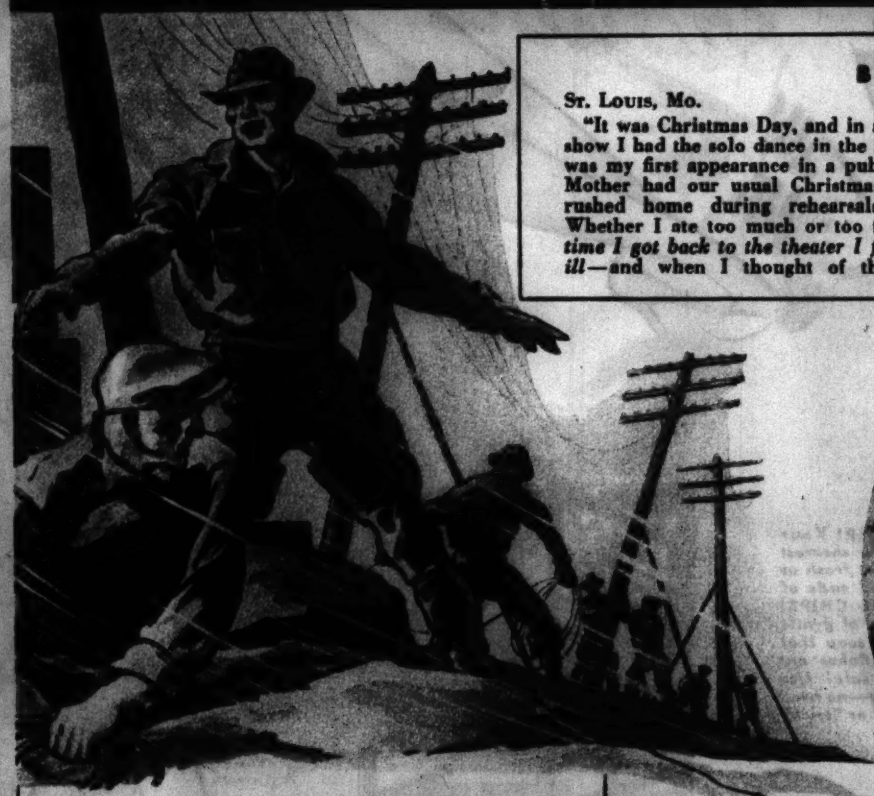
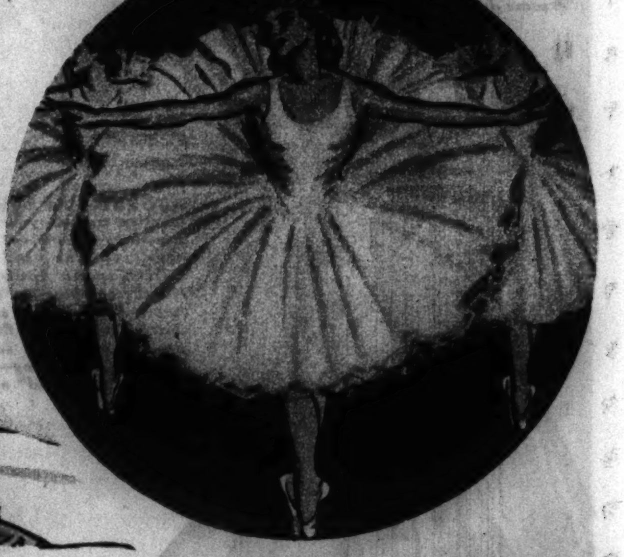
"WE KNOW ENO"

BALLET DANCER

St. Louis, Mo.
"It was Christmas Day, and in a new stage show I had the solo dance in the ballet. This was my first appearance in a public theater. Mother had our usual Christmas dinner. I rushed home during rehearsals and ate. Whether I ate too much or too fast, by the time I got back to the theater I felt terribly ill—and when I thought of that difficult dance with its fast turns and bends, I nearly died. I had an hour and a half before my dance, and felt worse every minute. Then I remembered hearing of Eno and how quickly it acted. I sent to the corner drug store for a bottle and took it as directed. It worked! By the time I got my cue, I felt grand, and danced as I never did before."—E. R.*





ENGINEER IN FLOOD

Pittsburgh, Pa.
"Eno helped me carry on during the Pittsburgh flood. During the hectic period men worked fifteen to twenty hours at a stretch, trying to keep telephone facilities in operation. The irregular regime and interruption of all natural habits were having their effect on my body. My head and back ached, my throat was raw and hoarse, each step became an effort. Then I remembered former benefits I had received from Eno. I stumbled to a drug store, purchased a bottle of Eno, took a large dose, and stretched out for a few hours' sleep. When I awoke I was my old self—aches gone, head clear, mind active—able to do my share."
—C. A. H.*

A great many of the letters we receive, from people who can gratefully say "We know Eno," are not as thrilling as the true cases shown above, but they are just as sincere. The bulk of our "We know Eno" mail is from simple, every-day folk who tell simple stories such as you might tell—of how this gentle laxative with the pleasant taste has helped in the every-day distress of modern living.

Do you know Eno? It fizzes fast. It tastes good. Eno takes prompt, direct action against the cause of the trouble and forms no bad habits. It is ideal to help Nature keep your intestinal tract clear of clogging wastes.

Know Eno! Your nearest druggist has it in three convenient sizes, all economical to use. 25c, 60c, $1.20—or you can get it at the soda fountain for 10c a glass.
